Preacher Scientist.

DR. IRWIN A. MOON

Of Moody Bible Institute extension staff, seen above, in one of his "Sermons from Science" demonstrations, is producer of the sound-color film, "The God of Creation," to be shown at 8 p.m. Friday, October 11th, at the Essex Baptist Church.

Sound Motion Pictures at Baptist Church.

Vivid color scheme scenes from astronomy and natural science are featured in "The God of Creation," sound motion picture to be shown at 8 p.m. on Friday, October 11th, at the Essex Baptist Church.

Produced in the West Coast laboratory of Moody Bible Institute, by Dr. Irwin A. Moon, Sc.D., "The God of Creation" is the second in a series of evangelistic films. The first film by Dr. Moon, "They Live Forever," had a large showing in all parts of the country.

In the opening section of "The God of Creation," the audience takes a trip to the stars by means of solar photographs taken through the giant 100-inch telescope of Mt. Wilson Observatory in Southern California, and views complex gyrations of our own solar system.

Lapse-time photography is utilized to demonstrate the beauties of natural science. The illusion of flower buds developing into full-blown blossoms in a few seconds is created through this time-compressing photo technique. The metamorphosis of a caterpillar through the various stages from worm to butterfly, and pollination of flowers are seen on the screen in full color.

Believed to be the first of their kind are the natural-color pictures of photosynthesis, the mysterious food-manufacturing process resulting from the action of sunlight on green leaves.

Through photomicroscopy the audience peers into the microscopic world of a drop of water and observes the complexity of tiny organisms, enlarged more than a million times.

—The many friends in town of the J. C. Livesey family, now living in Kingsville, will be sorry to learn that their daughter, Miss Ruth Livesey, of Toronto, recently suffered a broken back when thrown from a horse she was riding. She will be in a cast for some months.

Some of them have been away for five years or more. Many have won distinction. All have acquitted themselves with honour. All are welcome back.

In your bank these men find appreciation, security and opportunity for advancement. Our plans for them express our sincere desire that, in banking service, they may find ample scope to make their further contribution to this nation's security.

How Much Water Does a Cow Need?

Veterinary authorities state that for the highest production of milk the importance of a continuous supply of drinking water for the cows cannot be over-estimated. Experiments in Canada, United States, Britain and other countries have shown that milk production was higher from cattle with water available to them throughout the day than from cattle which had access to water only once or twice a day.

It is estimated that the average cow needs from 19 to 25 gallons of water per day. High producing cattle, such as those producing, say, 10 gallons of milk per day, may consume up to 30 gallons of water per day. Where dry feed, such as hay or chaff and concentrates, is being fed, the cows would take 10 to 15 gallons of water as such. However, where the cows are on pasture and quantities up to 130 pounds are known to be eaten, water would be taken in smaller amounts. One hundred and thirty pounds of pasture would probably contain about nine or ten gallons of water. If silage were fed, 50 pounds of that material would probably contain about 3½ gallons of water.

BRIGHTER TOMORROWS FOR YOU AND YOURS

THEIR ROAD TO Enjoyment

Two million or more motorists from the States visit us each year... thousands of them just for the beauty of our Ontario countryside. Let's see to it that our hospitality matches the perfection of our lakes and hills.

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS
... it's good business!

Ontario profits almost as much from tourist business as from gold mining. It's up to us to keep this business growing.

Every tourist dollar is shared this way:
1. Hotels; 2. Stores;
3. Restaurants;
4. Taxes, etc.;
5. Amusements;
6. Garages.

Judgment by Fire.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.
In the year 1945 fire destroyed the lives of 391 persons in Canada, desolated 48,000 acres of almost priceless forests that it will take fifty to 150 years to restore, and set a figure of civilian fire loss just short of $42,000,000. That is a considerable price to pay for carelessness.

Fires do sometimes occur without any human intervention, through lightning or heat or other causes of spontaneous combustion. But it is a fact established by competent surveys that 80 per cent of all the fires are due to human folly or carelessness.

Last year there were 966 forest fires in Ontario that reached sizable proportions. Campers and smokers started 520 of them, and settlers and logging operations accounted for another 76. That means that two-thirds of the total loss definitely was attributable to human agencies and human carelessness.

Each year 6,000 forest fires eat into Canada's seemingly inexhaustible forest resources, consuming 500,000,000 cubic feet of standing timber and wasting an estimated average of $6,000,000. So, year by year, what seemed inexhaustible becomes exhausted.

It is difficult to understand public indifference in the face of such a record. It is still more difficult to understand that complacency when it has to do with mounting civilian fire losses. Last year these losses totaled $41,922,790—almost double the civilian fire loss of 1940.

Part of our complacency probably springs from the mistaken conception that the insurance companies pay the loss and that nobody is too much out of pocket since we have paid for it anyway. That is tantamount to saying that having bought life insurance, we might as well die. No one in sober earnest would think of defending either position. But even if we accept such a basis of thinking, it would still be only partially true, for, of the forty-odd-million-dollar loss, one quarter, or over $10,000,000 was not covered by one cent of insurance. The whole burden fell on the individual sufferer or some unprotected company.

Even had it all been covered, it would still represent a reckless loss that is charged against all of us whether careless or careful. Insurance rates are based on risk experience. The more fires, the more you and I, who may be completely careful, have to pay because of someone who isn't.

But what the average citizen often fails to realize is that even in insured

People Are Asking?

Q.—Do curers and primers coming from the southern United States receive the same rations as we do per month? Would they receive five sugar coupons for September the same as we do?

A.—Temporary residents of Canada receive temporary ration cards containing two sugar coupons, three butter coupons and four meat coupons for each 30 day period. These are the same rations as Canadian residents receive. Temporary residents would not get the five sugar coupons granted in September.

Q.—We have never rented our home but we are thinking of doing so. Would you please let us know what rent we could charge?

A.—In renting your house for the first time you make an application to the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. You will be given a form to complete and a rental appraiser will inspect the property and fix the ceiling rental.

Q.—What is the ceiling price on California dried dates?

A.—California dried dates were recently removed from price regulations because they are considered a luxury item.

Q.—When do the next group of ration coupons expire?

A.—On October 31st butter R11 to R21 and B26 and meat Q1 to Q4 and M51 to M 55 will expire.

Q.—Will you please tell what vegetables have ceiling prices?

A.—We would presume you mean domestic vegetables. Those still remaining under the ceiling are beets, carrots, onions and potatoes. If you refer to imported items kindly send in particulars.

properties the loss is paid in money, not in restored goods, and these are often irreplaceable. Their needless loss is adding every day to the cost of our daily living. And this is approximately the way these stupidly wasteful losses occur. The match or cigarette tossed carelessly away leaves a red trail that costs an annual total of $12,500,000. Defective home equipment or the careless use of sound equipment runs to $20,500,000. Children who are allowed to play with matches or who find them left within their reach make fires that cost $2,500,000. The economical clothes cleaner or the impatient kerosene sets us a handicap of $3,500,000. Sparks on our wood-shingled roof calls for a $3,000,000 loss.

Valuable Tests in Swine Feed Glass Produced Without Soda Ash.

Among the many important lines of work carried out by the Animal Husbandry Division, Experimental Station of Agriculture, is the distribution of breeding stock to improve the livestock on Canadian farms and at the same time, assist in advancing scientific research. Recently a considerable number of pigs was used in the testing of their dams in the Advanced Registry Policy for Swine, and at another time 16 of the Division's pigs were used in a cooperative project with the Chemistry Division, Science Service, in determining the digestibility of various swine feeds. In addition, pigs were supplied to the Animal Diseases Research Institute, Dominion Department of Agriculture, for experimental purposes.

In another experiment with feeder pigs, the results have been made known on the relative value of protein supplements of animal and vegetable origin in the feeding of growing and finishing pigs. Protein-mineral supplements containing 65, 50, 35, and 20 per cent animal protein feeds (that is, tankage and fishmeal) were compared. The remainder of each supplement was made up by a feed of vegetable origin—linseed meal. The initial results indicated practically no difference between lots in the rate of gain, feed economy, or carcass quality.

In the experiment, as repeated in the following year, the results in a general way confirmed those of the previous test. There was a slight advantage in the rate of gain and carcass quality for those pigs fed the higher percentage of animal protein, while feed economy was best in the lot where 50 per cent and 35 per cent of the protein supplement was from an animal source. The results of the two per cent of protein-mineral supplement used in hog feeding could be made up from a vegetable source such as lin-

Contrary to reports in the weekly financial press, there is available a Canadian substitute for soda ash. In the face of the closing down of most of Canada's glass plants because of the soda ash strike at Amherstburg, the Industrial Glass Works Co., Ltd., of Montreal, has been uninterrupted production.

When it became known that this plant had not shut down because of the lack of soda ash, several executives of other glass companies and one or two chemistry professors of Canadian Universities expressed doubt as to whether or not glass could be produced without the use of soda ash. To set these doubts at rest, once and for all, Alexis Nihon, President of Industrial Glass Works Co., Ltd., Montreal, invited Charles Hazen, M.Sc., vice-president and manager of the Milton Hersey Co., Ltd., of Montreal, one of Canada's leading industrial chemical engineering firms, to visit the plant and witness the production of glass without the use of soda ash. After his visit, Mr. Hazen issued the following certificate:

"This is to certify that I have today inspected the plant of the Industrial Glass Works Co., Ltd., at St. Laurent, Montreal; that I have examined the batch room and the raw materials in store; that I am familiar with the batch mix used in making window glass at this plant.

There was no soda ash in the plant and none was being used in manufacturing the glass under production. Window glass was being made without soda ash."

seed oilmeal, the remainder being tankage and fishmeal, without lowering the feeding value of the supplement or seriously influencing the rate of gain or the quality of the carcass produced.

BOTTLE SHORTAGE SERIOUS

MAY CURTAIL BEVERAGE PRODUCTION SAY BOTTLERS

Immediate Return of Empties Urgently Needed

Right now there is a very serious shortage of bottles... particularly beverage bottles. Unless this bottle shortage is made up immediately, it may be necessary to cut down the production of the beverages you need and which come only in bottles. This is an urgent appeal to you to gather up your empty bottles and return them without delay.

Start a bottle round-up in your home today. Gather up the empty bottles in your kitchen—your pantry—your store room—your shed—your cellar. Sort them out and return them at once, or call the regular pick-up service. Your help is important... the need is urgent. Please gather up and return ALL empty bottles today or tomorrow at the latest.

Why a Bottle Shortage?

Canadian glass factories normally produce MILLIONS of bottles every month. The vital ingredient in bottle making is soda ash. Since July 12th the only big Canadian soda ash factory has been strike-bound. Since then the stock of soda ash has been used up... bottle factories are closed down... bottles are not being made today. Beverage bottlers and all producers of bottled liquids must have your bottles back to keep going. Bottling plants will close down too... if your empties are not returned.

Win One Group Enjoys Talk.

Mrs. Clifford Stockwell welcomed the members of the Win One Auxiliary for their autumn thank-offering meeting. Mrs. J. T. Flemming, of Kingsville, guest speaker, introduced by Mrs. H. McQuat, took for her theme, "I tell thee, Charles, we are here under God to do something and not to please ourselves."

"Paul," the speaker said, "puts this in an equally arresting, though not so dramatic way when he urges us to be co-workers with God. God has a plan for your life and a plan for mine. And He cannot carry out His plan for the world unless we co-operate."

Mrs. Lawrence Johnston conducted the meeting, and was assisted in the devotional period by Mrs. Clifford Stockwell, who read the Bible lesson. Mrs. Raymond Griffin presented the treasurer's report and Mrs. McQuat spoke briefly on the "Stewardship of Time."

The new study book, "India at the Threshold," by Dr. Winifred Bryce, a United Church missionary in Central India, was introduced by Mrs. Stanley R. Johnston, who also conducted a quiz on India and called attention to a display of Indian fine arts on view.

Mrs. Lloyd Griffin, Rear Road North, will be hostess at the November meeting.

Mrs. Lawrence Johnston and Mrs. Robert Birch were conveners and assisted the hostess in serving refreshments.

Ruthven Red Cross Disbands.

Disbanding of the Ruthven Red Cross Society was unanimously decided at the special meeting of the group held Thursday of last week in the I. O. O. F. lodge rooms with the executive in charge and the president Mrs. Roy Wigle, directing the business session.

The sum of $31.20, part of the balance on hand, will be sent to Red Cross headquarters in Toronto, and the group will be asked for instructions as to the disposal of the remaining $162.40 and the Ruthven Red Cross charter.

The society was organized the first year of the war with Mrs. C. H. Fuller as honorary president and Mrs. Albert Bruner as acting president. She was followed by Mrs. Wigle. Other officers who have been in charge ever since the formation of the group are as follows: Secretary, Mrs. Alvin Bunn; treasurer, Mrs. Marshall Wigle; purchasing convener, Mrs. Meta Wigle; knitting convener, Mrs. Edna Wilson; quilting convener, Mrs. Angus McCharles and Mrs. Clifford Fox. The late Miss Mabel Burley and the late Mrs. Edith Malott were conveners of cutting and sewing. Mrs. Alvin Bunn and Mrs. Hazel Smith were in charge of packing and shipping.

Mention was made of the "Olinda Zippers," a branch of the society which did a great deal of quilting and knitting.

Mrs. Bunn read the correspondence which had accumulated since the last meeting.

Gosfield North Council.

Monday, October 7th. Regular meeting of Council, with all members present.

Minutes of last regular meeting, also special meeting of September 16th, read and adopted, on motion of Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Tully.

The following communications were read: Department of Municipal Affairs, re nominations and elections.

Notice from Clerk of the Peace re selection of jurors for 1947.

From Gosfield South Township re Provincial aid on Centre branch drain. Ontario Municipal Board, giving approval of Bylaw 277 for repair of the W. T. L. drain.

Department of Highways, re gasoline tax when tractors are used on highways.

Department of Public Welfare, re winter fuel to Mother's Allowance cases.

Court of Revision on Bylaws 280 and 281 for repair of the North Townline drains. All members were duly sworn and Court opened.

The Clerk reported an appeal from Veit Brown, who was present, and supported his appeal. The Court was of the opinion that the assessment was fair, and on motion of Mr. Goodburn and Mr. Ash, the appeal was dismissed.

There were no appeals from the east and under Bylaw 281.

Moved by Mr. Tully, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, that the assessments on drainage Bylaws 280 and 281 be confirmed, and Court of Revision be closed.—Car.

The Clerk reported receiving from Gosfield South a copy of the report for repair of the Hoese drain. All ratemakers had been notified that the report would be read at this meeting.

The report was read. John Merritt, commenting on the report, said that all his land was tiled into No. 5 drain. He only had 32 acres south of the No. 5 drain. There was no ditch at the south end of his land on the north side of the road. He was satisfied to be assessed some for benefit, but could not see why he should be assessed for outlet when he did not, and could not, use said drain for outlet. The 200 acres east of his was about in the same situation. After discussion it was moved by Mr. Tully, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, that Gosfield South Township be notified that unless they will agree to some reduction on the assessment on Gosfield North lands they will be obliged to appeal to the referee.—Car.

Complaint was made that the time had expired for completing the Goodburn award and there was a portion in the middle not completed.

Moved by the Reeve, seconded by Mr. Goodburn, that the Clerk notify the Engineer to have the unfinished portion of the Goodburn Award completed without delay.—Car.

The Reeve said the Legion Branch No. 376, at Cottom, had requested a meeting with the Council, and he was calling a special meeting on Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock, for that purpose, and requested all members be present.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Goodburn, that the accounts, as presented, be approved, and paid.—Car.

MATCH SINCE 1941

Match at Port Albert this morning, using horses. The first aim. In addition, the Salada of concealment should be used and destroyed by burning. The area should be burned before winter sets in. The area at once remove potential which otherwise will emerge to threaten the new crop. Where possible, fall plowing should be done. Dead and dying vegetation should be raked up and burned. Stand in nearby wastelands should be cut down and destroyed or, better, the whole area should be burned under supervision, so that the fire not get beyond control. Cocos should be scraped from fences, build and shrubbery and egg-masses of insects where present cut from trees and bushes destroyed. In other words, complete clean up campaign should be carefully planned and carried out around every garden. October is suitable month for such work.

Plan Now for 1947.

The end of harvest is a profitable time to consider the past year's operations, and prepare a tentative plan for the year to come. Why was the clover thicker, the oats plumper or the cows more content in some fields than in others? Was it just an accident, the result of weather conditions or was the soil of some fields more abundantly supplied than others with organic matter, lime and mineral plant foods?

These questions can best be answered by having the soil tested. This is generally done free of charge by agricultural colleges or some fertilizer companies. However, care must be exercised to make sure that the samples are truly representative of the areas. In order that the job be done accurately, it is wise to first write to the soil testing laboratory for sampling instructions.

Early fall or a few weeks after the crop has been harvested, is the best time to sample fields, according to G. R. Snyder, of Canadian Industries Limited. Chemical and biological activities are still taking place at very nearly the same rate as when the crop was growing. The soil is neither too wet nor too dry for accurate mixing. This need for early action is especially necessary when one is considering the application of lime, or the fall fertilizing of pasture fields. Lime can be applied more conveniently in September and early October, when the weather is dry and the ground firm enough to permit trucking the lime direct to the field.

While pastures can be fertilized in the spring, most experts now favour the fall treatment. Between late September and mid-October is the period most favoured in Eastern Canada. Extra benefits are less winter killing and earlier, stronger spring growth. Since cows require quality as well as quantity for highest production, the treatment should be at a rate heavy enough to furnish ample minerals for both increased yield and a higher mineral content of the herbage.

Political Weatherman? External Affairs, Canada's position among the United Nations, the question of whether Russia is or is not an aggressive menace to world peace continues to be the main topic of political discussion in Ottawa circles. Arguments and discussions on domestic issues takes a second place, but in this sphere the prophets of all political persuasions are anxiously watching next Monday's two federal by-elections and discussing possible effects. What are the issues? How will the results effect the political parties involved? To what degree do the results indicate the trend of public opinion in Canada?

Curiously it is noted that the Social Credit Party which won the recent by-election in Pontiac, Quebec is not contesting either Parkdale in Toronto or Portage La Prairie in Manitoba. This is given as evidence that even that party does not think that its win in Pontiac indicates a national trend to Social Credit policies.

Toronto, Ontario. In Parkdale, the main fight is admitted to be between the Progressive-Conservative candidate, Alderman Timmins in Toronto and Liberal candidate, Col. Hunter, a young veteran of the last war, with the Liberals claiming an even chance to win. The C.C.F. and Social Credit candidates are not considered serious contenders even by their own party supporters. The issues here are not clear and much of the campaign is by house to house canvas, a little news of the campaign has reached the big Toronto daily papers. Milk prices have been injected into the campaign by the Labor-Progressive candidate's application for a court order to prevent the three cent increase in milk prices until after an Ontario royal commission had inquired into all aspects of production and distribution of milk. The C.C.F. party also sought to capitalize on the rise of milk prices and David Lewis, the national secretary, claiming that it "permitted producers and distributors to squeeze the last cent out of the consumer." Liberal and Conservative candidates are aggressively discussing the value of price controls, the government's labour policies and the re-establishment of veterans. The high volume of employment is stressed by Liberal campaigners to show that Liberal policies are more effective than the de-central policies that were followed after the World War I.

Portage La Prairie, Man. The issues appear more clearly defined in the Portage campaign where the Conservatives are also a strong contender but here the C.C.F. is also a strong contender but here the C.C.F. is also given a chance and the odds slightly in favour of the Liberal candidate, Jaffray Wood, a farmer, who for some years has been leader in farmer organizations. The Progressive-Conservative has a lawyer, C. C. Miller, K.C., and the C.C.F. with a farmer, Sydney Coulter. The Conservative campaign is aimed against the government's price control policy and against the wheat and other farm produce agreements made with Great Britain, with John Bracken leading the campaign against the government. The leadership in the campaign for the Liberal candidate is taken by Hon. Mr. Gagner, Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Mr. Glen, Manitoba's cabinet minister and federal Liberal members Maybank, Weir and Winkler. Hon. Mr. Hiley, the Minister of Finance, is making two speeches in favour of Mr. Wood. The C.C.F. campaign is highlighted by an address from Mr. Coldwell, the National leader, and Mr. Douglas, premier of Saskatchewan. The Liberal Leader from Saskatchewan is also taking part in the constituency where he was born. The C.C.F. party support the Liberal policies on sales to Britain and rest their campaign on their old cry that both old parties are the tools of Big Business — predatory and corrupt.

A National Effect? What effect on the government if it loses the by-elections? The Progressive Conservatives make the claim in Portage that, if the government loses it will eventually, perhaps soon, indicate that the Conservatives will take over the government. Against this it is argued that the government is sure of a majority in the House of at least 18 on any want-of-confidence motion. It is also argued that, although the last Gallup poll shows the Liberal strength as being the same as in the general election of 1945, the break-down of the poll shows a Liberal gain in most Canadian provinces, with an offsetting loss in Quebec. Close-followers of the ups and downs of political thought agree that the by-elections would have no effect except in the prestige of the parties winning or losing.

For Your Information. Perhaps no one knows the exact number of houses needed in Canada but we do know that few houses were built or could have been built during the war and it is agreed by experts that the number required is not less than 300,000. It is obvious then that much of this must be provided at once by emergency housing. The Government's central housing corporation has bent its greatest energies to obtaining — by government orders where necessary — all possible empty space, both privately and publicly owned, to be turned over to municipalities for housing. The Federal government sharing in the cost of conversion, for dwelling purposes. More than a thousand apartments have been provided in this way for married veteran students.

Canada and the United States

Canada and the United States, having completed more than a century of friendship with growing mutual respect and increasing co-operation, have just given the world a unique example of war-time co-ordination, and may profit themselves by the experience if they carry the lesson forward into peace," says the September issue of the Monthly Letter of The Royal Bank of Canada. "They are closer together today, economically and spiritually, than any other two important nations in the world, and their relations cannot be viewed by any other nation with Olympian detachment."

After giving comparative facts about size and population, the article continues in part: "Canada is a bilingual country, with more than 30 per cent of its population of French origin. In the province of Quebec this large minority has maintained a cohesion of custom, religion and language which distinguishes it nationally and internationally. French Canadians have proved to be good farmers, gifted politicians, and eminent in the professions. They have kept intact their manner of living, and when they marry their English-speaking fellow-countrymen it is to absorb them, as witness the thousands with Irish or Scottish names in Quebec who can speak only French. The French-Canadian was cut off completely from Europe by the fall of New France in the Seven Years' War and the gulf produced by the anti-clerical aspects of the French Revolution. Because of its dual base and subsequent mixed immigration, Canada will never produce a narrow racial nationalism."

"Geography and the pressure of events have combined to intertwine closely the business structures of Canada and the United States, and the unusual degree of similarity in the economy of the two countries has meant that business men and capitalists have been attracted by opportunities across the line, so that there have grown up hundreds of enterprises which are known as 'Canadian-American'. The latest available figures report the following foreign investments in Canada: United States, $4,190 million; Great Britain, $2,466 million; others, $270 million; total, $6,926 million. At the same time, Canadian investments abroad totalled $1,757,900,000, of which more than a billion dollars was in the United States. Canadians are naturally more conscious of United States investments in Canada than are Americans of Canadian investments in the United States, although United States by Canadian are at any times as great as those of the United States in Canada."

"Though often mentioned by public speakers, it is worth repeating that these two countries are each other's best customers, with a total volume of trade exceeding, even in ordinary times, the total of trade between any other two countries. Exchange of goods was greatly enlarged during the war, and it does not need an economist to say that a nation is in for difficulties when it is driven by emergency of war to buy twice as much as usual from another nation. The attitude of these two countries for not only getting around a difficulty but actually turning the occasion into one of mutual benefit was shown in the Hyde Park declaration of 1941. The underlying reason for that agreement was to provide Canada with sufficient United States dollars to purchase all the American-made goods she required, with the secondary objective of co-ordinating production effort so as to avoid needless duplication. By the end of 1942 notes had been exchanged extending measures of economic co-operation into the post-war years."

The article goes on to tell us the ups and downs of tariff policy, and the special products with which Canada is equipped for trade with the United States, and then remarks: It can be said that of recent years the American State Department has displayed remarkable knowledge of Canada's economic position, taking into account her great dependence upon export trade, her financial connections with the United States, and her relationship with Great Britain and as a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations. Just how important the bilateral exchange of goods can become is indicated by comparing 1939 with 1944. In the year war broke out, Canada bought United States goods valued at $497 million, and in 1944 her purchases from the United States totalled $1,477 million; in 1939 United States purchases in Canada amounted to $350 million, and in 1944 they totalled $1,301 million. Canada is the best customer the United States has. She buys more than she sells there. On the other hand, she sells more to the United Kingdom than she buys, and uses her balance of storing funds to purchase United States dollars with which to pay the trade balance ordinarily due.

"Problems have arisen, of course. The United States can return now that peace has come, to almost normal economic conditions, but Canada has been completely changed. She is no longer merely a producer of raw materials. Her manufacturing output increased from $2,400 million in 1939 to $9,074 million in 1944. What is she to do with the products? It is no wonder that the Canadian Minister of Finance announced his readiness to discuss with the governments of the United States, the United Kingdom, or other countries 'reciprocal trade arrangements wider in scope and longer in duration than have hitherto been made.' Certainly, with 25 to 35 per cent of the national income accounted for by exports and receipts from tourists, Canada will do all in her power to reach reciprocal agreements, and to the Anglo-Canadian trade talks hold great significance for her. A fair exchange, on equal terms, of the products of these two North American countries will be greatly to the advantage of both, and will give to the world another example of their successful application of common sense methods to international relations."

In conclusion, the article gives some facts about the international boundary, and the traffic over it, and remarks: "Obviously, neither nation can distrust very much another with which it has such relations; which goes into similar hysterics over the World Series, uses the same shave lotions and lipsticks, carries its colds and poison ivy with the same nostrums and creams, twists the language into queer forms to express indignation at standing in street cars and trains, and, generally, lives the same life in the same way. But this does not mean that the people are the same. Each nation has its own peculiarities and characteristics. It is not a two-dimensional matter only, a length of border, line and the traffic across it. Its greatest profundities are in the spiritual rather than in the natural world. The question is no longer as to where an invisible line runs; it has moved into the realm where men on both sides are wondering how the flow of people, goods, harvesting machines, and trade across this line may be added to by the flow of ideas, so that the well-being of both peoples may be promoted."

Food Alternates.

Recognizing the need for variety in diet, nutrition experts of the Department of National Health and Welfare point out that such fruits as strawberries and canteloupes make excellent substitutes for oranges, grapefruit and tomatoes, as suppliers of Vitamin C, which has particular value in keeping teeth and gums healthy.

Essex Holsteins Win at Cham- To Distinguish Sex in Barred pionship Show. Chicks.

Indicative of the interest currently being shown in the breeding of better Holsteins in Essex County, was the much improved showing made by the local exhibitor at this year's Western Ontario Holstein Championship Show held October 11th at London. The County herd stood fifth against extremely strong competition. In addition, P. H. Anderson, Belle River, showed the second prize two-year-old heifer and the fifth prize aged cow. The latter class was the best of the entire show and contained a number of outstanding individuals. M. Pulley, of Wheatley, showed the fourth prize Junior Yearling Bull and the seventh prize aged cow, and L. Armstrong, of Woodslee, the fourth senior yearling bull.

In the special Inter-County Calf Club competition, the Essex entry stood third amongst the groups entered from eight counties. The local team, which was coached by Charles Elliott, of Comber, consisted of Bob Newman, Cottam, and Homer and Mose Baillargeon, of Tecumseh. The winner was Middlesex, while the best individual calf was shown by LeRoy Stirling, of Morpeth.

A total of 218 heads were shown by 88 exhibitors from nine counties at this championship show, making it the largest exhibit of Holstein cattle held anywhere in Canada this year. A very definite improvement in the quality of the cattle was noted, the female classes in particular being excellent. For the second consecutive year, the Grand and Reserve Grand champions in the male section were Montvic Rag Apple Sovereign, owned jointly by T. R. Dent and Clark E. Brown, of Woodstock, and Eaton Hall Chieftain Payne, shown by John H. Older, of Thamesford. J. D. Innes, of Woodstock, showed the Grand Champion cow, Rosehill Payne Wayne, who headed an exceptionally fine class of aged cows. Reserve Grand Champion was Clarendale Abbecker, exhibited by Wilfred James, of Sarnia. The Junior and Reserve Junior Champion bulls were both sons of the Grand Champion bull, the Junior award going to George Elliott & Son, Tillsonburg, and the Reserve Junior to Robert Wilkie, Blenheim. The two top senior yearlings were Junior and Reserve Junior Champion Females, the winner being John P. Slattery, Woodstock, and the runner-up S. J. Hammond & Son, St. Paul's Station. The judge was D. S. Dutton, of Brampton.

Exercise Essential.

Exercise is essential to physical and mental well-being at all ages, according to authorities at headquarters in Ottawa of the Department of National Health and Welfare. "Give yourself a break," advises the department, "Don't break down. Physical fitness is an entirely personal matter. Dress right, stand straight, walk confidently. Keep clean, vigorous and young. Depend upon what your family physician advises, get some sort of exercise if you would preserve good health."

Although it is well known that in pure-bred Barred Plymouth Rocks poultry the partly grown and adult males can be readily distinguished from the females by the type of barring on the feather, there are, however, exceptions in certain cases. It is also well known that the cocked baby chicks and to be lighter in down colour than the pullets, but, until recently, it was not possible to tell the sex of Barred Rock chicks by down colour with sufficient accuracy to be practicable.

However, states Farmers' Bulletin No. 102 (Publication No. 718) on "Sight Sexing Barred Rock Baby Chicks," issued by the Poultry Division, Experimental Farms Service, an accurate method of distinguishing sex in this breed of chick was introduced about the year 1935. Since then the method has spread until at the present time in Canada, "Sex sighting," as it is called, is widely practised on Barred Rock chicks by commercial chick sexers.

Consequently the Dominion Department of Agriculture has issued the bulletin on sex-sighting for the purpose of explaining by description and illustration just how it is done. The sexes are distinguished by pattern of the white head spot, leg colour, and by shade of black colour in the down. Because the differences in many cases at least to the beginner, are difficult to distinguish, these difficulties are explained by the bulletin. A keen student by a close study of the bulletin should be able to sex chicks accurately. When difficulty is experienced after the study, it is recommended that a few lessons be taken from an expert. A copy of the bulletin may be obtained by writing to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Beet Harvest Opens Early in Ontario.

Chatham Factory to Operate at Limited Capacity, Wallaceburg Shut. Aided by an early spring, the Ontario crop is being harvested about ten days earlier than last year. Latest indications are that it will be of average sugar content and yield with total output of about 205,000 tons of sugar beets. Fieldmen report that another good rain could boost this total to 210,000 tons as originally estimated: Last year the crop reached 164,216 tons.

Weigh scales at the two Ontario factories are scheduled to open on October 3rd in Chatham and October 7th in Wallaceburg. The Company has assured growers that they will receive the 75c per ton premium for delivering beets to either factory though the Wallaceburg plant will be idle. Beets received there will be freighted to Chatham for processing.

In Alberta, the harvest has been progressing for one week and the crop is expected to exceed last year's all-time high of 302,000 tons. Manitoba estimates are down slightly from 109,000 tons forecast earlier and it is expected the crop in Quebec will not exceed 24,000 tons.

HOW TO PROTECT YOUR STRAWBERRIES

It is most important that your strawberry plants receive protection throughout the winter. During November when the ground stiffens with frost (after-mice have found their winter quarters)—place a 2 inch layer of clean straw over strawberry beds. Clean straw is free from undesirable weed seeds.

A few apple boughs will hold straw in place. Remove straw when weather becomes mild, early in April.

The Salvation Army. What do you usually do on Sundays? If attending a place of worship is on your program you are pleased. But if you usually merely visit your friends or go driving or have some recreation we would suggest that you ought to take time to attend some church to worship and to hear the will of God declared from His Word. The Salvation Army invites you to meetings in the Citadel, Arthur street, at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m., conducted by Captain Carter. The theme of the day will be "Congress Echoes"—accounts and impressions of the 64th annual Congress gatherings in Toronto, conducted by General A. Osborne, of London, England. Open Airs at 10.30 and 7.30 p.m. in Essex and 3 at Puce, this week's lesson, "One Who Loved His People," John 3:1-7, John 7:45-52, John 19:39-42. Text to learn, "Whoever therefore shall confess Me before My Father which is in Heaven," Matt. 10:32. Corps activities as usual next week: Tuesday at 8, Prayer and Bible Study; Friday at 8, Youth Group. Coming, November 2, 3, 4, Major and Mrs. Albert Church, to conduct the 61st Anniversary of Essex Corps.

Johnstone is principal of the Ontario Pentecostal Bible College. Has been pastor of the largest aggressive church in Vancouver, Edmonton and Toronto. W. D. Benton Passes.

William David Benton, of Vimy Court, Essex, passed away in Metropolitan Hospital, Windsor, on Wednesday, following an illness of about a year.

Deceased, a son of Mr. and Mrs.
Benjamin Benton, of Windsor, was born in England 43 years ago, and came to Canada with his parents in 1913.

He was a member of the Essex Rotary Club and an associate member of Capt. Brien Branch of the Canadian Legion. He had for many years been a foreman of the cushion department at the Ford Motor Co.

Surviving are his widow, Beulah,
and a daughter Doreen.

Resting at the Hicks Funeral Home, where services will be held on Saturday at 2 p.m., thence to St. Paul's Anglican Church at 2.30, with burial in Greenlawn Memorial Park.

John S. Wagner Passes.

John Samuel Wagner, aged 54, of 552 Oak avenue, Windsor, died Sunday at his residence after a brief illness.
He was born in Ruscomb and had lived in Windsor for 13 years. He was a member of the Salvation Army.

John lived in town for years when he worked on the M. C. R. section and later was a maintenance foreman on the W. E. & L. S. Rly.

He is survived by his wife Dorothy May; his stepmother, Mrs. Amelia Wagner; his daughters, Mrs. E. Hotchkiss, of Windsor; Edith Mary and Glady at home; a brother, Wesley, of St. Thomas, and a grandson, Donald.

Services were held on Wednesday at 2 p.m., at the Anderson Funeral Home, Windsor, to the Salvation Army Cathedral at 2.30, Major W. B. Stevens officiating, assisted by Capt. F. Moss.
Burial was in Greenlawn Memorial Park.

Several matters were up for discussion, but most of the evening was spent discussing our water problem.

Frank McGuire, of Maldstone, who was invited to address the meeting, advised his listeners how far he had gone personally in regard to the town's sewage and water problems. He tabled petitions signed by over 600 residents of Essex and Maldstone Townships, complaining of the condition of the Puce Outlet drain that carries all water from the north side of Talbot street. He had been in touch with the eight different Members of Parliament in the county, and they were all in sympathy of the serious sewage and water problems of Essex, and had promised to do all in their power to help remedy same. He also stated they had advised him to wait on both Houses personally, but he first was going to wait on the Essex County Council and get that body's backing before going higher up, as he was sure it would give the petition much weight.
In closing, Mr. McGuire stated that he had it on good authority that Campbell and Soups would build a large plant in Essex if the town could supply them with sufficient water.

Mayor Linton, on being asked to say a few words in regard to progress being made in the town's water problems, gave a brief resume of the ground work done in going to the lake for water and stated that it was his opinion and that of the members of the Utilities Commission, as well as the Town Supervisor, that the town couldn't expect any help from either the Provincial or Dominion governments, and that the town, itself, couldn't finance the project. However,
the Commission had taken an option on two acres of land on the outskirts of town, with the intention of constructing a large open reservoir that would hold at least one and a half million gallons. They hope to start this work this fall. If, in the near future, the town can finance the lake proposition, the reservoir could still be used for storage and it will not be money thrown away.

Mr. Affleck, for Stokely-Van Camp, at the request of Chairman H. Felstead, stated that his firm had never had to close down this past tomato season because of a short supply of water, but they had not operated late at night as in other years. They had constructed a tower as a water cooling system and thus saved a lot of water.
The biggest day's usage this year was only slightly over 100,000 gallons, while other years they have used over 200, 000 gallons several days.

Other Discussions.

Steve Sadler and Dr. Benson gave brief talks on the earlier history of the water problem.

Mr. Bear, of Stokely-Van Camp, stated that his firm was sorry they couldn't supply the steel barrels, as promised at the last meeting, to be placed on Talbot street for waste papers, but that they had to return the barrels they intended supplying, to Proctor & Gamble, in Toronto, however, they would get the Chamber steel barrels from another source shortly.

The committee in charge of having road signs erected at either end of town, stated same would be done first thing in the spring.

Mr. Felstead reported meeting the Public School Board re establishing a Safety Patrol in town. He had also asked the local Rotary Club to purchase the necessary equipment for the patrol team and had seen Chief Hogarth re instructing the boys and he had agreed to do so. There would also be an instructor sent from the Ontario Safety League, Toronto.

Mr. Felstead also reported taking it on himself to become affiliated with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.
The fee is $10 a year.

Harry W. Bedell Dies.

Harry Wismer Bedell passed away on Monday, after an illness of three weeks.

North, 71 years ago, and had farmed in the township all his life. He was a member of Brookier Baptist Church.

Surviving are his widow, the former Sarah Gammon, and two daughters, Clara (Mrs. Raymond Wilcox) and Christena (Mrs. Earl Alexander) both of Windsor; also a brother, Ernest, of Detroit, and a sister Anna, at home.

(Thursday) afternoon, in charge of Rev. Fred M. Ward and Rev. Stanley Johnston, with burial in Greenhill cemetery, Kingsville.

Essex Boy Becomes African Missionary.

Major Albert Church, who with Mrs.
Church, is coming to Essex to conduct 61st anniversary meetings at the Salvation Army, went to Essex High School as a lad. Answering God's call to service, he became a Salvation Army officer, and has spent most of his life in Kenya, Africa, ministering to the needs of the people there and bringing them the glad news of Jesus Christ.

These missionaries have already given twenty years in Africa, having been home only once in that period before returning this time. Besides conducting the regular meetings on Sunday, November 3rd, the Major will give an illustrated talk about Africa and his work, entitled "Links with Livingstone," on Tuesday, November 5th, in the Citadel. Everyone welcome.

the autumn thank-offering meeting of the United Church Mission Band, held last week in the basement of the church.

A special program included a vocal solo by Carol Robinson; a duet by Marlene and Donna Lea Stevens, and a number by Patricia, Catharine and Margaret Myles, with Karene Kreuter in which they represented the children of China, Japan, India and Ireland.

The Thanksgiving story of the African boy, Obam, was told by Mrs.
R. H. Parr. A new song called "Missionary Bells," was sung and the meeting closed with a treat of popcorn balls and pumpkin tarts.

Hofmann-Hayes Nuptials.

At a double ring ceremony solemnized in St. Frances de Sales Church, Detroit, at 10 o'clock in the morning of Saturday, October 12th, Miss Katherine Hayes, granddaughter of Joseph Chevalier, of Woodilee, became the bride of Fred Hofmann, son of Mr.
and Mrs. Fred Hofmann of Detroit.
Rev. Fr. Mulcahy performing the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her grandfather, wore a floor length gown of ivory satin, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, long sleeves, terminating in points over her hands, and tiny flowers extending to the waistline.
Her veil, caught to her head by a shirring, standing in a halo adorned with pearl blossoms, extended into a train, and she carried white roses and a white prayer book.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Stephen Thomas, of Detroit, sister of the groom, who chose turquoise blue taffeta, a matching heart-shaped headpiece with shoulder length veil; she carried deep pink roses; and Mrs. Joseph Schuhl, of Maldstone, sister of the bride, whose dress of cerise taffeta was fashioned similar to that of Mrs.
Thomas, and she carried a bouquet of Talisman roses.

Little Margaret Cosgrove, a cousin of the bride, of Woodilee, made a charming flower girl, in a floor length dress of pink net over taffeta, with a large pink bow in her hair. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Master James Schuhl, nephew of the bride, acted as ring-bearer, carrying a white satin pillow. Henry Hayes, brother of the bride, was best man, with Augustine Hofmann, Jr., cousin of the groom, also attending. The ushers were Clarence Lesperance, of Windsor, cousin of the bride, and Arthur Schonberger, a friend of the groom.

Roswells' "Ave Maria" was sung at the offertory and "On This Day, Oh Beautiful Mother" at the end of the mass.

Cosgrove wore a street length dress of maroon crepe, with black hat and accessories, and a corsage of talisman roses, while Mrs. Hofmann, the groom's mother, chose a street length dress of blue crepe with black acces-ories and a corsage of talisman roses.

Canadian Citizenship.

Prepared text of an address by the Honourable Paul Martin, Secretary of State of Canada, at a dinner given by the Granby Chamber of Commerce, Granby, Quebec, on October 17th, 1946.

Tonight I speak to you on a subject dear to every one of us — the Canadian people. I particularly want to place before you some of the significant features of the Canadian Citizenship Act and tell you of the program that has been prepared by the Canadian Citizenship Branch in the Department of the Secretary of State.

The program which I shall outline for you has this purpose which I am sure will find favour with all of us — to develop the national consciousness of what it means to be a Canadian citizen. And in asking for the support of your community organization, I would ask for the support of every Canadian citizen.

It is a fact that the Canadian Citizenship Act is a landmark in the history of our country. It is the first time that we have had a law which defines the rights and responsibilities of the Canadian citizen.

I have recommended such ceremonies might be held in February, June and October of each year after the Act goes into force. Setting dates will serve to regularize the ceremonies and enable interested organizations across Canada to sponsor and help in the arrangements.

It is my hope that on these dates in cities all across Canada ceremonies will be arranged in which not only those receiving citizenship will take part, but the civic and community bodies will have a sponsoring share. The formal act of officially becoming Canadian citizens should be marked in a fitting way both for those who become citizens and by those who receive them into the Canadian family.

There is, however, another responsibility which leaders in national and community organizations have already recognized. Every year some 200,000 young Canadians come of voting age and enter into full partnership in Canadian life. I believe some recognition should be made of this important event in the lives of our young people.

There is a link between our young people who are born Canadians, entitled by birth to the rights and privileges of citizenship and those who acquire citizenship after coming to this country. Young people should be encouraged to attend and take part in the ceremonies. It would be well if the Boy Scouts and the Y. M. C. A. and other youth groups take part in citizenship ceremonies. I think all such organizations to interest their young people in the citizenship of Canada.

Education and educational programs are provincial responsibilities and I would like to state that the Federal Government has no intention of interfering in any way with the educational programs of provincial governments. But the provinces have already indicated their interest in the Canadian citizenship program and we are working with the Adult Education bodies in the provinces. Night classes for persons applying for citizenship papers have been started in many cities under the supervision of Boards of Education. In cities like Winnipeg, Vancouver, Windsor, Ottawa and Toronto, excellent progress has been made.

The Province of Ontario has started its own citizenship branch and we will do everything possible to cooperate with them in preparation of New Canadians to assume the responsibilities of citizenship.

The Canadian citizenship branch is preparing a manual for new citizens which will be ready well before the Act comes into effect on January 1st. The manual will answer a long-felt need for a general preparation to the steps leading to accepting Canadian citizenship.

Through the Canadian Council for Education in Canada and the Canadian Newfoundland Educational Association, we are already in consultation in order that the Adult Education program which they initiate will lay considerable stress in citizenship.

The CBC, the National Film Board and the Canadian Association of Broadcasters who represent most of the privately owned radio stations have promised their cooperation in film and radio programs.

The National Film Board has made many films dealing with one aspect or another of Canadian citizenship. We are living at a time when education by means of film is recognized as a valuable teaching aid. The Film Board has many films in film libraries across the country which can be the basis of regular film shows sponsored by interested groups. We hope that by next year there will exist in Canada a Citizenship Film Circuit sponsored by groups such as yours.

The outstanding features of the Canadian Citizenship Act are:

1. The Act provides for the establishment and recognition of Canadian Citizenship. Formerly the only definition of Canadian citizenship was to be found in the Immigration Act. In future, all Canadian passports will carry the word, "Canadian Citizen," a right which was not formerly general.

2. Native-born Canadians, or British subjects domiciled in Canada, holders of Canadian service-men and all those who possess naturalization certificates are declared to be Canadian citizens immediately.

3. British subjects will be supplied with Canadian citizenship papers upon request after establishing legal residence in Canada.

4. A Canadian woman will have the right to retain Canadian nationality even though she marries a man of any other nationality. Women who marry Canadian citizens will qualify for Canadian citizenship one year after establishing residence.

5. The Act provides for encouragement of education in citizenship for those applying for naturalization and gives the Secretary of State responsibility for taking steps to provide such facilities as are necessary.

The census of 1941 showed that 25.5% of our total population was born in Canada, that almost 9 1/2 million of our people are native-born. This fact should help to dispel a certain self-consciousness we have had about being an "immigrant nation," that is, having a population made up largely of people who have recently arrived in this country.

Public understanding of this fact should end the "immigrant complex," that is, I am sure, inclined to make us diffident about Canada and things Canadian. We are a nation with firm roots in things Canadian. We are a nation with firm roots in this continent. This 1941 census showed that 33,484,038 or 30% of our population was of French origin — families which have been for more than two centuries rooted in this country.

If unity is a matter of common purpose, we should study civics and citizenship. Your membership will remind themselves of the duties and responsibilities of the citizen, your schools and clubs will contrive to teach appreciation of the wide variety of cultures we possess, finding in those cultures the basis of understanding between various parts of Canada.

Here in Quebec we have an ancient culture, based on a language and a definite way of life. We are justifiably proud of that culture, that language and that way of life. It is a Canadian way of life with a deep appreciation of the family, the community and religion. In every one of the parts of Canada one people should understand and appreciate this way of life. It does not mean that in New Brunswick or British Columbia they must adopt Quebec manners and customs. But it does mean that in those other provinces Quebec will be appreciated as having contributed in a large way to the building of Canada.

So, too, we will seek to know other communities better to appreciate their cultures and their way of life. For in our society, it is not only possible, but it is essential that there exist complete understanding in order that our people may live, each according to choice, in full and friendly co-operation.

We have called this spirit of active citizenship. Each of us can work in the cause of the home front only if we are willing to recognize that to be different is our right and that there is a strength in diversity. But beneath our differences, we have common feelings and aspirations and a common understanding is the meeting ground upon which we will build a greater faith in Canada.

In every community I would like to see a citizenship committee, comprised of representatives of every responsible body, comprising courses in citizenship and civics not only for people who are applying for naturalization but for other Canadians. I would like to see such citizenship committees sponsoring film shows with films about Canada, picture displays, and distributing posters about Canada.

For subjects I would take the whole of this great country — its history, its peoples, its geography, its resources. I would tell miners of Cape Breton about the farmers of Alberta. I would tell them how fish are caught in the St. Lawrence and how farming is conducted on the Peace River. Throughout I would have one basic theme — faith in Canada and love of Canada.

The true measure of any nation is not a matter of size of material wealth. In the last analysis it is the quality and integrity of the people and their strong faith that makes achievement possible. Canada owes its strength to many peoples — we are not a country of one race of men. We are a country of minorities. We should be proud of our different origins, proud of the richness of our different cultures and proud of the things that we have done together to make us better Canadians and better men.

This does not mean a regression to that selfish introversion that has brought war and chaos to the world. It is not consciousness of community and of national bonds that is dangerous. There has been too little, not too much, national pride in the past. We are a part of a great commonwealth that has been an example to the world. We hope for much from the United Nations organization in which we will play our full and active part. Our gaze is turning more and more outward and in carrying out our responsibilities in the new world we shall be better fitted to do our part if we have an essential feeling of internal unity and oneness.

The Canadian Citizenship Act about which I have been speaking is an act of faith in ourselves and in our country. We have won the respect of other nations during these last few years. But the respect of others, no matter how great, means little unless we have respect for ourselves and for our nationhood.

Our love and faith for Canada must be the common ground upon which we meet. We can translate that faith into a belief in our historical traditions and our respect for one another. That is the practical way to build a strong, united Canada.

Green Foods.

Importance of green, leafy vegetables as foods is stressed by the Department of National Health and Welfare. The Nutrition Division of the Department points out that they contain usable food iron, which feeds the blood cells, and Vitamin A, which promotes the health of living cells forming the fabric of the skin. Importance of greens has been recognized by man from earliest times.

Food for Growth.

Mothers who are interested in their children's health and development will ensure that pre-schoolers and teenagers like the healthful foods their young bodies need. The Department of National Health and Welfare points out that at no time of life is a sound living system more essential than in the early, formative years, and that, from babyhood to manhood, the best is none too good for the growing individual, as far as food is concerned.

Every man who observes vigilantly and resolves steadfastly grows unconsciously into genius.—Bulwer.

Keeping the Farm Machinery Efficient.

Few farm machines are used in Canada more than 20 to 30 days per year, and those which are used over longer periods are most subject to neglect against rust and weathering. With 335 to 345 days out of each 365 in storage, it should be obvious that extra precautions should be taken to prevent deterioration during the idle periods, and thus insure 100 per cent efficiency of essential equipment during the short active period, says G. N. Denike, Swift Current, Sask., where the study of farm machinery is a specialty.

A definite plan should be laid down in the early fall for "winterizing" all farm equipment. The winterizing program should start as soon as each implement has finished its season's work; while the weather is still warm enough for washing, cleaning and application of rust preventatives, and while it is still early enough to provide time for a thorough job on every piece of equipment.

The worst enemy of all farm machinery is dust and dirt. Winterizing should be preceded by a thorough cleaning of all parts of the machine. Rust and decay thrive best in the hard-to-get or neglected parts where dirt, straw, oil or grime absorbs and holds moisture.

The efficiency of winterizing depends upon the thoroughness of the cleaning job which precedes storage. Necessary and desirable repair or replacement items are easily observed and a list made for early ordering at Christmas.

A definite plan of overhaul should be worked out for each machine during the pre-storage cleanup. Paint should be used freely and frequently on all wood or metal parts exposed to the weather. Bright wearing surfaces should be given a thorough coating of a good rust preventive. Shafts, chains, sprockets and exposed gears should be carefully coated with rust preventive. Enclosed bearings, ball, roller or plain, should be filled with fresh grease to prevent moisture from seeping in during the storage period.

The tractor or stationary engine requires special care before storage. Cleanliness and paint and grease are important, but special attention should be given to the lubrication and cooling systems. All old oil should be drained from the crankcase and replaced with new, and the cooling system flushed with a cleaner. All drain cocks should be open, or anti-freeze of adequate strength placed in the system before storage. Just before shutting the engine or tractor down for the last time, mix up one quart of kerosene and a good break-in type of top oil (50-50) and feed rapidly into the engine through the carburetor air intake; shut off the engine as soon as the last of the mixture has been added. Be sure all doors are open for this operation. This will free all valves, rings and internal parts and leave them coated in good condition to withstand long storage periods.

Rubber tires on all tractors, implements or trailers should be properly inflated and the weight removed by blocking. Paint all tires with a good rubber tire preservative and, wherever possible, remove tires and store in a cool, dry and darkened place.

A few hours of care at the right time will add months or years to the trouble-free life of your equipment. Expensive storage is not necessary, but cleanliness and a few precautions are essential.

The Power of God's Word.

Today many are beginning to realize with gratitude that the kingdom of heaven is coming to them through the same power of God, good, which Jesus demonstrated. We read in Mark (6:56), "Whosoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid out sick in the streets, and besought Him that they might touch if it were but the border of His garment; and as many touched Him were made whole."

If we believed that there was any inherent healing quality in the robe Jesus wore no one today would be able to understand and follow His teaching. We are a part of a great power of good, to heal the sick. But because it was the spiritual vestment of righteousness, or godliness, which Jesus wore, its virtue is undiminished, and those today who touch it, who discern the Christ, Truth, are healed.

In "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 133) Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, gives us this assurance: "Man is God's image and likeness; whatever is possible to God, is possible to man as God's reflection."

This was beautifully proved by a woman who one day came into a Christian Science reading room seeking healing for a growth on her knee. The librarian asked her if it had ever occurred to her that she could heal herself, and then read to her the quotation referred to above: "Man is God's image and likeness; whatever is possible to God, is possible to man as God's reflection." Later in the day she returned filled with gratitude and joy. She said that all afternoon she had been repeating over and over the reference read to her, and the lump which she had on her knee for years had completely vanished. She had felt the healing touch of the Christ, Truth. Wonderingly, she asked the attendant, "Can I do that?" The attendant replied, "No, you cannot do it through any power of your own, but God working in you can." — Christian Science Monitor.

Control of Thrips on Gladiolus Corms.

If gladiolus plants were infested by the gladiolus thrips in the summer of 1946, this does not mean that the corms should be destroyed. If properly treated during the coming winter or spring, all stages of the insect will be killed and the corms rendered completely thrip-free, says Alan G. Dastan, Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The gladiolus thrip is not able successfully to pass the winter in the open anywhere in Canada. Only those thrips survive which are carried into storage on the corms. If every grower of gladiolus in Canada would treat his corms before replanting with one or other of the approved methods, these insects would practically disappear.

There are several ways in which this can be done. Among the older methods, the use of naphthalene flakes or corrosive sublimate is still recommended. Large lots of corms can be more easily treated by fumigation with calcium cyanide or methyl bromide. Dipping in lysol has become popular in recent years and has proved cheap and effective. Recently, DDT dusts have come into vogue in the treatment of corms, and have given excellent results.

No matter which of these methods is adopted, the corms must be thoroughly cleaned and ripened before any treatment is carried out. It is immaterial whether or not the husks are stripped off. This means that treatment should be delayed until late autumn or early winter. January is a good month in which to commence this work.

Full directions regarding the different treatment will be supplied by the Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Rural Areas are Buying Canada War Saving Bonds.

Reports from the rural areas of all provinces during the first week's sale of Canada Savings Bonds were uniformly good, headquarters' officials said this week. While specific totals of sales in farm districts had not been made available, managers of bank branches located in such localities and representatives of investment houses predicted very healthy final figures, basing their opinion on what they had observed during the week. The steady pace, with no sign of any let-up, was considered a pleasing side of rural sales.

An outstanding feature of sales in farm areas in Eastern and Western Canada was the unexpected large number of cash purchases. However, it is anticipated here that larger numbers of farmers will be buying on the time payment basis in greater numbers towards the end of the sales period.

Here and there signs are evident that farmers have been finding it just a little difficult to readjust themselves to the Canada Savings Bond methods. In these spots they have been looking for the old Victory Loan salesmen and have even written in to Ottawa asking that a similar salesman be appointed in their respective districts. Such requests have been answered by pointing out to the writers that the expense of organizing a big sales force similar to Victory Loans, and of training such a force for the new procedures was out of proportion to the purpose of the new offering. It was explained that the Canada Saving Bond was designed solely as a facility for investment of personal savings for those who wished it, and not as a primary means of meeting Government financial requirements.

Excessive Smoking.

While admitting the comforting effect of smoking on adults accustomed to it, health authorities condemn excessive smoking. This, they point out, can cause a tiresome chronic cough and catarrh, and will have a detrimental effect on endurance by making the heart irritable, with consequent onset of fatigue. Moderation is advised in smoking as in all activities.

Foot Care.

Good shoes and care of the feet are recommended by the Department of National Health and Welfare, for both health and comfort. Feet, they say, should be washed, or given a brisk rub, daily, in cold water. Socks should be washed frequently to keep them soft. A change of stockings after work is also recommended, and authorities warn health seekers that wet shoes and stockings should be changed as soon as possible.

Canada and the United States.

Even after the failure of attempts to carry Canada into the Union by force, there lingered in United States minds for many years a belief that the Dominion's manifest destiny was to form another State, says the Monthly Letter of The Royal Bank of Canada for October. Americans were incredulous that Canadians should spurn the special dispensation offered them in the Articles of Confederation, but the relationship of the two countries has advanced to the point where close co-operation is enhanced by real friendship.

The article, which is the second of two on the subject "Canada and the United States," continues in part: "Only an occasional lonely, and to Canadians rather silly, voice is raised in these days in favour of the old annexationist idea. Such expansionist aspirations are at odds with the expressed desires of the whole people of United States and Canada for a world in which small nations shall be safe from molestation."

"Co-operation and achievements of the two countries during the late war would fill many volumes, and can be mentioned here only to the effect of saying how splendidly they worked together. Canada did not benefit from United States lend-lease (which Churchill called "that most unordained act in the history of nations"), but in goods and cash. At the same time, Canadians surprised themselves by their ability to spend a million dollars' worth of goods on an outright gift to Great Britain. More than that, in 1942 Canada passed her Mutual Aid Act, and under it the next two years saw $2,360 million worth of further supplies allocated on grounds of strategic need to Britain, the Soviet Union, France, Australia, New Zealand and India, with $1,892 million in other kinds of financial accommodation also provided. She gave 20,000 tons of wheat to Greece every month from 1942, an amount that kept alive almost half the population of that country, and contributed 100,000 tons of wheat to relieve the famine in India in 1943.

"In his article in the January issue of Foreign Affairs, the American Quarterly Review, Lionel Gelber says: "Britain alone Canada furnished per capita as much as the American program ever gave everyone. Mutual aid being her own variation of lend-lease, Canada could have received but did not ask for reciprocal assistance; she herself, dispensing rather than consuming help of that sort, drew no lend-lease at all from the United States. She paid for her own American imports by the manufacture of war material and equipment."

"As to Canada's manpower, out of a population of less than 12 million there were 1,031,000 enrolled in the three fighting services. Canada was third among the United Nations in sea power, and was the main protector of the North Atlantic convoy route. She was fourth in air power, and in addition a host of her airmen served in the Royal Air Force.

"This brief glimpse of what was achieved in war and how the lessons are being carried into peace is enough to indicate the possibilities, and to emphasize the natural desire of the two countries for co-operation, but it is not meant to indicate that strong similarities exclude significant differences. The disparity in population is important in itself, because it makes Americans thoughtless and Canadians hypersensitive. Canadians are characterized by introversion, as against the American extraversion, and perhaps this, as in marriage, helps toward a peaceful and successful partnership.

In their temperament Canadians have a redoubtable slowness to match their neighbour's precipitancy, but one must admit that it has an air of majesty and that in the long run it works with fewer upsets than are suffered by their speeding co-continentalers. Canadians are adept at reaching working compromises which are nearer realities of the times than would be ambitious theories. They take their work calmly and are more serious about their pleasures."

After telling of Canada's achievements in literature, art, music, motion pictures, and other cultural fields, and in science, the article goes on to indicate the similarities in habits and philosophy of the people of the two countries. "Both Canada and the United States," it says, "are devoted to the idea of human progress; they believe in the capacity of all men for betterment, no matter to what level they have attained, and they affirm the freedom of the lowliest individual to work his way up to the top of his capacity."

"It is being realized by other nations that these North American neighbours must play the great part in world affairs worthy of their status and potentialities, if democracy everywhere is not to decline. While some nations prefer to follow a vacillating policy depending upon immediate self-interest, these two must pursue policies based upon intelligent appraisal of long range world interests. Each has peculiar qualifications, and together they make an important team. They need the outside world as customers and suppliers, but more than that, they need to participate in world political affairs and not merely to sit back as passive spectators for consultation but not participation. Americans should remember that, powerful as their country is, they are, after all, a relatively small part of the world's population."

"Canada has her own problems. Just now she is on top of the world, but being a small nation with enough wealth for a large one she faces particular responsibilities and dangers. To those who have learned to view the globe from the top it is clear that Canada is at the centre of world power, surrounded by the United States, Great Britain and Russia. Her position used to mean safety, but the strategy of air war has made her land mass a crucial point in event of war."

The part Canada is playing in international affairs indicates that the Dominion has an importance in the world of nations far beyond her meagre population, and through it all she stands as an autonomous nation. At the same time, Canada is a partner in the British Commonwealth of Nations, which stands by itself in history as a remarkable political institution. It is a world wonder that the British mother country, a mere dot on the map, can inspire such tenacious loyalty as to bind far-off nations such as Canada, New Zealand, Australia and South Africa to herself in spite of powerful attractions of environment and difference in living. Commonwealth members enjoy all the elements of freedom, and yet are bound together by loyalty to the Crown, a great inheritance of political and social and moral precepts, and by traditions time has been unable to weaken.

"The part that the United States and Canada can play on the stage of world affairs is enhanced by this connection of Canada with the Empire, but there are people who demand why Canada is the only American State which is not a member of the Pan American Union. Fortunately, it is widely recognized that Canada's associations with the old world are not only ineradicable facts, but which have certain advantages to the Americas."

When Canada speaks in the family councils of the Commonwealth, her voice is the voice of America. She does not accept the role of mere interpreter. She fulfills that office by being true to herself, not as an intermediary but as a principal. Her position in the British Commonwealth does not make her less an American nation, and she pursues a friendly and mutually helpful cultural and business relationship with all the nations in the Americas."

Mention is made of the need for spreading information about Canada through the press and in educational institutions, and the article concludes: "The international collaboration in which United States and Canada are engaged with other nations extends to all human activities, and involves every citizen, and is not any longer the prerogative of ministers plenipotentiary. The domestic welfare of these North American nations, be-

DDT Safe to Use But Care is Needed.

Certain precautions are required in using DDT, the new insecticide. It is classed as a poison, but can be used safely if applied and handled with proper precautions, as outlined on the containers in which the product is sold. Contact of the skin with oil solutions should be avoided as much as possible, as DDT can be absorbed in this form. It is advisable to wash exposed parts of the hands with soap and water after any considerable use of oil solutions or concentrated emulsions. Oil solutions of DDT should not be applied to animals. Cage birds or aquaria should be removed or covered before spraying is commenced. Oil sprays are injurious to plant life and should not be used in vegetable and flower gardens or on trees and shrubs.

DDT in any form should be kept away from foodstuffs, a recommendation that applies to any insecticide. In dry form, such as in powder formulations, DDT is safe to handle, but persons handling it should avoid inhaling or swallowing the dust. Tying a handkerchief across nose and mouth is a good precaution. This information, together with all the latest facts known about DDT and in use in insect control, will be found in the supplement which has just been added to the Dominion Department of Agriculture publication 612, entitled "Household Insects and Their Control." The publication is sold at 25 cents per copy by the King's Printer, Ottawa, to whom communications should be addressed.

It is not enough to be busy; so are the ants. The question is: What are we busy about?—Thoreau.

cause of the impact of their economy on world business, makes their internal activities of interest to all the world. There are few skeptics in these countries among patriotic and thinking people, because it would be very un-American (in the broad sense of "American" which includes Canada) to entertain any doubt that this continent will come out all right. But realization is needed of the truth that a happy future does not lie in the path of do-nothing-ism. Having agreed on ideals which are the growth of centuries, and having planned how the ideals are to be sought in a world passionately realistic, then the people of Canada and the United States must face actualities, think intelligently and pronounce intelligibly, build durably, and work without ceasing."

"SALADA" TEA BAGS*So handyFall Painting.

Every fall is an opportune time for painting around the farm because it is then that the farm buildings are most in need of protection supplied by a good paint. Wood that has become parched and dry during the summer will be exposed to the rigours of winter.

Metal, too, needs protection with paint against rust. Implements should be painted after the summer and fall work is done. Much of the life and serviceability of farm equipment depends on the protective care given during the fall and winter.

Buildings in out-of-the-way places, such as caves, should be well coated with paint. Using an old brush to get at awkward corners will save a good brush for the straight-away surfaces. Paint preserves water-spouts, eaves, and other metal fixtures around the farm. If metal is rusted it should be sand-papered or wire-brushed down to the shiny metal before priming and painting. Paint will prevent rust on a clean pipe, but it will only retard, not stop the work of rust going on under the paint.

MISSING....

Bottles, jars, all sorts of glass containers are MISSING! The warehouse shelf, the wholesaler's storeroom, your retailer's shop... they're all feeling the bottle shortage. The shelves that used to be packed with full bottles, jars and containers are now empty—very empty. Your manufacturer and dealer are depending on you to return these empty bottles so that he can refill them again. You depend on him to deliver the goods you need. Doesn't it seem reasonable for you to help each other out? Remember, no bottle means no refill. Please gather up and return to the dealer ALL your empty bottles today.

WHY A BOTTLE SHORTAGE?

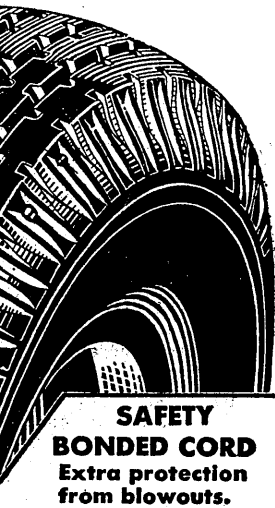

Canadian glass factories normally produce MILLIONS of bottles every month. The vital ingredient in bottle making is soda ash. The only big Canadian soda ash factory was strike-bound for months. Stocks of soda ash have been used up... bottle factories are closed down... bottles are not being made today. Beverage bottlers and all producers of bottled liquids must have your bottles back to keep going. Bottling plants will close down too... if your empties are not returned.

Areas are Buying Canada War Savings Bonds.

Reports from the rural areas of provinces during the first week's of Canada Savings Bonds were only good, headquarters' officials this week. While specific totals in farm districts had not been available, managers of banks located in such localities and representatives of investment houses indicated very healthy final figures, their opinion on what they had heard during the week. The steady with no sign of any let-up, was a pleasing side of rural outstanding feature of sales in areas in Eastern and Western Canada was the unexpected large number of cash purchases. However, anticipated here that larger numbers of farmers will be buying on payment basis in greater numbers towards the end of the sales period.

and there signs are evident farmers have been finding it just difficult to readjust themselves to Canada Savings Bond methods. The spots they have been looking for old Victory Loan salesmen have even written in to Ottawa that a similar salesman be appointed in their respective districts. Requests have been answered by a letter to the writers that the sale of organizing a big sales force to Victory Loans, and of training a force for the new procedure of proportion to the purpose of offering. It was explained the Canada Saving Bond was solely as a facility for investment of personal savings for those who wished it, and not as a primary of meeting Government financial requirements.

Rotary Club Welcomes District Governor.

Joseph V. Brady

On Monday last the Essex Rotary Club welcomed Joseph V. Brady, Governor of the 153rd District of Rotary International, which includes sixty-three Rotary Clubs in southeastern Michigan and a goodly portion of Ontario. Mr. Brady is vice-president of the Citizens' Mutual Automobile Insurance Company in Howell, Mich., and is a member of the Rotary Club of Howell.

Mr. Brady visited the Essex Rotary Club to advise and assist President W. E. Beaman, Secretary H. F. Smithend and other officers of the club on matters pertaining to club administration and Rotary service activities. He is one of the 157 District Governors of Rotary International who are supervising the activities of some 6,800 Rotary Clubs with more than a quarter of a million members in 73 countries and geographical regions throughout the world.

Today, this world-wide service organization continues to grow in numbers and in strength. During the fiscal year, 404 new Rotary clubs were organized in 12 countries of the Americas, and in Australia, Belgium, Burma, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, England, Federated Malay States, Finland, France, Greece, Hong Kong, India, Ireland, Luxembourg, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Straits Settlements, Sweden, The Netherlands, The Philippines, and Wales.

Wherever Rotary Clubs are located, their activities are similar to those of the Essex Rotary Club, because they are based on the same general objectives — the promotion of better understanding and fellowship among business and professional men, community betterment undertakings, raising the standards of businesses and professions, and fostering the advancement of good will, understanding, and peace among all the peoples of the world.

The following players formed the Essex lacrosse team: Red Ross, Bob Cade, Loebach, Steed, Pashin, Dresser, Fuerth, Mooney, Wagner, T. Johnson, Leboeuf, Roach, Woltz, Fair (goalie), Voakes (goalie).

On October 16th, the first lacrosse game of the season was played, at Essex, with Harrow as their opponent. In the first quarter Red Ross and Bob Cade broke through Harrow's defensive line and each scored a goal. The last three quarters were scoreless, and at the finish Essex won 2 to 0. The game was full of thrills and spills and amid the cheers of Essex and Harrow fans, Essex walked off the field with their first victory of the season.

On October 18th, a second lacrosse game was played, at Amherstburg, between Amherstburg and Essex. The first quarter was scoreless, but in the second quarter Red Ross scored for Essex, and the score was 1 to 0 in favour of Essex. In the third quarter Eddie Paschin scored a goal but it was ruled out because the goal judge left his position at that moment. There were many more shots on goal by both teams but no more scoring resulted and Essex had won their second game of the season by the close score of 1 to 0.

Women Who Cook.

Urging all young women interested in matrimony to study the art of cooking, the Department of National Health and Welfare states: "Well may the young man of your choice exclaim 'Oh, if only you could cook,' when he realizes that choice and preparation of food mean the difference between health and sickness in the home." The Department suggests that all women learn about food and its influence on living.

Apartment is Won by Detroit Man.

Roger Grech, 7569 Holmes street, Detroit, was the "lucky purchaser" of a four-family apartment, located at 240 Pratt Place Windsor, as a result of a drawing held Saturday at the East Windsor Hospital's ceremony marking the official opening of the hospital's new south wing.

The drawing was held before Premier George A. Drew. The lucky ticket was pulled from a large barrel by a youngster called in off the street.

The ticket was sold to the Detroit by N. Steigwald, of 1967 Central avenue.

Thousands of tickets were sold on the four-family apartment, in a drive to raise funds for the hospital. The drawing was postponed from time to time, held off so long that Saturday it was announced that the holder of the winning ticket would not be required to produce his stub, since thousands of people had probably lost their tickets in the interval.

Milton McWilliam, a member of the hospital's board of governors, was in charge of the drawing. At one point in his remarks he referred to the "winner of the house" and then corrected himself to say "the lucky purchaser."

He said the Detroit would be allowed to buy the four-family apartment for one dollar.

Original plan to have Premier Drew draw the winning ticket was abandoned some time ago.

Rev. and Mrs. Whalen "At Home" in New Rectory.

Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Whalen received on Wednesday and Thursday last week for the first time in the new rectory, many friends and parishioners calling during the afternoon and evening.

Miss Sheila Whalen, their young daughter, was the door attendant and Mrs. Glen Cascardien, Mrs. Murdoch McLeod and Mrs. V. W. Jones, members of the rectory committee, conducted the guests through the house, which was attractive with autumn flowers.

Tea was poured from a beautifully appointed table, covered with hand-made lace cloth and centred with a bouquet of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums in a crystal bowl. The same color scheme was carried out throughout the dining room, with an attractive buffet arrangement of fruits, vegetables and autumn leaves. Pouring tea in the afternoon were Mrs. Walter Philpott and Mrs. Sydney Wyatt, and in the evening Mrs. A. E. MacGill and Mrs. J. A. Nightingale. The guests were ushered to the tea room by Mrs. Abbott Ross, Mrs. Ken Brett, Mrs. Forbes Goddes and Mrs. Leslie Ash.

Assisting in the tea room were Mrs. Charles Barker, Mrs. Ed. Parsons, Mrs. Sam Ash, Mrs. George Weller, Mrs. Ray Queen, Mrs. Gordon Bullard, Mrs. Thomas Field and Miss Doreen Benton.

Rev. John Davies, rector of Kingsville, and rural dean of Essex, brought greetings from his own parish and from the deanery and congratulated the parish of Essex and Cottam on having acquired such an acceptable home for the rector and his family.

Walter Philpott, J. A. Nightingale and Murdoch McLeod spoke briefly, after which Mrs. Henry Mannington sang "Bless This House." Mr. Davies, in a short prayer, asked God's blessing upon the parish, the house and its occupants, and the evening closed with the singing of the doxology.

Tomorrow Never Comes.

The main opposition to the policy of economic stabilization is led by the Progressive Conservative Party in the House of Commons — supported by the large city dailies which usually support that party. Its main line of attack is on the Wartime Prices and Control Board, the government authority at present on control of prices.

Based on the heavy taxes on "luxury" particularly the excess profit tax, it contends that if controls were taken off and business taxes lowered, production would increase and competition would keep prices from rising.

The other parties represented in the House of Commons, the C.C.F. and Social Credit stand somewhere in between in this issue. The C.C.F. Party claim that controls should be taken off wages, refusing to admit that higher wages mean higher prices for the consumer. It plus its faith in an emotional appeal against business and profits. The Social Credit Party contend that only the acceptance of their monetary theory can create maximum production and maximum consumption.

Many observers believe that the outcome of the struggle on this issue will decide the future prosperity and happiness of Canadians for a generation or more.

Plans for the International Conference on world trade are rapidly taking shape and indicate an awareness of the importance of trade to the peace of the world. Canada is particularly dependent on export markets and thinking Canadians realize the importance of getting markets now while the demand for our products is great.

Channels of trade now change slowly and markets obtained now will mean a great deal to our farmers and workers when goods are more plentiful and harder to sell.

Products of Canada's forests — wood products and paper take first place in export records for the first eight months of 1946. Agriculture and vegetable products come second and animal products including fish come third. A large drop from the first 8 months of 1945 is shown by iron and its products due to the shortage of munitions and war vehicles. The total of exports is 1.3 less than the first 8 months of 1945 but 568 million dollars more than the total for 1939.

One million more persons are "gainfully employed" at this date than in 1939.

Experts consider that the physical reconversion of industry to peace time production is 2.3 complete now after one year of peace.

Tax exemptions are higher, that is Canadians have larger exemptions than in Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand or United States. Further exemptions commence January 1st, 1947.

I know indeed that wealth is good; But lowly roof and simple food; With love that hath no doubt, Are more than gold without.

—J. G. Whittier.

A Fighting Issue.

It is becoming clear that the leading issue in Canada's home political scene will be the question of price and wage controls involving as it does such problems as (1) the extent of government's responsibility for the conduct of business whether it be business by publicly owned corporations, federal, provincial and municipal, business by corporations, by private individuals or by cooperatives; (2) the extent of the government's responsibility for the conduct of labour unions; (3) the extent of the government's responsibility to find markets particularly for farm products but also for the products of mines, fisheries and forests. Public opinion will be the deciding factor in the issue and already there are signs of the lining up of forces.

Those who argue in favour of the government policy claim that it brings the greatest measure of economic freedom of the masses and stimulates the creative initiative of all and particularly of our young people. They point to the experience of the previous post-war period of 1919 and the early 1920's and when the Conservative Party was in power and carried out the policy now advocated by the Progressive Conservatives. The real income of both farmer and labourer — measured in terms of the goods their dollars could buy — sank to a new low.

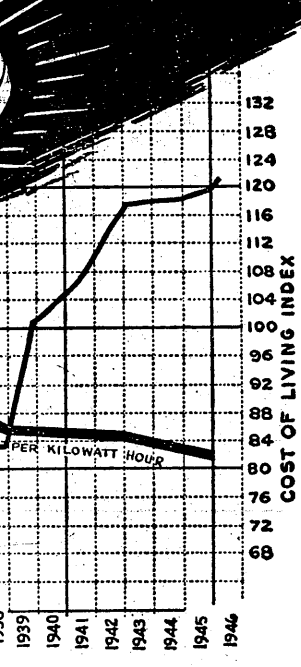

This was quickly followed by a sharp reduction in the price of farm products and loss of jobs for labour, bringing hardship to all but particularly to our young people not yet well established in jobs or business.

From 1939 to date the cost of living in Canada has risen 25% which means that our dollar buys only 80c worth of goods. Between 1914 and 1919 the cost of living based on the same statistical formula rose 46% and by June, 1920, had reached a new high of 176, bringing the purchasing power of a dollar down to just below 60c. Supporters of the Liberal policy also point to the present situation in the United States to show that removal of controls extreme hardships on the masses of people, particularly on the Preparing Turkeys for the Christmas Trade.

Now is the time for turkey producers to begin to consider the Christmas market, generally considered in Canada as the best time of the year to market turkeys. Turkeys which were hatched early in May have reached market development by the fall months and should be finished and sold for the Christmas trade. There is usually a demand for birds of varying sizes for family reunions and as the size of turkeys may vary all the way from eight to twenty-five pounds, depending on the breed and sex, the dressed turkey can accommodate a family of almost any size, says A. G. Taylor, Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The term fattening is applied to the finishing or conditioning of poultry for market and yet the consumer does not buy a dressed bird because of the fat it contains. The ideal dressed bird is one with an abundance of flesh and a little fat, yet with enough fat to cook the bird to get the best result. Excess fat simply roasts out and is the expensive part of the turkey. How then can turkeys be conditioned for the Christmas trade so that they will possess a maximum of flesh and a little fat?

The answer is in the method of feeding on the modern turkey farm. The practice of rearing turkeys has changed considerably during the last ten years. Turkey growers of today are confining the growing birds to limited quarters, on wire or on range, and keeping proper feeds constantly before them, so that the poultry or growing turkey is in good flesh at all times, does not have to wander far and wide to find food enough for its daily needs, and uses the food which has been supplied to grow frame and muscle.

Young turkeys are usually started on turkey starter mash for six to eight weeks then changed to turkey growing mash and mixed grain until market age. The mash and grain should be fed in separate feed hoppers. The feed hoppers should be self-feeding so that the birds can eat what they require as they want it. In this way they are never hungry and seldom eat a full meal at any time. As the weather gets colder in the fall the birds eat a greater proportion of grain than mash.

Variety also aids in inducing the turkeys to increase the intake of feed and about the middle of October, when the supply of green feed is getting scarce, is a good time to give any extra feeding which may be desired. Moist mash is palatable and if fed in the middle of the day in limited supply aid in promoting increased consumption. The growing mash which is being fed the turkeys should be moistened with skim milk if available for each feeding. Water can also be used if milk cannot be obtained. So as to keep the birds with good appetites they should be fed slightly less than they will clean up at each feeding.

About three weeks before the birds are to be killed for market they should be given a light feed of whole corn just before they go to roost at night. Make sure the corn is dry and free from mouldiness. First corn should be fed sparingly at first and particularly so unless it has been well ripened. As the weather becomes colder the intake of food will increase and the amount of corn can also be increased for the evening feeding.

Water, grit and shell should be before the birds at all times. Prospects for a ready market for turkeys this year are good, particularly for well finished birds.

Our Good Friend the Potato.

Because the potato is a homely vegetable and because it is a familiar part of the meals all their lives, many people are inclined to give it very little attention and consideration. Many vegetables come and go during the year but the potato is always there, our faithful and good friend.

The people who love potatoes, who could eat them three times a day and often do so, are not much interested in the way they are prepared, they like them anyway. But there are others who do not have such a love for this lowly vegetable and get tired of boiled, baked, mashed, scalloped and even fried potatoes. The home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture offer tested recipes which will find favour with all groups of potato consumers.

- Potatoes, French Peasant Style.
- 2½ cups cold cooked potatoes, cut in 2-inch cubes
 - ¼ cup bacon fat
 - 1½ cloves garlic
 - 1½ tablespoons chives or onions, chopped
 - 1½ tablespoons parsley, chopped
 - 1½ tablespoons chopped celery leaves
 - 1½ tablespoons flour
 - 1½ cups milk OR ¾ cup stock and ¾ cup milk
 - ¼ teaspoon salt
 - ¼ teaspoon pepper

Saute potatoes in bacon fat until brown on all sides. Remove potatoes and keep hot on back of stove or in warming oven. Crush garlic with the blade of a knife and fry in fat with chives or onions, parsley and celery leaves. Add flour and gradually blend in milk. Add salt and pepper and cook over low heat until the sauce is thick—about 4 to 6 minutes, stirring constantly. Add potatoes and reheat. A little minced ham may be sprinkled over top of potatoes. Six servings.

- Potatoes in Green Peppers.
- 3 large green peppers
 - 2 tablespoons fat
 - 2 tablespoons flour
 - 1 cup milk
 - ¼ teaspoon salt
 - Dash of pepper
 - 1 cup grated cheese
 - 3 cups diced cooked potatoes.

Wash peppers, cut in half lengthwise and remove seeds. Parboil, uncovered in salted water until tender but not soft. Drain. Melt fat, add flour and blend well. Add milk stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add salt, pepper and cheese. Stir until cheese is melted. Add potatoes and heat over low heat until hot. Serve in green pepper cases. Six servings.

- Bologna Cups with Hot Potato Salad.
- 2 cups diced, cooked potato
 - 2 sweet pickles, chopped
 - 1 hard cooked egg, chopped
 - 1 tablespoon chopped onion
 - 2 tablespoons vinegar
 - Salad dressing to moisten
 - Salt and pepper
 - 6 slices large bologna

Combine everything but bologna. Heat in top of double boiler. Do not remove casing from bologna, which should be cut a little thicker than usual. Heat in a little hot fat in frying pan until edges curl up to form a cup. Fill with hot potato salad, garnish with parsley.

Creamed vegetables may replace hot potato salad.

Two Fishermen in a Boat.

By Lewis Milligan.

Fishing is perhaps the only form of private enterprise which has, so far, not been threatened by socialization. I refer, of course, to fishing with a rod and line—plus the bait. It is an enterprise into which the profit motive does not enter, for if one were to strike a balance of costs and production—which one never does—the whole business would be found to be an utter failure. Indeed, it might be said that fishing is the only enterprise in which a man can actually boast of his losses.

I do not profess to be an expert fisherman, for I have been content to potter around the shores and the dunes at a village on the Kawartha Lakes, dropping a line to the bass and inviting him home to dinner. Many an hour have I spent dangling a juicy worm in the mystic depths only to bring up a naked hook or, at most, a pestiferous sunfish. Many a time have I cast a tempting lure into turbulent water—never to see it again. Job is by no means the only paragon of patience; he is a peevish fellow compared with a fisherman. That is not to say that fishermen, even the most patient do not occasionally give subdued utterance to a sense of frustration. There are more abstract than concrete dams associated with fishing.

Usually I like to fish alone, but this year I accepted an invitation to go exploring in a boat with an elderly major. He had all kinds of tackle and live and dead-bait, and I presumed that he was an expert fisherman and a good oarsman. But he proved to be neither. First of all, in passing through the lock-gates he zig-zagged from one side to the other and finally his oar hit the concrete wall at right angles and broke the oar-socket. This should have been a warning to me, but I stayed with the ship and we finally reached our destination, dropped anchor, and proceeded to explore the depths. Within a few minutes I had a strike and brought up a good-sized pickerel to the delight of the Major, who removed it from the hook and proceeded to fasten it to the end of a chain of safety-pins. Having done this he dropped the fish overboard and was about to secure the other end of the chain to the side of the boat. But the fish, finding itself once more in its native element, dived to the bottom, chain and all. As the Major was behind me, I was unaware of what had happened, but the two or three words that escaped his lips convinced me that it was something tragic. I turned and there he was gazing into the water as though he were contemplating diving in after the escaped prisoner.

That was another bad beginning, but there was worse to follow. After he had exhausted his stock of choice language on that fish, and having no success in still fishing, he decided to stand up in the boat and cast toward the weeds. I was fearful at the outset over this proceeding, and was about to suggest that he might cast more comfortably sitting down, when his plug caught in the weeds and he sat down—on the side of the boat. For an eternity of seconds he was balancing on the edge of the boat with his exterior under water, which was flowing freely into the vessel. With a tremendous effort he recovered himself and tumbled into the bottom of the boat, soaking up a considerable quantity of the moisture. During those split-seconds of imminent peril the Major uttered never a word. As he sat there he seemed subdued and grateful in spirit, until he looked around for his rod and discovered that it had gone overboard.

After he had bailed out I decided to go ashore on leave, where I wrung out my socks and put them to dry on the hot rocks while I resumed my favourite pursuit of feeding the sunfish with worms.

Unsafe Oil Burners May Do Grievous Damage.

Fire losses in Canadian homes may increase substantially this winter through the use of faulty oil burning equipment or burners which have not passed the safety tests of the Underwriters' Laboratories or Canadian Standards' Association.

"It has been brought to our attention," the statement said, "that oil burners of various types are being sold in increasing numbers, especially to those who are building new houses or to those who are converting standard types of heating equipment because they anticipate a shortage of other varieties of winter fuel this winter.

"Reputable firms sell oil burners which have passed the tests of the Underwriters' Laboratories or the Canadian Standards' Association and thus assure the public that equipment bearing the labels of these associations can safely be used. These manufacturers inform the public that their equipment carries the label of one or other of these associations.

"Unfortunately, other types, which have been submitted for tests and have failed to meet the required standards, can still be marketed anywhere where municipal regulations do not impose certain standards. It is these types which will probably cause a substantial increase in fire hazards and destruction of homes in Canada this year unless municipal authorities, which have not passed the necessary regulations to safeguard the public, take the action before the winter starts.

"The Canadian Underwriters' Association has been informed that, in some instances, small tanks are being installed in basements and that some home owners use open containers to transfer the oil from the tank to the burner. Such methods are highly dangerous and may lead to loss of life as well as destruction of property.

"At a time when there is such a shortage of houses the public would be well advised, for the sake of their own safety, to insist on the purchase only of those types of oil heating equipment which bear the safety labels of the associations mentioned."

People Are Asking?

Q—What is the ceiling price of turkeys?

A—The retail price varies according to the grade of the fowl and whether or not they are sold in whole or boxed. Pound prices include for loose packed young hens or young toms, special grade, 49¢; A grade 48¢; B grade, 46¢; C grade, 42¢. Box packed turkeys are ¼¢ higher in ceiling prices.

Q—What is the ration allowance for transient labor?

A—Approximately the same as that granted the ordinary consumer. All local ration boards handle these allowances and have a ration chart setting forth the proper allowances according to the number of meals served.

Q—I understand there has been a price increase on evaporated milk. Would you please tell me how much the increase is?

A—The increase is equivalent to the amount of the subsidy formerly paid. It is a three-quarter cent increase per 16 ounce tin to the consumer.

Q—Some days ago I heard that we would be able to get more shortening, but I have been unable to find any when I go shopping. Why is this?

A—Supplies of shortening will be increased in Canada following the importing of edible oils from the Argentine. However, these added supplies will not be available until November.

Q—I am a bit confused about our sugar ration. Would you please tell me the monthly allowance?

A—Two S coupons good for the purchase of two pounds of sugar or preserves become valid each month. However, in December you will be receiving an extra coupon.

Body Building.

The food we eat is to our bodies as soil is to the growing plant. The Department of National Health and Welfare points out in a reminder that the body's source of nourishment requires the same care and selection as that given to the soils in which things are grown. It is suggested that meals which things are grown. It is suggested that meals which are as nutritious as they are tasty will be available to all if prepared according to "Canada's Food Rules" which are now available, free, from the department or from any provincial health department.

Social Workers.

Men and women of the right type have a wonderful opportunity, at this time, to enter the field of social service, state officials of the Department of National Health and Welfare. Trained welfare workers are very much in demand and special arrangements have been made by the government with the Maritime School of Social Work, Halifax, and the Schools of Social Work of the Universities of Montreal, Laval, McGill, Toronto, Manitoba and British Columbia, for scholarship and other aids to training students for this profession. Adequately trained social workers are recognized as among the best means of protecting Canada's investment in Family Allowances.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Honoured for Scout Service.

J. B. Harkin, former head of the National Parks System, was decorated recently by His Excellency the Governor-General, as Chief Scout for Canada, with the Silver Wolf, highest Scout decoration for service. The award was made on his retirement in recognition of Mr. Harkin's service to the Movement, both as head of the Parks Branch, and as a member of the Association's Executive for twenty years. For more than ten years he was chairman of the Editorial Committee.

Promoting Harmony.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Canadian General Council of the Boy Scouts' Association, Major-General Dan Spry, who shortly becomes Chief Executive Commissioner of the Association, said he looked to Scouting to bring about much of the desired harmony in Canada. General Spry said that his military experience had taught him that you could bring together men from all parts of Canada, of diverse racial, religious and political backgrounds, and place them under capable leadership, and get a well-knit team capable of great accomplishments. It was equally true, he said, that boys of all provinces and different racial, and religious origins, brought together in the common purpose and programme of Scouting could bring to Canada the harmony which was so sadly lacking today.

Autumn Opportune Time for Painting Around Farm.

Many persons have been advised from time to time as to why early autumn is considered an opportune time for painting around the farm. It is pointed out that autumn weather is generally good for paint drying, and that many of the bugs and insects of summer have disappeared so that they won't ruin the paint job. That the farmer is more likely to have the time to paint in the fall after the crops are in and the spring and summer work is over.

There's another reason that is more important than all of these, however. The fact is that autumn is a good time for painting on the farm because that is the time when farm buildings are most in need of the protection supplied by good paint. Wood that has become parched and dry throughout the summer soon will be exposed to the severe conditions of a Canadian winter—and it needs all the help it can get if it is to resist costly decay.

Metal, too, needs protection if it is to resist rust which, if left unchecked, can do an enormous amount of damage before spring rolls around and what better way to get such protection than by the use of good quality paint? With metal, as with wood, the cost of painting is always infinitely less than the eventual cost of not painting.

Care should be taken to make sure that out-of-the-way places of buildings such as under the eaves are well coated, for it is in such places that rust most frequently gets in with damaging results. Use an old brush to get the paint into hard-to-reach corners, and the very good brush for the straight-away surfaces, where the paint will be generally good for paint drying, and that many of the bugs and insects of summer have disappeared so that they won't ruin the paint job. That the farmer is more likely to have the time to paint in the fall after the crops are in and the spring and summer work is over.

Wooden parts should be given a coating of good paint and metal parts should be painted or greased after they have been thoroughly cleaned.

Water-pipes, valves and other metal fixtures around farm buildings need paint to preserve the metal itself and also to avoid dirty streaks on outside walls which result from leaky drains. If the metal is rusty, it should be sandpapered or wire-brushed down to the shiny metal before priming and painting. Paint will prevent rust on a clean pipe, but it will only retard, not stop, the work of rust going on under the surface coating.

The true standard of quality is seated in the mind; those who think nobly are noble.—Isaac Bickerstaffe.

Launch Plan to Improve Milk Herds.

Essex Producers, Agricultural Branch Sponsors Campaign.

Republished from Windsor Daily Star of October 22nd, by request of Essex Department of Agriculture of office.

One of the most unique dairy improvement programs ever undertaken in Canada is now being organized in Essex County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, according to M. E. Dalton, president of the Essex County Milk Producers' Association.

Seek Out in Costs. Purpose of the dairy herd improvement project is to improve milk production per cow in Essex County and reduce the cost of producing milk.

"We're not after high production without having any regard to cost," Mr. Dalton emphasized. "Rather, we want to develop and achieve the maximum possible production in the most economical manner."

One feature of the plan to improve dairy herds is that anyone of the county's 1,200 milk producers can get into it, regardless of whether their herd is composed of pure-bred stock or grade cows.

Milk Testing. And, while there isn't anything novel about the project in itself, it does bring milk testing and the latest methods of efficient dairy management right to the dairy barn instead of leaving them in pamphlets and agricultural circulars.

Co-operating in the plan and sharing its cost, is the Ontario Agricultural Department and the Essex County Milk Producers' Association who pay the shot on a 50-50 basis.

Part of the work is done at the agricultural representative's office at Essex, where Miss Florence Garraw, a technician, tests milk and keeps records. The other part of it is done out on the farms by Alexis Burrell, a graduate of O. A. C., and an experienced dairy farmer.

While the project is still in various phases of organization, it has been going on for some five or six months. And, it is far reaching enough for some phases of the organization work to go on until next winter when farmers have more time on their hands than they have now.

First step at organization was done by the Essex County Agricultural representative, Angus McKenney, who made the arrangements with the Ontario Department of Agriculture for Mr. Burrell's services and for an agreement on the cost of the project which is being borne on a 50-50 basis between the department and the milk producers' association.

Farmers Co-Operate. Mr. Burrell the plan works is simple. The survey interviews a group of milk producers in one section of the county. He likes to get six or eight or more dairy farmers to go in a group. One day a month, each farmer in the group weighs the milk from each cow morning and evening. He also takes a sample of the milkings and places it in a small vial. One farmer collects all the samples and brings them to the laboratory at Essex where the milk is tested. The farmers take turns about testing the samples in.

Data from the tests and weights is projected to a 30-day period. Over a period of months, this information is charted with the idea of (1) weeding out poor or unprofitable cows; (2) try to improve the production of cows on the borderline of unprofitable production.

To the present time, the figures have also shown something no one knew before with any sense of accuracy. For instance, 55 per cent of the Essex County herds tested thus far have given a splendid account of themselves by producing an average of well over 8,000 pounds of 3.5 milk. Eighteen per cent of the herds haven't shown quite so well but they are placed in that category because of one cow in the herd who has been pulling down the average. Needless to say, quite a number of the poorer cows have already found their way into bologna.

Surprising enough, the remaining 27 per cent of the herds on the low side of the column don't seem to have much wrong with them that cannot be remedied by the elimination of a few poor animals.

Discuss Feeding. The project does not stop at production studies and analysis. Besides being utilized for the maintenance of a high average production instead of stressing individual records, the data assimilated from tests and weight charts is being brought to bear on other phases of the dairymaking industry.

Through the winter months, the farmers who are showing an interest in the plan will have the opportunity of meeting to discuss feeding.

Feeding of cows in accordance to their milk production to eliminate unnecessary consumption of feed by animals which don't show anything for improvement of pastures so that cows will have good grazing through the entire grazing season given normal weather conditions.

Cut Hay Earlier. Already, this phase of the work is bearing results. A few years ago, farmers in Essex County cut their hay whenever they got time to take it in. When it became known to them that early cut hay besides being more palatable had a higher protein content than hay cut late in the season, milk producers began to do their hay earlier. Protein feeds are high in price and difficult to obtain. Even a few added milk at the lowest cost possible."

The secretary read the minutes of the last meeting and gave out the Red Cross buttons. Correspondence was read and discussed. A microphone was presented to the club by Donald Lambier, for program purposes.

After hearing reports of different committees a program followed, parts being taken by Gloria Herniman, Diana Lozinski, Margaret Trimble, Lawrence Dobson, Garnet Trimble, also a chorus by the juniors. Collection received was $1.17. The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

pounds in a 100 pounds of hay proved it was good business to harvest hay earlier.

Surveys are being planned in various parts of the county to ascertain whether an artificial insemination station is possible. If this plan is proceeded with, this will enable farmers to use proven sires even with a small herd.

All in all, every aspect of the milk producing industry will be given a thorough review with the object of promoting more highly efficient dairymaking. "One of the reasons for this project," Mr. Dalton continued, "is that the milk producer is constantly faced with mounting costs of production. We must do everything we can to improve the means of producing clean, safe milk at the lowest cost possible."

North-South Essex League Banquet.

Anyone wishing to attend the annual North and South Essex League banquet, to be held in the Aberdeen next Tuesday evening, should get in touch with either the president of the league, Jos. Daely, of Charles Maedel, before this (Friday) evening, as they must advise the hotel people as to the number of tickets sold. Dinner is to be served at 7 sharp, with dancing in Town Hall at 9 sharp.

Rev. Fred Dyson Passes.

Friends in town received word on Wednesday that Rev. Fred Dyson had passed away at his home in Houston, Texas.

A funeral service is being held in Houston today (Thursday), after which the body will be shipped to the Harvey Neely Funeral Home, Grand River avenue, near Grand Boulevard, Detroit, where services will be held on Monday afternoon at 2.30. Burial is to be in a Detroit cemetery.

Surviving are his widow and three children, Ruth, of Detroit, and Paul and Russell.

The older residents of town will well remember the late Rev. Dyson, as he was minister of the local Baptist Church for a few years, about 20 years ago.

Kinsmen Hold Ladies' Night.

About eighty were present at the Ladies Night meeting of the Kinsmen Club, held at the Aberdeen Hotel, on Tuesday evening. Along with the Kinsmen and their wives and lady friends were several guests, as well as visiting Kinsmen from Windsor, among whom were President Andy Johnston, Tom Warner and Duke Williams.

With supper over, Miss Joyce Thibodeau, of Windsor, gave several humorous readings, followed later by a tap dance; Murray Kennedy favoured with a solo, "Sylvia" and an encore
"The Little Streams of Duna."

The speaker of the evening was Kinsman Harold Parr, who chose as his subject the humorous topic, "Husbands Don't Cheat."

Mrs. Gordon Brown followed Kinsman Harold's address with a request solo, "I'll Walk Beside You," which was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Brown and Mr. Kennedy were accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Harold Parr.

After Kinsman "Cec" McMullen had moved a vote of thanks to the visiting artists, President Andy Johnston, of the Windsor Club, spoke a few words.
Ladies' Night was a great success and provided good fun, an excellent program, first-class fellowship and top-notch enjoyment that was planned for and expected by all.

For those who did not attend, all that can be said is that "they know not what they missed."

Martin-Wismer Nuptials.

Lighted tapers amid flowers and palms graced the altar of Calvary Evangelical Church, on September 28th, when Alberta Bernice Wismer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wis-mer, 15370 Cruse avenue, Detroit, and Russell D. Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs.
Joseph Martin, of North Clarendon, spoke their wedding vows. Rev. W. C.
Bassett performed the rites.

Presented for the ceremony by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown fashioned with fitted bodice, leg of mutton sleeves and high round neckline, the full skirt ending in a long train. Her long veil fell from a Juliet cap of satin and she carried a shower bouquet of carnations and anemones.

Leading the bridal procession was Lt. Robena Wismer, who came from Fort Custer, Mich., to be her sister's maid of honour. She was gownned in dusty rose faille. Her headpiece was a small hat of fresh flowers and she carried a white muf trimmed with purple mums to match. The bridesmaids, Mrs. Thelma Walker and Miss Bernice Acheson, wore aqua colored dresses with pink flowered hats and muffs to match.

Orville Martin served his brother as best man, while Stanley Walker and Earvel Wilson seated the guests.

Also in the wedding procession were the two small cousins of the bride, Rebecca Mae Church, who was flower girl, and Walter Church, who acted as ring-bearer. The ivory satin pillow trimmed with rose point lace, was made of material from the bride's mother's wedding gown.

Following a reception in the church
honeymoon to Los Angeles, Cal. They have now returned to their apartment at 15370 Cruse, Detroit.

ESSEX S. A. CORPS CELEBRATE 61st ANNIVERSARY

Major and Mrs. Albert Church, missionaries on leave from East Africa, are announced to conduct the 61st anniversary meetings at the Salvation Army Citadel, Essex, this coming weekend (see details of meetings in Church Notes). The Major, particularly, is well known in Essex, where he went to school, and from where he entered the Salvation Army college in 1921.

Following appointment in Bermuda and Toronto, and his marriage, in 1925, he, with Mrs. Church, was sent to Southern Rhodesia as teacher at the Howard Training Institute. They also served in Zululand and South Africa before returning to Canada in 1932 on furlough.

In May, 1933 the Church's were appointed to Kenya Colony, British East Africa, undertaking divisional work and being responsible for pioneering the Army's work in several new parts of the country. Just after the outbreak of war in Abyssinia, in 1940, they were placed in charge of the training college in Nairobi, and have had the joy of training many young men and women who were sent to various parts of Kenya and Uganda.

From this wealth of experience and a personal, intimate knowledge of God and His truth, Major and Mrs. Church will have much that will prove interesting, inspiring and God-glorifying.
Plan now to attend one or more of these special meetings.

John Garrow Passes.

Funeral services for the late John Garrow, who died suddenly on the street, while waiting for a Greyhound bus, in Chatham, on Saturday morning, were held from the Hicks Funeral Home, Essex, on Monday, and burial was in North Ridge Cemetery, with Rev. R. H. Parr in charge.

Deceased was born in Aurora, Ontario, on December 23rd, 1860, and had resided in Essex for over 60 years.
For many years he lived at the westerly end of Laird avenue, on the property, part of which is now the town's Garrow Well. He also lived on Arthur avenue for many years. He retired in 1933.

Surviving are a son Ed, of Monet-ville, and a daughter, Minnie (Mrs.
Charles Westlake) of Colchester North. His wife predeceased him some years ago.

The superior man is firm in the right way, and not merely firm.—Confucius.

Have Narrow Escape.

Mr. and Mrs. Clair Chatterton and niece Marjorie Hill, daughter of Mr.
and Mrs. Norman Hill, all of Windsor, had a narrow escape, shortly after 8 o'clock on Friday evening, when the car in which they were riding, was completely demolished by a fast M.
C. R. Express, at the angling crossing across the tracks, at Maidstone Town-line, going into the Aaron Hill brick yard.

The Chattertons, who had been visiting relatives in Gosford North, were on their way into Aaron Hill's, when Mr. Chatterton, driver of the car, slipped off the side of the crossing, struck the steel rail and the car continued down the track right of way for a short distance. Clair was unable to get out of the car in plenty of time but Mr. Chatterton was unable to flag the train or get to the station in time to give any warning.

High School Notes.

Boys' Sports.

Another battle in lacrosse was fought between Essex and Amherst-burg, on October 23rd. There was much action in the first quarter, but no goals were tallied although there were many shots on goal by both teams. There was one penalty in this frame, on Red Ross, for pushing with his stick.

Amherstburg fought back in the second frame and two shots were made by them, but to no avail, for they were both beautifully handled by Albert Fair, preventing two commanding goals. Ross, with an assist by Bob Cade, resulted in a goal which trickled by the astonished Amherstburg goalie.

In the third quarter, Puertch, of Essex, carried the ball through and made an awkward shot over his shoulder, to score a perfect goal. Amherstburg scored their first goal as Bill Matthews shot and the ball got by Orval Vokes, who in the second half replaced Fair.
But Essex wasn't finished, as Cade carried the ball through and made a perfect shot from directly in front of the goal.

The fourth frame was scoreless, but it showed more action than in the other three quarters. Essex threatened but failed to score as the Burgh goalie stopped many shots on goal.

So, as twilight drew near, the game was concluded and Essex trotted off the field with the third victory in three starts, by the score of 3 to 1.

Girls Sports.

With the basketball season swiftly approaching the long, but satisfying hours of practice have begun. The Essex senior girls' team comprises Pat
McCreery, Cora Morris, Mary Mc-Dougall, R. Tomengo, Barbara Mc-Lellan, E. Queen, V. Chase, N. McRae.
Other than the regular inter-collegiate games with Amherstburg, Kingsville, Harrow and Leamington, the girls have practice games with Windsor teams.

On Friday, October 25th, Essex travelled to Windsor, Vocational School, and were defeated 18 to 11. Pat Mc-Creery making 5 points, Cora Morris
4 and Mary McDougall 2.

The Essex junior team also played Friday night, emerging victorious by a score of 15 to 11. The team comprised Melba Billing, M. L. McDermott, Ruth Harrison, Joyce Pfahler, Sidonia
Drzik and Barbara Allen.

A return game will be played Friday,
November 8th, at 7.30 p.m.

How Important is Colour to the Diningroom?

They tell a story in Chicago about the illuminating engineer who combined an experiment with a dinner party, broke up the party completely but proved his point. He did it with color alone.

The food was appetizing, tasty and good at the party. The guests were enjoying it. Then the lighting was changed mid-way through the meal, in such a way that the steaks looked gray, the celery pink, salads violet, milk red and coffee yellow. Some of the guests became violently ill within a few minutes, others were mildly nauseated — all had to stop eating.

All of which indicates that color has quite an important bearing on our digestion; and that color schemes of our dining rooms can play quite an important part in the enjoyment of our meals. Furthermore, it costs no more to paint the dining room in suitable colors than to paint it in colors which are going to make us vaguely unhappy while eating.

Naturally, every housewife cherishes the desire to see that her family eats, drinks and stays merry, yet it's strange how many overlook the possibilities of making their dining rooms attractive. They fail to realize that a charming and restful room in which to eat not only aids digestion but also deepens the love of home in every member of the family by making each meal a pleasant event.

There are, of course, as many different types of dining rooms as there are people to eat in them. Some prefer formal, sedate rooms, others go for the mellow charm of informal Colonial furnishings; still others are captivated by streamlined modern pieces; while some find pleasure in creating a diningroom around a specific idea rather than an era of furnishings.

Whatever your particular choice, the color scheme will play an important part in achieving the maximum effect. Just what the color scheme will be depends on a wide variety of factors such as available light, characteristics of the room, personal tastes, and what not. Nobody could lay down a sound color scheme for your particular dining room without taking all these factors into account.

Nevertheless, we've come across some charming dining rooms lately and some of them may embody ideas which you could put to good account in your own home.

A room of serene dignity that goes with fine mahogany furniture points up the beauty of design of the furniture by an ivory-painted wainscoting which provides pleasing contrast to the soft blue-green in which the upper walls are painted. The rug on the floor combines blue and blue-green with a warm tone of rose-red, and the same colors are repeated in the fabric of the drapes.

Another beautiful room has painted walls of two tones of gray while cherry red is the dominant note in curtains and upholstery. Coolly simple is another room with walls of white bordered in green. The carpet is a softer dusty green and the furniture is painted dead white with emerald green seats. Drapes also are of emerald green.

The small modern diningroom might well have yellow and gray as its dominant colors, with a contrasting note of blue. For instance, three walls could be painted canary yellow, while the fourth would be coated in the same gray as the woodwork. The venetian blinds are yellow with gray tapes and the contrasting note of blue is furnished by the plain rug and the upholstery on the seats of the walnut chairs.

Strictly informal is the dining room with creamy buff painted walls blending with the warm tones of Colonial maple furniture. The hand-knotted rug combines all the colors of the room the wall tone, the maple, the green of plants and the vivid notes introduced by colorful glass and pottery on the shelves.

If your dining room boasts niches, built-in shelves or any similar modern feature, why not accentuate the fact by painting that particular part in a color which contrasts with the remainder of the wall surface? It can be highly effective — another little touch in making the meal-time meeting place of the family attractive and delightful.

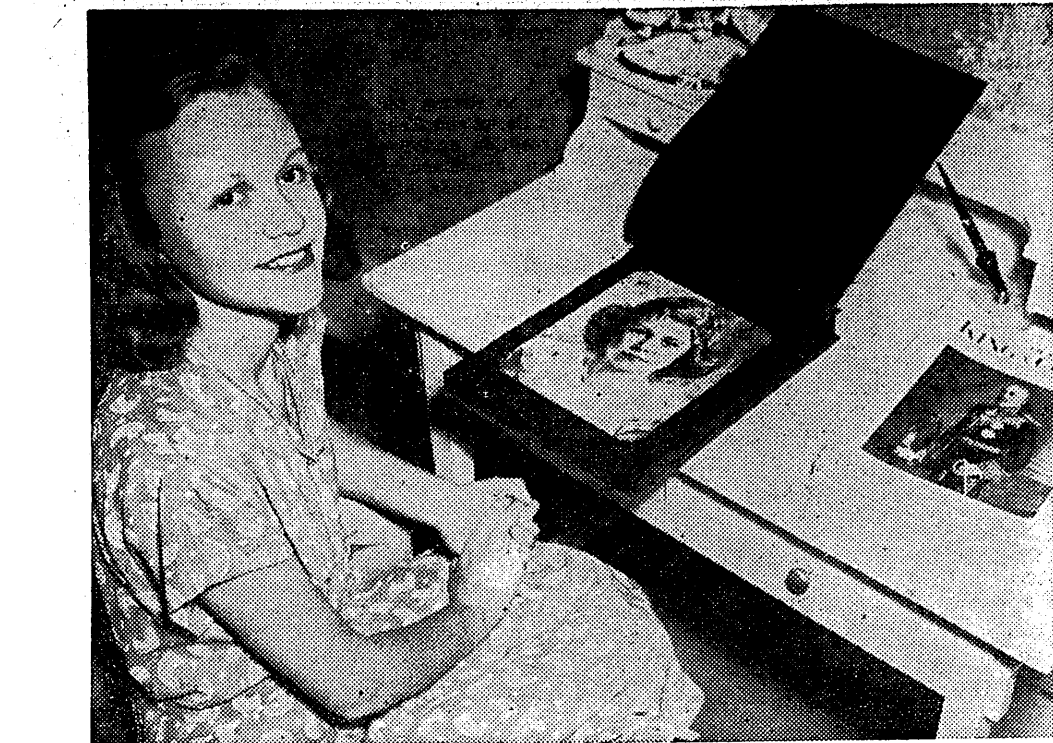

Whitewash is Sanitary.

Soon the farm animals and the poultry will have to go into winter quarters. If the buildings are clean and sanitary the live stock can be more easily kept in good health and with good health they will work better or produce more.

It is not a big job to put the buildings in a sanitary condition; whitewashing will do. The surface to be whitewashed should be free from dirt or grease. Just before applying the whitewash dampen the surface so that the spray will not set too quickly. A brush is used, in preference to a roller, to be sure to strain the whitewash through two or three layers of cheesecloth. A good disinfectant whitewash can be made by adding one or two ounces of carbolic acid to each gallon of whitewash.

Good recipes on how to mix whitewash of different kinds may be obtained by writing to Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. These recipes include ordinary whitewash, interior whitewash, exterior weather-proof whitewash, simple cold water paint, weatherproof cold water paint, and washable cold water paint.

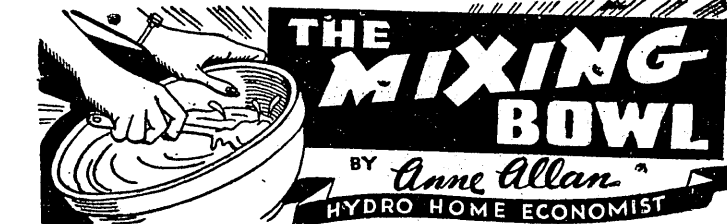

HIGH SCHOOL GIRL SURROUNDED BY ROYALTY.

A year ago young and pretty Jane McMullin, Toronto high school student, began to take a keen interest in the members of the Royal Family, particularly Princess Elizabeth. Today she owns a score of books on their lives, has the walls of her room dotted with their pictures, and has filled several scrap books with newspaper clippings on their activities.

Picture shows Jane with one of her scrap books devoted to Princess Elizabeth. Jane's father has promised the family a holiday trip to England some time in the future. It would be the fulfillment of Jane's dearest wish if she could meet Princess Elizabeth during her visit. Who knows? Stranger things have happened.

In the meantime, Jane is putting away her pocket money in Canada Savings Bonds for the promised adventure.

Good-nature is more agreeable in conversation than wit, and gives a certain air to the countenance which is more amiable than beauty.—Joseph Addison Sober Second Thought.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

It is becoming more and more apparent that there is a steady if small infiltration into the ranks of organized labor of persons whose first loyalty is to the Communist creed. It is a development that may be completely disastrous to labor's interests and well-being.

And yet, perhaps, this infiltration is not unduly large, nor does it touch all branches of unionism. Many unions have been unaffected and many labor leaders are among Communism's stoutest opponents. Yet organized labor is all too conscious of this infiltration, and its more thoughtful members and leaders are watching it with growing apprehension. They are restive under the conviction that it is the first step in a campaign to control organized labor and, through it, all workers.

It is not a tendency that is being meekly permitted. The election of Walter Reuther, an unalterable and active opponent of Communist thinking, to the presidency of the powerful United Automobile Workers, was recognized as a setback for the Red interests. More recently C.I.O. president Philip Murray, at the insistence of his membership, has taken steps to clip the wings of the leftist interests. But these facts only serve to emphasize the incipient conflict. It threatens Canada as well as the United States, as was evidenced by the sharp division of opinion in the recent Congress of Labor convention. There is indeed a belief, supported by reasonable evidence, that Communist influence is represented by one out of six union members in Canada alone.

Perhaps that would not seem an unduly high percentage or a matter for alarm were it not for the fact that even a small group, united and determined and certain of its goal, has a sharp advantage over large groups who are less concerned with social ideologies and are interested only in labor's welfare. It is somewhat high percentage or a matter for alarm were it not for the fact that even a small group, united and determined and certain of its goal, has a sharp advantage over large groups who are less concerned with social ideologies and are interested only in labor's welfare. Up Soy Bean Ceiling Price.

The ceiling price of soy beans has been raised from $2.15 a bushel to $2.20, according to other shipping places, to $2.25.

This announcement has been made by Murray Clark, M.P. for Essex South. Delegations of growers accompanied by Mr. Clark and Hon. Paul Martin, K.C., secretary of state, earlier in the season interviewed the Wartime Prices and Trade Board to get an increase in price. Their requests were acted upon at that time.

When soy bean harvesting started the lower yields and the low moisture content of the bean left farmers with a very small return per acre.

The delegates from Essex Island and representatives from Essex County Soy Bean Growers, went to Ottawa a second time, along with Mr. Clark to discuss their new problems.

Soya Bean Growers Hold Meeting.

At a meeting of the Western Ontario Soya Bean Growers, held in the Leamington Town Hall, on Friday evening of last week, it was decided to organize a marketing scheme under the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Act, and a provisional board of directors of their association for that purpose, was named.

To Be Left in Abeyance.

Much of the organization work will be left in abeyance until such time as Frank Perkins, chairman of the Ontario Farm Produce Marketing Board, can come to Leamington to advise growers.

Provisional directors appointed were: John H. Wilson, of Woodilee, representing the Essex County growers; Henry Egan and Charles Pierce, of Essex Island; John Kell and Harry Pugh, of Chatham; representing Kent growers. Soy bean growers in other parts of Ontario will be invited to name three additional directors.

Officers.

Mr. Wilson and Angus McKenney, of Leamington, were elected provincial chairman and secretary, respectively.

In discussion of a floor price for beans and contract price, which would enable growers to determine what price they would receive for beans before the crop is planted, are objectives of the association and both matters were discussed.

WINDSOR

No Pheasant Shoot on Mainland.

There will be no open season for pheasants this year in Essex and Kent Counties with the exception of Pelee Island, according to an announcement from the Department of Lands and Forests.

It was previously reported in error that the pheasant season for Essex and Kent would be open October 31st and November 1st.

This error will not be accepted as an excuse from hunters found hunting pheasants. E. T. O'Neill, local game and fisheries overseer, states: "For Pelee Island the pheasant season is October 31st and November 1st. The bag limit is four cock birds a day, and the shooting hours are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. only."

PUCE

Mr. and Mrs. Al. Ganguier and son Timothy, have moved back to Detroit after spending the summer here.

Frank Fahley has returned home from an extended visit in Paisley, Ont. Mrs. Joan Anderson and Miss Dorothy Mears entertained recently at a very pretty shower for Mrs. Victor Tweener (nee Joy Bell). About thirty or more ladies were present and enjoyed a lovely evening. Delicious refreshments were served.

J. W. Martin's home on the lake shore here, was the latest place to be broken into. It seems every few nights one or more summer homes are broken into by night prowling hoodlums.

Mrs. Stanley Major and daughter, Mrs. A. Ganguier, went to Detroit recently to attend a shower at Mrs. Richard McGee's (June Major) for Mrs. Ronnie Schoolcraft (Mary Miner) of California, formerly of Detroit. All present enjoyed a lovely time and partook of delicious refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Ellwood entertained at a family dinner recently, the occasion being the first birthday of their youngest daughter, Heather Marie, who received lovely gifts. All enjoyed a fine time.

A delegation of hitch-hikers from the Detroit News, motored out to this place on Sunday and looked over the surrounding district. They have a project in mind. We hope Puce will be the place selected for the fulfillment of this project.

This is the last call! Monday night is it — NOVELTY NIGHT — at the Essex United Church. Take off those dark glasses. Come out and see the bright and funny side of life. Pack up the family, pick up the neighbour, and come early to the party. To avoid accident or disappointment, remember, if you can't laugh — don't come.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Martha Boggs, who passed away one year ago, November 1st, 1945.

As we watched her calmly waiting,
For the summons from on high,
Then it seemed our hearts were breaking,
And we could not let her die.
Peacefully sleeping, dear mother,
The world's weary trials and troubles
Are o'er,
For days and nights you have bore
Your pain,
To look for cure was all in vain.
In patience you suffered, in silence
You bore,
Till God called you home to suffer no more.
A beautiful memory dearer than gold.
Of a mother whose worth can never be told.
—Sadly missed by son Joe and family.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Mrs. Albert Bennett, who passed away seven years ago, November 2nd, 1939.

Her memory is as dear today,
As in the hour she passed away.

LOCAL HISTORY.
In 1918, near the close of World War 1, a G.W.V.A. (Great War Veterans Association) was formed in town. They had club rooms over what is now the Dominion Store. About 1926 the G.W.V.A. was absorbed by the Canadian Legion, British Empire Service League. After a few quiet years, the local branch re-organized, and has since changed its name from Essex Branch to Captain Brien Branch, in honour of Capt. (Dr.) J. W. Brien, of town. A couple of years ago a Ladies' Auxiliary was formed. Our local Legion, with a membership of over 400, is one of the strongest and most energetic branches in Western Ontario.

Celebrate 40th Wedding Anniversary.

Married in Albion by Rev. Byron Snell, on October 31st, 1906, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Tilden, of the 10th Concession, Gosfield North, are celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary this week, by taking a trip to Chagoga Falls, Ohio, to visit Mrs. Tilden's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ashworth. Mrs. Tilden was Miss Sarah Whittle, daughter of the late Mrs. Nellie Courtney. Their attendants were Melbourne Joliffe and Mrs. Rose Thomas.

Layson-Mertz Nuptials.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Essex, when Rev. J. H. Whelan united in marriage Hilda, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mertz, of Arner, and Verduin, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Layson, of Essex.

The bride was lovely in a fuchsia dressmaker suit with brown accessories, and wore a corsage of yellow roses and baby mums.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Lena Mertz, Windsor, who was attired in a blue dressmaker suit with brown accessories and also wore a corsage of yellow roses and baby mums.

After a wedding trip to Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Layson will reside in Essex.

Schmidt-Rhoads Nuptials.

At a lovely house wedding, at the home of the bride's parents, at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening, November 2nd, Rev. Mr. Dobson, of Tilbury, united in marriage Michael Schmidt, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Schmidt, of South Woodlee, and Miss Stella Shirley Rhoads, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rhoads, of the Middle Road, Rochester Township.

The bride was charming in a navy blue suit, with a halo of white roses. She carried a white prayer book, wore a corsage of white roses and mums, while her attendants, her sister Mildred (Mrs. David Reeb) and Miss Julie Schmidt, sister of the groom, chose suits of turquoise and brown respectively, and wore halos and corsages of pink roses. The groom was assisted by Martin Schoen, his cousin, of Flat Rock, Mich., and David Reeb.

Following the ceremony, over 300 attended a reception, held in their honour, in the I.O.O.F. hall, South Woodlee. Later the happy couple left on a trip east and on their return will reside in South Woodlee.

H. W. McGill Passes.

Hugh Wilson McGill, superintendent of the Essex Hydro Electric System since the town purchased the local plant from the H. E. P. C. of Ontario, close to 21 years ago, passed away in Grace Hospital, Windsor, on Sunday, following an illness of some months. Cause of death was a heart condition, from which he suffered his first attack early last spring.

Hugh, 62 years of age, was born in Everette, Ontario. He came to Essex County to take over the position of linesman for the Sandwich South Telephone System, a job he resigned to take over his hydro duties in town. He had been an elder of Essex United Church for some years, was active in Masonic circles, being a past Master of Seven Star Lodge, of Alliston; a past D.D.G.M. of Windsor District, A. F. & A. M. in 1938-39, and had been secretary of the local lodge for many years past.

Surviving are his widow, Helen, and two children, Thomas and Betty. A son Donald predeceased him a few years ago.

Teachers Meet at Essex.

Group 7 of Essex district teachers met in the Essex Public school, Tuesday night, with Edward Gray, chairman.

C. E. McMullen, assistant inspector, spoke on backward children and how to do research work with them. He urged the teachers to use competition sparingly.

A surprise visitor was Gordon Duffin of the Department of Education, Toronto.

Inspector Pierce prefaced his remarks by saying that teachers' group meetings should be discussion groups and urged free discussion. He spoke on the teaching of writing from pre-grade 1 to the end of grade III. Miss Ila Quigley moved a vote of thanks to the speaker.

Mrs. Maud Smithendoff gave a report of the Women Teachers' Federation meeting held in Toronto in August.

It was voted to hold the next meeting of group VII in Essex on February 18th.

A social hour with the Essex Public school teachers as hostesses, closed the evening.

High School Notes.

A very successful Hallowe'en dance was held last Thursday night in the High School gymnasium. Prizes were awarded for the best costume, the most original costume and the best representation costume. Spot and elimination dances were enjoyed by a very large crowd. In the very near future another dance is hoped to be held.

Essex and Harrow played a bang-up game of lacrosse at Harrow, on October 30th. There was no scoring in the first two quarters, but in the third Red Ross and Cade broke through and each scored a goal, and in the last quarter Loebach scored the final goal making the score 3 to 0.

Essex Wins Championship.

On a rain-soaked field Essex won the Essex County Secondary School lacrosse championship by defeating Harrow 4 to 1. The slippery field prevented much running, but the passing was very smooth. Essex goals were scored by Bill Loebach and Street, Klie and Wright were the best for the losers.

No man can always do just as he chooses until he always chooses to do God's will, and that is heaven. There is no liberty in wrongdoing.—Joseph Cook.

Too Much Charity.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

In these days of social consciousness, anyone who stops to question the charities that do so much to alleviate the hardship and suffering of humanity lays himself open to criticism. But the very hint of alleviation is sufficient to justify a question. It suggests halfmeasures, a partial remedy in place of full cure or, better still, prevention.

Dr. Gordon Bates, General Director of the Health League of Canada, must have startled his hearers when he said to a group of service clubs: "We flatter ourselves that when we organize to provide money for charity we are contributing a great service. The truth is that we may be merely condoning and perpetuating ancient evils." That is a startling statement, but it is also true, for it would be difficult to debate the doctor's thesis that "service to be effective, must be intelligent."

For twenty years Dr. Bates has been in charge of a clinic at the Toronto General Hospital. Year in and year out he has had 1,000 people under his treatment. On an average, 300 are neurosyphilitics who will never work again. These men frequently have dependent wives and children. The wives become a charge on the Mothers' Allowance Board, and the children on various other charities. This is a situation that is repeated in various places as a result of various physical ills.

And what do we do about it? We patch our crippled up as best we can, and for the wives and children we provide charity and, presumably, we feel that we have done our Christian duty. That may be charity, but it is a long, long way from common sense. It is indeed "condoning and perpetuating ancient evils." Good sense would undoubtedly suggest that we formulate laws that would take advantage of modern science and that we provide the money necessary for adequate administration of the law and the education to assure public co-operation. It is not possible, of course, to figure consequences to their ultimate decimal point. But it has been estimated that illness costs Canada $300,000,000 annually, and that if to this amount there was added the potential productivity of those whose illness or death could be easily prevented, the cost would be an annual total of three times that amount. We are planning or actually paying hundreds of millions of dollars in bonuses for the young and in pensions for the aged. All the while we overlook the simple fact that years ago Sidney and Beatrice Webb stated, and fairly clearly proved, that the greatest single cause of poverty that makes such gestures necessary stems from illnesses. From most of it we could protect our people by the exercise of even reasonable care.

We are, of course, doing something in this regard, but our efforts are piecemeal and unco-ordinated. The magic results of a Pasteurization law in one province may be largely offset by the backwardness of the failure of other provinces to follow the same policy. Diphtheria knows no provincial borders. There is small credit to us in the fact that in infant and maternal mortality and the incidence of such readily governable diseases as diphtheria, tuberculosis, and typhoid fever, Canada does not compare favourably with the United States.

Too often charity is not a generous gesture, but only an easy "out." Let us face it. Charity is only a virtue where it embraces common sense.—Liberty Magazine.

Helpful New Drugs from Milk Sugar.

In the 12 months ended March 31st, 1946, about 1,500 farmers in Ontario and Quebec provided 88 million pounds of whey from which 800 tons of milk sugar were obtained, practically all used in the manufacture of penicillin and 1,700 tons of whey powder used in the preparation of poultry and livestock feeds. It is estimated that the farmers received $125,000 from the sale of the whey. Because of the strict hygienic requirements of whey buyers, cheese factories paid much more attention to the washing and sterilizing of the milk cans with the result that the output of high score cheese increased in the areas in which the whey was bought.

The latest report of the agricultural Supplies Board states that milk sugar has now become one of the basic ingredients in the production of penicillin. It increases the yield of the drug, enhances its keeping qualities and advances the stimulating effect upon the patient.

The outlook for milk sugar is expanding and present requirements of Canadian penicillin plants are about 100 tons per month. Some penicillin manufacturers are also making the newer drug streptomycin, in which somewhat similar culture is used as that for making penicillin. Streptomycin, however, requires a greater quantity of milk sugar per unit than penicillin.

A development of interest to agriculture is the experimental work now being undertaken with penicillin by animal pathologists of Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, in treating animal and poultry diseases. As a result of mass production of the drug, the price of it has been reduced to an extent that enables it to be used economically by veterinarians.

CANADA'S HEALTH. DISEASE FROM GARBAGE.

For the sake of public health, as well as in the interests of civic pride and neatness garbage should always be put out for collection in substantial, covered containers. The Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, has issued a caution on handling of garbage, pointing out that use of cardboard packages, paper bags or newspaper bundles for the discards of kitchen and closet makes not only unsightly piles but creates ideal breeding places for flies and vermin, and for the spread of disease.

Filmy garbage bundles, say the departmental officers, are liable to be disturbed and scattered by scavengers, including rats, who are among the most notorious agents in spread of epidemics.

SNORING.

Snoring and breathing through the mouth are serious matters not always given the special attention they deserve. For instance, doctors know that mouth breathing, in children, can lead to pronounced change in actual facial structure.

Snoring indicates failure of the nasal passages to perform their proper functions and is common among those suffering from some form of blockage of the nose.

Medical advice should be sought for the chronic mouth-breather and where there is a tendency, particularly in cold weather, for a child to develop nasal colds with persistent discharge, the family physician should be consulted at once.

LISPING AND STAMMERING.

More than half the children who stammer or stutter in early school years eventually overcome the handicap. Stammering, which is more common among boys than girls, is the result of a spasm of the muscles associated with speech and indicates some emotional disturbance — often traceable to bad environment or faulty training.

Lisping is due to tongue-tie, cleft palate, harelip or maladjustment of the teeth. It can be helped considerably and the cure lies primarily in sympathetic co-operation of parents and teachers with medical advisers.

Communicable Disease Terms. Many terms used in connection with control of communicable diseases are not understood by non-medical people. For the benefit of parents and educational authorities, the following definitions have been drawn up by a committee of medical experts:

CONTACT—anyone so exposed to a person suffering from a communicable disease as to be in danger of picking up the infection. (This includes not only physical contact, but contact with the soiled linen, etc. of the sufferer).

CARRIER—one who has, and so may transmit, a communicable disease, but who has no symptoms of the disease itself.

IMMUNITY—known safely from a specific disease (as in the case of adequate protection by inoculation or vaccination).

ISOLATION—segregation of persons suffering from a communicable disease, or of known carriers of disease, so that they may not pass on the organisms.

QUARANTINE—confinement to home, during the period of "incubation" (development) of a communicable disease, of persons known to have been exposed to a disease source.

SUSCEPTIBILITY—or NON-IMMUNITY—liability to a communicable disease (as in the case of a person who has not been found to have a natural or artificial immunity from that disease).

LEAD POISONING.

Lead poisoning is one of the most common occupational diseases. Metallic lead or any of the numerous lead compounds may cause poisoning. About 900 industrial occupations involve an exposure to lead and poisoning can occur in many of them unless proper precautions are taken by employer and employee.

In an announcement on this type of industrial hazard, the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, points out that the main cause of lead poisoning is the repeated breathing of lead dust or fumes. The control and removal of lead dust and fumes from a work room by "good housekeeping" methods, and adequate ventilation, is stated to provide the best protection.

Lead may also be absorbed through the skin or by swallowing lead compounds. Industrial health authorities declare that eating at the work bench is a common source of lead ingestion.

Self-Discipline.

An appeal to parents to permit their children to take life's little knocks, in order to develop self-discipline and adjust their behaviour to social standards, is made by the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. "Learning the hard way has advantages," the department states. "A pampered child has little opportunity to learn to solve life's problems in the school of hard-knocks, through trial and error. Only through personal experience can we learn to conform to the standards of conduct which living demands."

Re-Opening November 12-20 of Royal Winter Fair.

Everything is in readiness for the re-opening of the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, on November 12th. The Fair will continue through to November 20th. During the war years this leading Canadian agricultural fair was cancelled due to the buildings being occupied by members of the Armed Forces. Since the war ended the buildings have been overhauled and redecorated and are now in first-class shape for accommodating the 15,000 head of live stock, the thousands of entries in the fruit, seeds, grains and other exhibits, for the incomparable flower show, which was always one of the most attractive features of the Royal, and the many other attractions of the fair. More entries in every class of exhibits have been made for this year's Royal than ever before.

Formal opening of the 18th Royal Winter Fair will be at the Horse Show on the Evening of November 12th by Hon. Ray Atherton, United States Ambassador to Canada. On Monday evening, November 18th, Their Excellencies the Governor General and the Viscount Alexander will formally attend the Horse Show and informally the following evening. At this show teams from the United States, Mexico and Peru will be among those competing for international honours in riding and jumping contests.

The Royal will also be the stage for the national contests of the Canadian Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs, which have a total membership throughout the Dominion of about 40,000.

Only 7 Per Cent of Land is Cultivated.

In its world food survey with reference to the development and use of land, the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations (FAO) says that in some parts of the world, the area of cultivated land is less than one-half acre per head of population, and this is decreasing as population rises. At present only about 7 per cent of the land surface of the globe is cultivated. Much of the rest is unfit for cultivation by present methods, but there are large areas that could be opened up if capital were available for their development by modern technical methods, including, in many cases, irrigation and drainage. Extensive territories might be devoted to farming if the deadly pests such as the malaria carrying mosquito and the tsetse fly were exterminated by well-organized, large-scale campaigns.

But the opening up of new land is only a part of the problem of increasing land resources. Equally important is the reclamation of land, which, once fertile, has been rendered barren by human misuse, and the conservation of land now deteriorating. Every country has its own specific problems in increasing and safeguarding land resources, and they must be attacked in different ways. The main point is that the attack must be scientifically planned and co-ordinated, and adequately financed by governments. The need for improvement applies to all countries, not only to countries that are at low nutritional levels but to those at medium and high levels as well. In many of the high level lands a re-orientation of production will be required to furnish more of the foods needed for health — live-stock products, fruits, vegetables — and this will result in types of farming that favour good soil management, including long-term rotations and increased use of pasture. Studies in the United States, for example, show that in many areas fertilizers could be profitably used in greater quantities. There is no country that has yet achieved all it can achieve by the application of technical advances in agriculture.

The reward is in keeping the commandments, not for keeping them.—Lydia Maria Child.

Legion Provides a Helping Hand.

From that day in November, 1925, when The Legion was born, the organization has endeavoured to assist veterans and dependents in solving their various problems. This service has been given entirely free to all who asked, regardless as to whether or not they were members of the Legion. Legion branches throughout Canada and the U. S. A. developed into "Service Centres" and, as time went by, Provincial and State Commands set up what are known as "Service Bureaux." These were placed in charge of trained Adjustment Officers and, for the 20 years of the existence of the Legion, they have rendered a grand service.

In Ottawa, the Dominion Service Bureau of The Legion functions as part of the Dominion Headquarters, under the control and direction of the Dominion Executive Council. Most of the cases, which have not been successful, are referred to this Bureau. They emanate not only from Legion Branches — Provincial Commands — Service Bureaux, but from individuals, M. P.'s, and public bodies also. As far back as 1928, a House of Commons Committee, who carried out an intensive investigation of the Dominion Service Bureau, reported as follows: "Your committee was greatly impressed by the efficiency of the Dominion Service Bureau, an organization instituted by The Canadian Legion of the B.E.S.L. for the purpose of preparing for submission to the Board of Pension Commissioners — Federal Appeal Board — Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, the claims arising out of legislation on behalf of ex-soldiers. This Bureau has, since its inception, handled thousands of cases and has been of inestimable value, not only to members of the Legion, but to all ex-soldiers and their dependents."

Down through the years, thousands of men who served in World War 1, and their dependents, were established on pension, and also received medical and hospital treatment free. When World War 2 commenced in September, 1939, the Dominion Command of the Legion were instrumental in having the Government declare, by Special Order-in-Council P.C. 2491, that all the benefits of The Pension Act would be provided for those who collected, throughout the war, the Legion were very active in protecting the rights of the disabled and their dependents, besides securing the best possible rehabilitation provisions.

"The Helping Hand" of the Legion has been outstretched for over 20 years, and the Dominion Service Bureau records bear witness to the magnificent service rendered to veterans of both wars. It has never been the policy of the Legion to advertise its successes to any extent but, with thousands of veterans of World War 2 now members of the Legion, it is thought necessary to inform them briefly of the valuable service being rendered by their organization.

There are many types of service rendered and, perhaps, the best illustration of same is to describe individual cases, and show what has been accomplished. In 1937, a young Canadian joined the Royal Canadian Navy and, when war 2 commenced in 1939, he proceeded to duty on the High Seas. After some years of strenuous service, he was found to have a duodenal ulcer in 1944. In reply to questions by medical officers, he admitted having trouble with his stomach for Canada Needs Electoral Reform.

This country needs some measure of electoral reform if minority rule is to be avoided, informed observers of the Canadian political scene tells The Financial Post.

Some of those replying on The Post's question-of-the-week say the only reform needed is on the part of voters themselves — more of them should go to the polls, they should be forced to vote. Among revised systems, the transferable vote is most popular, proportional representation least.

Feeling is that a man cannot do his best in parliament or legislature if he knows — as many do today — that more votes were polled against him than for him. Opinion is that minority representation tends to weaken the whole representative system of government.

Health Booklets.

By arrangement between federal and provincial health departments free public health literature is distributed from the various provincial capitals to all interested.

years, and was finally discharged from the service in 1945 as medically unfit. The Canadian Pension Commission gave a decision that his duodenal ulcer was of pre-enlistment origin, and not aggravated by service; therefore, no pension was indicated.

The case was referred to the Dominion Service Bureau; and, after thoroughly reviewing same, it was cited to the 1946 House of Commons Committee on Veterans' Affairs to illustrate the difficulty of proving Service Aggravation. Later, some new evidence was obtained and a new presentation made to the Pension Commission. As a result, success was finally achieved. The decision of the Commission was that the duodenal ulcer was of pre-enlistment origin — aggravated by service on the High Seas, with pension to be paid for the full extent of his disability. Disability pension was paid at 20%, with a retroactive adjustment of pension amounting to $345. Limited space does not permit a detailed explanation of all the arguments advanced, both medical and legal, by the Dominion Service Bureau, but that they were reasonable and sound, is proven by the decision of the Commission. For the rest of his life, this Canadian sailor, who gave splendid and valuable service, will be grateful to the Legion for assisting him to obtain justice. He not only receives disability pension, but will be entitled to free medical treatment and hospitalization for his pensionable disability, as long as he lives.

During the first nine months of 1946, the Dominion Service Bureau have established 569 claims for pension, of which 113 were World War 1 cases, and 456 were related to World War 2. In addition, 130 miscellaneous adjustments of various kinds were secured. These have meant the payment of $164,233 in pension and allowances to veterans of both wars and their dependents. Greatest of all is the fact that the Legion has assisted the authorities to do justice to legitimate claims.

People Are Asking?

Q—I understand there is a set date when used cars become a year older and their ceiling prices decrease. Will you please tell me when it is?

A—On October 1st all used cars automatically become one year older as far as ceiling prices are concerned.

Q—Is there a ceiling price on pumpkins and squash?

A—No.

Q—I am living in a house on a farm. My landlord, who lives in the city, has sold the farm and has given me one month's notice to vacate. Is this legal?

A—Yes. Farm property does not come under the rental regulations, provided the tenant obtains his income from the operation of the farm.

Q—I have an extra allowance of evaporated milk and have some coupons on a card to obtain it. I have been told these coupons expire at the end of October. Does that mean my coupons will no longer be valid?

A—While unnumbered "beaver" coupons good for the purchase of butter, meat or sugar become invalid on October 31st, those issued for evaporated milk will not expire until the end of the year.

Prospects for Ration Increase Obscure.

Prospects of a larger supply for Canadians next year are not likely to be clear until early in 1947. Prices Board officials said this week.

General expectations are that the world sugar supply will be easier next year and if that is the case Canadians can expect larger rations, but with that prediction goes the warning that such unpredictable happenings as a hurricane in an important sugar area could quickly change the picture.

Price prospects are equally uncertain. Cuban prices are governed by a deal with the United States in which the American cost-of-living index is a factor. Should that index soar sugar prices would go up and the question would then be whether the Canadian sugar stabilization fund could continue to meet the higher costs or whether it should be passed on to the consumers.

So far the sugar stabilization fund has been used successfully to meet higher prices.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP

is a lot of little things

CONSIDER THE OTHER FELLOW'S OPINION

Among nations, differences of opinion cause war. Among individuals they often lead to broken friendships. In the heat of a discussion on religion, politics, economics, it's easier to say something for which you'll be sorry than it is to concede a point. But after the smoke clears you'll be glad you considered the other fellow's opinion—just as you'd be glad if he respected yours. Moreover, you'll be carrying out one of the cardinal laws of "Good Citizenship."

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Archie Taylor, who passed away 11 years ago, November 10th, 1935.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies a father we loved so dearly
But whom we could not save.
He is sheltered by the Rock of Ages.
Anchored on God's golden shore,
Each passing day brings us nearer
To the day we will part no more.
—Fondly remembered by his wife and family.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of James Oscar Patterson, who died November 15th, 1941.

We are sad within our memory.
Lonely are our hearts today.
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever gone away.
Not a day do we forget you.
In our hearts you are always near.
We who loved you surely miss you
As it dawns its sixth year.
—Always remembered by wife and family.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Anna Kettels, who passed away five years ago November 6th, 1941.

Your gentle face and patient smile,
With sadness we recall,
You had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
The voice is mute, and stilled the heart
That loved us well and true,
O bitter was the trial to part,
From one so good as you.
You are not forgotten, loved one,
Nor will you ever be,
As long as life and memory lasts
We will remember thee.
We miss you now, our hearts are sore,
As time goes by we miss you more,
Your loving smile, your gentle face,
No one can fill your vacant place.
—Lovingly remembered by husband and family.

Saturday—Poppy Day—Buy a Poppy.

Every year the Canadian Legion holds a sale of poppies and wreaths a few days before November 11th which is, as you all know, their sacred Day of Remembrance. This year the sale of poppies will take place on November 9th.

From time to time people remark, "Just where is all that money going that we pay out for our poppies?" It is a natural question, but the Legion believes in doing its good work in a quiet and unobtrusive manner. To advertise its good work in a quiet and unobtrusive manner. To advertise the individual cases benefited by it would cause pain and embarrassment in some instances. However, the public is entitled to know in what manner the funds are disposed of and this explanation will serve to enlighten them somewhat.

The appeal for funds is not made on behalf of the Legion or its members, but on behalf of all ex-service men who are in need. The collection and administration of the Poppy Fund has been entrusted to the Canadian Legion. This, however, does not mean that the Poppy Fund is part of the funds of the Legion. It is kept entirely separate and is not even treated as a part of the relief fund. It is rather considered as a trust fund which the Legion administers for the benefit of all ex-service men and women. In granting relief, members of the Legion receive no special preference, but all veterans stand on an equal footing. Any man or woman who has served and is in legitimate need may benefit from this fund.

The poppies and wreaths which you will be asked to buy are made by disabled veterans. These men are absolutely incapable of earning a living in any other way, and but for this industry would be a charge on the public funds. If Poppy Day did nothing but keep these men self-supporting and self-respecting citizens it would still be worthwhile.

The organization of Poppy Day, by the sale of poppies and wreaths, the handling of monies collected, the investigation and relief of all applicants, are done by voluntary workers. No man or woman connected in any way with this receives one cent as wages, salary, bonus, commission or any other form of remuneration. All monies collected are placed in a special account which is controlled by a Board of Trustees of each branch. Every expenditure made is approved by the Board. Every applicant for relief is investigated carefully but sympathetically. Relief may take the form of food, clothing, fuel, rent or medical assistance. It is practically never issued in cash.

The blood red poppy is called the Flower of Remembrance because it grows in great numbers on the shattered and torn battlefields of France and Flanders. It covered the first rough graves of our soldier dead. This Flanders poppy is a sacred emblem, a symbol or sign that we remember Canada helped to keep safe the things we value — justice, liberty, and the faith that right must triumph over might.

At a time like this one does well to remember the quotation, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

And so to show that we have not forgotten, buy a poppy and wear it proudly.

International Show Opens Next Month.

After a war-time lapse of five years, the country's largest agricultural show, the International Live Stock Exposition and Horse Show, will be held in Chicago from November 30th to December 7th.

It will take place at the Chicago Stock Yards in the International Amphitheatre, which for the past four years has been occupied by the Army and used for military purposes.

Record Exhibits Expected.

Those in charge of the Exposition report that the early entry is the best sign of the 46 year history of this event. They predict that by the close of entries for the livestock classes on November 1st, more than 12,000 head of cattle, horses, sheep and swine will have been registered for the "Victory" show.

They will represent 29 breeds, comprising four breeds of beef cattle, 11 of sheep, 3 of swine, and 5 of draft horses. There will also be several hundreds of the best pleasure horses and ponies of the United States and Canada, competing in harness and under saddle, in the International Horse Shows. Horse shows are scheduled for every evening and on five afternoons during the eight day run of the exposition.

One of the big features of the Exposition will be the International Grand Live Stock Feeding Contest in which farm boys and girls will exhibit wisdom of food, care, handling and loss of feed in a feeding contest. This event, the grandest of its kind, will be held on the opening day, Saturday, November 30th.

Shearing Experts Compete.

The country's champion sheep shearers, both junior and adult, will compete for national titles in a shearing competition. The adult contest is open to all competitors, the junior to farm boys who have qualified for participation by winning state contests earlier in the year.

At the last full International Live Stock Exposition, which closed at midday, December 6th, 1941, a few competitors, the attack on Pearl Harbor, and the entry of the United States into the war, had prevented the exhibition from being held.

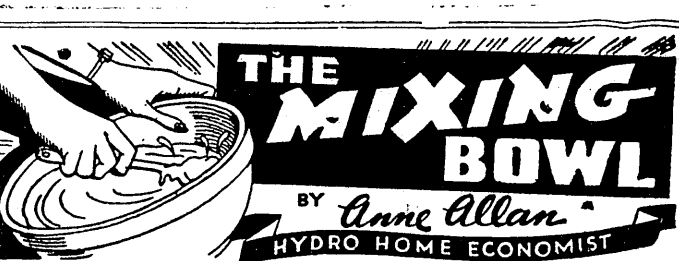

Included in the program of the Exposition is the International Grand and Hay Show, the world's largest competitive farm equipment competition. According to the management, entries for this contest will be accepted until November 10th.

Dress Show Bars Women Buyers

GLITTERING EVENING GOWNS that seem to have gone back a hundred years or so for their inspiration were on show when 150 manikins displayed the latest British fashions at the Royal Albert Hall, London. Buyers from all over the world attended the midnight parade of the Guild of Creative Designers, the organization of the evening British couturiers, but the British women present could only watch the gowns drift by—clothes rationing still prevents their enjoying such tempting morsels of feminine attire.

Hello, Homemakers! Actions must give vent to our feelings, spurring us on to live happily together. Happiness in the home is reflected throughout a community. And helping one another is one of the most unselfish ways of maintaining peace.

As captain of the household we suggest a few ways and means by which you can make home well remembered.

1. Your next-door neighbour could possibly use an extra basket of fruit or vegetable which you may have in abundance. The old saying, "waste not, want not" should be a forethought.

2. That jar of sour cream or any other product which you do not use may be valuable to someone else. Phone your friends.

3. Before you become too tired to think during the busy week ahead, consider where you have been losing energy and time. Let things go by the board until you have re-adjusted your work. It may be that you require a basket to hold all the cleaning equipment for the upstairs work—and there should be one around at this season. It may be that your kitchen table is too low and causes you to stoop. This can be remedied with the heavy castors which should be noted on your shopping list. One could write down many "wants" but little things do help.

4. Create a beauty spot in your living room with pieces of shrub or evergreen.

5. One of the best amusements for children on a rainy day is showing them how to make their own story book using scissors, paste pot and old magazines.

6. During the busy summer you did not have time to read. Now is the time to devote a little while every day to this pleasure.

7. Store materials separately. Summer wool sweaters must not be wrapped with rayon fabrics. And according to research, the best method is to place garments in a bag or box so that they will be protected from the light and dust without making the bag or box airtight.

8. Initials on your belongings will solve a problem if you are taking laundry over to put in with mother's, or the neighbour's.

9. Do not depend upon poor light when you are doing close work. Leading authorities agree that inadequate lighting can cause fatigue and eye strain.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. J. T. asks: How much cocoa do you substitute for 1 square of chocolate?

Answer: Use 3 tablespoons cocoa plus 1 teaspoon shortening to substitute for 1 square chocolate.

Mrs. N. L. asks: How to remove peach stain from blue tie.

Answer: Soak immediately in sweet milk.

Mrs. M. W. asks: How to soften paint brushes.

Answer: Soak in vinegar.

Mrs. C. G. asks: Do cooked peanut hulls harm a child?

Answer: Peanuts should be given to children in small quantities as they may cause indigestion. Hulls are removed by rubbing on a board with a damp cloth.

Mrs. B. A. says: Half a cup of fruit juice poured over pork chops baked in the oven makes them delicious.

Canadians Are Prominent as Sugar Researchers.

On September 26th, in Montreal the most representative gathering of the sugar industry's executives, scientists and technicians ever to assemble in Canada attended a banquet and directors' meeting of the Sugar Research Foundation. This was the first time the Foundation had convened outside of the United States. Sugar companies of U. S., Canada, Cuba, Hawaii, Haiti and Puerto Rico formed this organization three years ago, to discover the dietetic characteristics as well as possible new uses of sugar through scientific research. President Ernest W. Greene, of New York, presided over the meetings, and the progress of research to this date was reported by Dr. Robert Hockett, the Foundation's Scientific Director. All Canadian sugar companies were represented. Representation was also from United States and West Indies.

Highlights of the session were addresses by the two Canadian scientists who have received grants from the Foundation to conduct research. Dr. I. M. Rabinowitch, director of the department of Metabolism and Toxicology at Montreal General Hospital, is studying the relative rates of absorption of sucrose, dextrose and levulose by the body and investigating various phases of sugar metabolism in human nutrition in health and in disease.

Dr. Hans Selye, director of Experimental Medicine and Surgery of University of Montreal, is studying the effects of diets in protecting animals from the effects of over-activity of the endocrine glands.

The laboratories of these two scientists were visited by the sugar industry's representatives, and Dr. Selye's library, the most extensive in the world on the subject of Endocrinology received much acclaim, as did Dr. Rabinowitch's diabetic clinic, one of the largest in North America.

Cheese Dishes.

With the family's favourite recipes for "Supper Dishes" in the file, the homemaker has no difficulty in planning her luncheon or supper menus. These dishes may utilize left-over meats or their basis may be such ideal meat substitutes as milk, eggs and cheese. The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, say there is a great variety of ways in which milk, eggs and cheese may be combined. They may be used in sauces, croquettes, omelets, souffles, escallops and other supper dishes. The colour, flavour and texture of cheese give an "uplift" to any meal, which is welcome at this time of the year. When mixed with bland foods, it provides that appeal, which they otherwise lack.

Cheese is also an economic food in concentrated form, with every crumb edible. For cooking purposes select according to flavour and consistency. A hard cheese is preferable for grating, while softness is a desirable quality for melting or cutting. Hardened and thoroughly dried pieces may be grated, bottled and kept in a cool place ready for use.

Cheese and eggs both require low heat for cooking. High temperatures give a tough product. When these two foods are combined and cooked in the oven, best results are obtained by "oven-poaching." This means setting the mixture to be cooked in a pan of hot water.

Cabbage, Tomato and Cheese Dish.

- 1 1/2 cups finely shredded cabbage
- 1/2 cups canned tomatoes
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 cup grated cheese
- 1 cup bread crumbs
- 2 strips bacon, chopped finely (optional)

Cook shredded cabbage for five minutes in boiling, salted water and drain well. Heat tomatoes and add salt, paprika and sugar. Grease a baking dish and place alternate layers of tomatoes and cabbage, beginning with tomatoes. Sprinkle each layer with grated cheese and bread crumbs. Sprinkle chopped bacon over top. Bake in a moderate oven, 350°F. for about half an hour, or until crumbs are brown. Six servings.

Luncheon Casserole.

- 1 1/2 cups dried lima or navy beans
- 4 cups boiling water
- 1 small onion, sliced
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1 1/2 cups milk
- 1/2 cups flour
- 1 cup grated cheese
- 2 tablespoons catsup or chili sauce
- 2 hard cooked eggs
- 1/2 cup soft bread crumbs

Soak beans overnight in water to cover. Drain. Add boiling water and onion. Cover and cook over low heat until tender and very little liquid remains. Add salt and pepper. Heat 1 cup milk in top of double boiler. Blend flour with remaining 1/2 cup cold milk, and add to heated milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Add 1/2 cup grated cheese and stir until melted. Add the catsup or chili sauce, season with salt and pepper and add the cooked beans. Pour half this mixture into a greased baking dish, cover with sliced eggs and add remaining bean mixture. Sprinkle top with bread crumbs which have been mixed with the remaining 1/2 cup of cheese. Bake in a moderate oven, 350°F. for 20 minutes or until the cheese is melted and mixture is heated. Six servings.

Macaroni and Sausage Casserole.

- 2 1/2 cups macaroni, 1-inch pieces
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup grated cheese
- 6 large, pan-fried sausages, cut in pieces

Cook and drain macaroni. Beat eggs until light, add milk and salt. Add this mixture to the macaroni and blend in cheese, reserving a little for topping. Place half of the macaroni mixture in a well-greased baking dish. Cover with sausages and top with the rest of the macaroni mixture. Sprinkle top with remaining cheese. Place in a pan of hot water and oven-pouch in a moderate oven, 350°F. until set, about 1 hour. Six servings.

NOTE: Diced Bologna or Wieners may be substituted for the sausage.

Sanitary Garbage.

Warning that scavengers are a menace to public health has been issued by the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. In a call on all householders to deposit their garbage only in substations, the Department states that the health authorities point out that strays, including such notorious carriers of disease as rats, more easily attack loose garbage, or material discarded only in paper parcels or cardboard cartons.

Snore Less.

Snoring, so often accepted as inevitable, should receive medical attention, declares the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. In a bulletin, the health authorities state that snoring is common among sufferers from some form of nose blockage, and that persistent snorers should see their family doctor for corrective measures.

New Development in Farm Equipment.

Many new developments in the farm equipment field have yet to reach the farm in volume due to conditions over which the producers have had little control. As the material and labour situations improve, however, farmers may expect an increased flow of new machines, many of improved design, says J. M. Armstrong, Agricultural Engineer, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. A notable trend is to tractor-mounted equipment with new power-take-off applications including hydraulic controls. Ingenious mountings for quick change of equipment have facilitated design of higher and more complete lines of implements and tools to allow full utilization of the tractor.

These include mounted ploughs, cultivators, row crop seeders and planters, sprayers, together with a tractor mounted grain combine, a potato digger and sugar beet harvesting equipment; tractor mounted manure loader, shovels and power post augers.

Farm tractors in the one plough size, developed by several firms, should fully meet the power requirements of the smaller farm. Gasoline engines with fuel-injection pumps are being studied. Efforts are being made to build smaller and lighter diesel tractors; to improve a power transmission and to provide a power take-off for wheel tractors which will operate independently of the main clutch. This would facilitate spraying, haying and other operations.

In tillage equipment there are new rotary tillage machines, new varieties of blade weeder and improved designs of one-way discs. A weeder fired with liquid fuel has now become available and will shortly be tried on various crops at the Central Experimental Farm.

Spraying equipment developments include straddle mounting of tanks on a tractor and the use of rotary pumps which have been used successfully for chemical control of weeds and are being tried for insect control and plant diseases. An improved style of liquid-duster has also become available. This machine consists essentially of a turbine type fan into which dust is fed and the air blast used to atomize a liquid spray which serves as a sticker for the dust or the machine, may be used as a sprayer only. The Experimental Farms have just conducted a number of tests in Eastern and Western Canada with this type of equipment on chemical control of weeds with encouraging results.

Harvesting equipment is the line of machinery in which there is possibly the greatest number of innovations. Haying tools include a variety of buck rakes, combination loaders, stackers and power shovels. Forage crop harvesters which cut the standing crop and reduce it to ensilage lengths or pick-up hay from the windrow to produce chopped hay are available, as well as several styles of one-man field balers which automatically tie the bales. Bale loaders, ensilage blowers and wagon lifts or unloaders are auxiliary equipment. One style of forage crop harvester with corn attachment, used on the Central Experimental Farm for two seasons, has proved reasonably well adapted for chopped hay, grass and corn silage. In connection with haying methods, tests have also been made of barn drying equipment for hay. With a fan of 15,000 cubic feet capacity, hay at 25 per cent moisture was reduced to 15 per cent moisture in approximately one week.

In the line of grain harvesting equipment, the width of cut has been slightly increased in one or two small combines and a limited number of small self-propelled combines of seven-foot cut has been produced. A tractor-mounted combine has been developed as well as portable grain drying equipment.

The mechanization of sugar beet production has progressed rapidly during the war years. Precision planters have been developed to handle segmented or single seed and cross blocking attachments for the ordinary row crop cultivator have enabled almost complete mechanical thinning. Topping, lifting and loading machines and beet harvesters that top, lift and load, have been introduced. While the supply of these machines is still inadequate and some operating difficulties have yet to be overcome, the back-breaking work of handling beets on the farm should soon be a thing of the past. At the factory, mechanical unloading and handling has been successfully applied.

The developments outlined are indicative of the progress being made in mechanization of field operations. Fitting many of these new pieces of equipment to the best advantage on various sizes of farms and conditions will require patient and careful study on the part of farmers, manufacturers and Departments of Agriculture.

The Dominion Experimental Farms are making every effort to secure all available information on the subject.

Play Parade.

"Parade yourself to the playground, chum," advises the Department of National Health and Welfare, in a message to veterans. Pointing out that many men and women released from the services find difficulty in adjusting themselves to the changing tempo of occupation, once they put away their uniforms, the Department recommends recreation, sports, play, to bridge the transition period, and suggests that veterans carry on the activities in which they were interested in the forces.

Telephone Men Hold Convention.

Delegates from all parts of Ontario; from as far west as Port Arthur, from Northern Ontario and Quebec, from Windsor to the Quebec border, attended the 11th annual convention of the Canadian Independent Telephone Association, held in Toronto, on October 23rd and 24th. It was considered one of the most important and successful conventions ever held by this 41 year old organization representing the 563 independent telephone systems providing telephone service to over 135,000 urban and rural subscribers throughout the Province of Ontario, not including those served by member systems in the province of Quebec.

The plight of the very small independent systems scattered throughout the province was one of the major considerations of the Convention. Plans to co-operate with these systems to form larger systems and so finance and provide better service to their rural areas were discussed at length. The necessity of increased subscriber rates on a great many districts was stressed by many speakers. It was pointed out that many independent systems were still operating at rates established fifteen to twenty years ago. Increased costs and depreciated plant equipment were given as reasons why increased subscriber rates were necessary if service is to be continued for long in these parts of important rural Ontario.

No Wage or Salary Controls Next Year.

Present settled and agreed policy of the Government is to terminate all wage and salary controls in Canada as at December 31st, The Financial Post reports from Ottawa. This has been confirmed with top officials who say a widely circulated report, implying the contrary, is incorrect.

This decision is in line with an earlier report of Government policy made prior to the Federal-Provincial labor relations conference in the capital last month.

Still undetermined, is whether there will be any material easing of present regulations before December 31st cut-off date.

Mild Winter Forecast.

Tuesday, October 29th, temperatures reaching 75°F. the warmest October 29th in the city's history. It will be a mild winter. That is what the weather men who are the modern gadgets—say and they tend to be delirious points and such things to a hard winter.

Warm Winds Coming in and prolonging the winter. In some parts of the country they are calling it Indian winter. There have been few frosts in the east or midwest, except in isolated spots and none are in sight around here.

Nature is working over "heat wave" may not end today, Benjamin Parry, meteorologist, said at New York. Parry said that atmospheric conditions over the northern states, including those warm winds from the south to come in and prolong the winter. Usually at this time the country gets winds from the west.

The east usually has a by October 15th or a little later, except in some high spots, a flower or late vegetable crop has been killed.

Not to be credited. Parry said people should not take these stories that a long, unusually follows a prolonged summer. It just doesn't work, he said.

Funeral services for the late Mrs. R. Arner, wife of Mr. R. Arner, who died at her home, 1000, October 28th, were held at the funeral home of Crawford & Sons, 230 p.m. Rev. J. J. officiated, and burial was in the Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Prices Board Not Sure Ration to Drop.

Price Board officials are increasing attention to the plan for Canada's butter winter, but so far have no conclusion and the prospect is that there will be no change in the price of butter at least during the winter.

One Prices Board official said it was "touch-and-go" whether the Dominion would have on the ration. He said it was a decision would not be made until the 15th.

One question being closed by officials, but on which figures are yet available, is of milk consumption by the public has been cut by the subsidies on whole milk of producer and consumer in June and September has in a five-cent increase to in most provinces, but so been learned up to date, the greatly decreased consumption.

Another factor is milk per (the western provinces, mainly for Canada's surplus production is greatly affected, which of late has been able. However, this factor yet been fully assessed effect.

This year, officials had keeping the ration at that level through the summer, to maintain it at that level.

Officials this week said the "factors" entered into the situation that decision cannot be made at least two weeks.

Tuesday, October 28th, with the temperature reaching 75 degrees, was the warmest October 28th since 1873. It will be a mild winter.

Warm Winds Come.
Warm winds from the south are coming in and prolonging the summer. In some parts of the midwest they are calling it Indian summer but others think Indian summer is yet to come.

Prices Board 'not Sure Butter Ration to Drop.

Price Board officials are giving increasing attention to the question of a plan for Canada's butter ration this winter, but so far have come to no conclusion and the prospects are there will be no change in the present six-ounce ration at least during November.

One Prices Board officials states that it was "touch-and-go" whether the Dominion would have to cut back on the ration. He said it was expected a decision would not be made for a fortnight.

One question being closely studied by officials, but on which no definite figures are yet available, is the amount of milk consumption by the general public has been cut by the removal of subsidies on whole milk. Removal of producer and consumer subsidies in June and September has resulted in a five-cent increase to consumers in most provinces, but so far as has been learned up to date, this has not greatly decreased consumption.

Another factor is milk production in the western provinces, mainly responsible for Canada's surplus. Prairie production is greatly affected by weather, which of late has been unfavourable. However, this factor has not yet been fully assessed either.

This year, officials had hoped, by keeping the ration at six ounces through the summer, to maintain the ration at that level.

Officials this week said that "various factors" entered into the situation, and that decision cannot be made for "at least two weeks."

Pipe for Gas Line is Now in Windsor.

A start has been made on the dredging of the Detroit River preparatory to the laying of a pipe line for the delivery of Texas natural gas for Western Ontario.

The Texas gas will, it is expected, be delivered to Windsor April 1st for the first time. The pipe for the line from Detroit to Ojibway is in Windsor. The contract between the Union Gas Company of Canada, Limited, which controls the Windsor Gas Co., and the Panhandle Gas Co., calls for the delivery annually of 5,500,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

However, the export permit from the United States provides that gas may only be delivered seven months a year—from April 1st to October 31st. The Union Gas Company plans to install storage facilities on this side of the river so that there may be uninterrupted delivery to Canadian consumers.

Whether the natural gas will be available in Windsor for house heating purposes in the winter of 1947-48 depends entirely on the steel situation—whether the steel can be had to build the storage tanks. The gas will be available to industrial consumers as soon as delivered.

The contract for the trans-river pipe line has been let.

Minimum of 35.33 Cents is Set for Tobacco.

The market appraisal committee of the board of directors of the Ontario Flue Cured Tobacco Marketing Association agreed, on Tuesday, October 22nd, on a minimum average price of 35.33 cents for the 1946 tobacco crop.

The committee, meeting at Simcoe, set the highest minimum average price since the board was formed in 1934. This figure represents an increase of 2.08 cents over the minimum average price of the 1945 crop. In 1944 the market appraisal committee failed to reach an agreement, resulting in the market opening without any agreed minimum average price. This year's price is also an increase of five and one-third cents over that of 1943 when the minimum average was 30 cents.

With an all-time high record production in Ontario this year of an estimated 109,943,057 pounds, the growers will realize about $38,746,500 from their crop, which will be about $12,600,000 more than last year. Although last year's minimum average price was set at 33 1/3 cents the growers actually received an average of 34.9 cents, bringing the total value of the crop to $26,131,700.

The date for opening the 1946 market for members in the Delhi district or "new belt" is Tuesday, November 5th, with the date for the "old belt" of Essex County area being set for November 12th. The market for non-members of the association will open on November 15th.

Grade Prices.
The grade prices for this year's crop were set as follows: B1, 69.13; B2, 55.31; B2L, 48.39; B3, 41.48; B3L, 35.26; B4, 29.03; B5, 23.51; B6, 17.28; C2, 69.13; C3, 55.31; C4, 48.39; C5, 41.48; M1, 34.57; M2, 27.65; X2, 34.57; X3, 27.65; X4, 20.74; ND, 3.45.

Visas for Visit to Britain Next Year.

Delegates to the International Conference of Tourist Organizations now meeting in London were told recently by the United Kingdom Government's visitors to Britain. United Kingdom passport control officers and in certain cases, H. M. consular officers will be authorized to grant visas to tourists except former enemy nationals. It is too early at this stage to give precise information but the Government feels it will be helpful to all concerned to have advance knowledge. It must be made clear that the grant of visas does not guarantee travel facilities or accommodation in Britain nor does it relieve the foreign visitors of the necessity for obtaining leave to land from the United Kingdom immigration officer. Genuine tourists coming for a short visit need, however have no fear of difficulty in obtaining such permission.

For Every Citizen.

The address given by Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Reconstruction, last week to the Young Men's Section of the Winnipeg Board of Trade, has aroused much interest and speculation in Ottawa. The statisticians immediately scurried for definite figures.

Mr. Howe pointed out that the co-operation between the federal and provincial governments, between management and labour, and between government and industry in a spirit of goodwill was the essential price that Canadians would have to pay for prosperity and happiness. The main question "What are the possibilities?" and "Is it worth the price?"

The first information sought was "After one year of peace what progress has been made?" the next, "What does the future hold?"

Progress to Date.

Our national income was 5.3 billion dollars in 1939, having risen from a low of less than 4 billion during the early 1930's. It rose to over 10 billion during the war and in 1945 will reach 11 billion dollars. The best part of this story is that we have achieved a more equal division of our national income than has ever been achieved anywhere and this trend must continue.

There are today 4.8 million persons gainfully employed in Canada as against 3.8 million in 1939—one million added to our working force, with the unemployment problems well on the way to solution. In the first week of October the Department of Labour reported 144,000 unplaced applicants and 142,000 vacant positions. Since that date most of Canada's strikes have been settled and many are in sight.

Between August 31st, 1945 and the same date in 1946, 600,000 service personnel have been discharged and over 600,000 formerly engaged either directly or indirectly in war work have been absorbed into civilian pursuits.

Mr. Howe emphasized that full employment was not an end in itself but must be accompanied by high standards of living. Canadians will not be satisfied unless full employment gives them the houses that they need and other commodities that they want at a cost that they believe to be reasonable and can afford. Mr. Howe sounded a warning to producing firms which "priced" themselves out of the market by inflated prices that consumers would not pay.

Industry and Trade.

In spite of shortages and strikes great progress has been made by both industry and agriculture. A high level of economic activity has been reached and a high level of exports maintained. These have been assisted by credit arrangements by the federal government and the assertion of strong purchasing power by the people of Canada because of wartime savings and some reduction of taxation.

What of the Future?

Government at its best can only provide the good climate for economic growth—the growth itself depends on efficiency which can only be attained in an atmosphere of co-operation.

With this co-operation by government and people the outlook for 1947 is one of intense demand for goods—creating jobs and prosperity. Profits and wages must be kept reasonable so that prices of goods will always be within the reach of those who need them. The confidence and co-operation that we achieved for victory in the war is needed more than ever for our own victory in peace.

Dominion-Provincial Co-operation.
Because Canada is a federal state the national responsibilities are shared by the federal and provincial governments. It is obvious that the changes which have taken place in Canada and the world since 1867 have made out-of-date the division of responsibilities which was outlined at that time. Here it is worthwhile to review the outlying principles and objectives behind the federal proposals for new agreements with the provinces in August, 1945. Briefly they are: First, to facilitate private enterprise to produce and provide employment. Secondly to promote bold action by the state in those fields in which the public interest calls for public enterprise in national development. Thirdly, to provide through public investment, productive employment for our human and physical resources when international and other conditions adversely affect employment and, fourthly, to provide on the basis of small regular payments against large and uncertain individual risks such as unemployment, sickness and old age.

Because it is important that these things accrue to all Canadians in every section of Canada equally, there is need for Dominion-Provincial co-operation.

The Best Joke of the Week.

From the Ottawa Journal (Progressive Conservative): "We're not disposed to be too hard on those Liberals who are giving pretty clumsy explanations for their defeats in the by-elections. After all, when it comes to explaining defeats they haven't had as much practice as we have."

Ask Sittings Be Held Here.

Essex Milk Producers Will Prepare Brief.

Members of the executive of the Essex County Milk Producers' Association will meet shortly to plan the drawing of a brief which is to be presented by the Royal Commission investigation into milk prices and other phases of the milk producing and distributing industry.

Ask Windsor Sittings.
At a meeting in Essex, the association decided to invite Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, the commissioner, to hold sittings in Windsor in order to facilitate the presentation of evidence and enable the officers of the association to present the case of Essex County's 1,200 milk producers and their particular production problems. Essex County producers established that on land which could be utilized to better advantage than the growing of forage crops.

Shorter Pasture Season.
Heavily taxed by municipalities, in comparison to other areas of the province, farm land in Essex County also has a shorter pasture season as a general rule. This necessitates putting cows on a winter ration sooner than in other parts of the province and involves a larger expenditure of labor and higher cost of feed with consequently higher production costs.

Bull Brings $40,000.

Price Declared Highest Ever Paid in Canada.

Said to be the highest price ever paid in Canada for a single head of livestock, $40,000 changed hands recently at the all-Canadian Holstein sale, held at Oakville, for a five-month-old bull calf, Glenafon Killarney.

From Alliston.

The calf was bought by the Waterloo County Holstein Breeders' Club from J. J. E. McCague, of Alliston, Ont. The Waterloo Association plans to use the animal at its artificial breeding centre. Officials recalled higher prices paid in the United States, notably $106,000 for a Holstein bull owned by Senator A. C. Hardy, of Brockville, Ont., but were unable to remember a higher price being paid in Canada.

Part of the money to pay for Glenafon Killarney was raised by subscription among Waterloo County breeders.

The entire offering of 66 head brought $145,275, for an average of $2,201, said to be a new Canadian record average for a consignment sale of cattle.

Cow Brings $11,000.

Sol Cashman, Hopewell Junction, N.Y., who was the runner-up for the calf, then paid the highest price for a female, $11,000, for Sweet Little Apple Belle 2nd, sold by E. L. Sweet, of Belmont, Ont. The dam of the female holds two world and four Canadian records for butter fat production. Cashman also bought a bred heifer for $5,000.

Second highest price for a bull was $8,000 paid by Earl Hooper, of St. Marys, on behalf of a group of Perth County breeders. The animal was Sunnifolk Sovereign Souvenir, nine months old, sold by Amos Wilkinson, of Wallenstein, Ont.

Premier J. Walter Jones, of Prince Edward Island, received $5,100 for Abegweit Blonde, a daughter of his world-champion cow, Abegweit Milady. She was purchased by Bruce Thornton, of Thamesville, Ont. R. M. Berry, London, received $5,000 for Rambro Crusader Happy, a bred heifer, from George S. Henry, Todmorden, Ont.

More Than $2,000.

Prices more than $2,000 included: $3,100 paid by Eller Farms, New Patz, N.Y., for a two-month-old bull calf sold by C. J. Corsewell, Boston, Ont.; $3,000 for a six-month-old bull calf, paid by Harold Goldsmith, Maple, Ont., from R. Ray McLaughlin, Oshawa, Ont.; $2,900 for a six-month-old bull calf, sold by R. J. Polk, Kingston, by H. J. McFarland, Picton; $2,200 paid by W. L. Biddle and Son, Wauson, O., for a 10-month-old bull calf consigned by Smithhaven Farm, Woodstock. Martin But and Sons, Comstock Park, Mich., paid $2,800 to James Jackson, Norwich, Ont., for a bred heifer; R. M. Berry, London, Ont., paid $3,000 to W. J. Fawcett for a bred heifer; Bruce Thornton, Thamesford, paid $2,000 for a bred heifer to R. R. McLaughlin.

Expect Largest Corn Crop in History.

United States farmers expect their 1946 corn crop will prove to be the largest ever harvested in the history of the country. It is believed that this year's production will yield more than 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn.

H. A. Scott, Canadian Commercial Counselor in Washington, reports that near records will likely be created in the United States this year for wheat, oats, potatoes, and rice.

Second Wind.

Urging support of its national Physical Fitness campaign, the Department of National Health and Welfare compares the extra stamina of the health-wise person to the "second wind" of the athlete. By keeping fit, all through life, the Department suggests that everyone may build up a reserve of strength which will see him or her through any challenge to strength and capacity.

Because it is important that these things accrue to all Canadians in every section of Canada equally, there is need for Dominion-Provincial co-operation.

Tobacco Stripping.

When the curing of air-cured types of tobacco has been finished the next process is stripping or removing the leaves from the stalk. Handling the tobacco when it is dry results in considerable breakage of the brittle leaves. So, that stripping may be done with a minimum of damage to the tobacco, care must be exercised to make sure that it has absorbed sufficient moisture to make the leaves soft and pliable, says E. T. McEvoy, Tobacco Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Usually the weather conditions in the fall with one or two damp, misty days are sufficient to bring this about, if the ventilators in the curing barn are left open. Weather falling, a less satisfactory method is to sprinkle the floor of the barn with water, or steam, if available.

Tobacco stripping is done by hand. The stalk is grasped by the left hand (assuming that the worker is right handed) and held in a vertical position with the base up, thus leaving the leaves hanging down close to the stalk. In stripping the leaves from the stalk next to the thumb are placed over, and the thumb under, the basal part of the leaf stem. The leaf is then snapped off with a quick downward motion of the hand.

Stripping is usually done by four men, each man stripping off the leaves of one grade, such as trash, bottom, middle, or top leaves. The first man removes one or two trash or sand leaves from the base of the stalk; these leaves are small, rough and broken. The stalk is then handed to the second man who removes the next two or three leaves. These, called bottom leaves, are larger and of superior colour and texture. The third man strips off the middle leaves numbering about five or six in the case of one grade. The first man of either burley or cigar tobacco removes one or two trash or sand leaves from the base of the stalk; these leaves are small, rough and broken. Fred Scott, on Saturday, opened his new restaurant in that part of his building formerly used as a garage.

He now has one of the finest small restaurants in the county. There are four booths, seating four people each, all hand made by Leonard Nelson, local craftsman. They are made without a nail in them, and being highly polished they certainly add much to the interior of the place.

Bean Price Rise Took Effect Last Week.

Effective Nov. 3rd, farmers were to receive $2.20 for soy beans — the rate of a rise in the ceiling price of 25 cents per bushel announced by S. Murray Clark, M.P. Essex South, last week.

Soy bean prices were being sold at $1.95 a bushel and it is reported that almost two-thirds of the 1946 crop has been delivered to elevators.

Early this fall representatives of the soy bean growers sought an increase in the price of soy beans but the Wartime Prices and Trade Board refused to raise the ceiling which stood at $2.14 a bushel. Toronto and other shippers point.

About three weeks ago, a second delegation, accompanied by Mr. Clark, interviewed Wartime Prices and Trade Board officials in Ottawa and pointed out that a decrease in the yield per acre of soy beans this year and a moisture content well below the 16 percent standard was cutting into the returns of soy bean growers. About one-third of the beans processed in Canada are produced in the country and the remaining two-thirds are imported, mainly from the United States where prices range around $3.50 per bushel.

Agrees to Raise.

The board agreed to raise the ceiling and the order accomplishing this "reads that the ceiling is raised for the 1946 production" of soy beans.

At the time the announcement was made, growers wondered whether the rise in the cash price of soy beans would follow the lift in the ceiling. Mr. Clark was confident that it would.

Now, the growers are wondering about the beans they have already sold and delivered before the rise in ceiling price took effect. So far, buyers of soy beans have received no word on that score.

Ordinarily, wartime increases in farm commodity prices have been maintained via the subsidy route. Last summer, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced that the price of fall wheat had gone up and that a subsidy to meet the increase in price would be forthcoming. Elevator operators were advised that they were to pay the subsidy to growers who had sold their wheat before the subsidy was granted as well as to those who might deliver subsequently.

Hope Rise on Deliveries.

But with the Government's policy of abolishing producer subsidies for milk, it would hardly go back and grant a subsidy on soy beans in the next month. Such a move would have evoked much criticism. Consequently, lifting the ceiling a little was the only way in which soy beans could be given a more attractive price.

Whether or not processors of soy beans will pay the increased price for the beans which were bought at $1.95 remains to be seen. With the new ceiling order they can. And hundreds of growers hope they will.

James Smith Dies Suddenly.

James Anson Smith, aged 86, of 84 Erie street south, Leamington, died suddenly at his home on Nov. 3rd, from a heart attack, just as he returned from attending the anniversary service of the Leamington United Church.

Well known throughout Essex County, Mr. Smith was a former member of Leamington Council and had served on the Essex County Council for a number of years as reeve of Leamington.

Born in Hamilton, Mr. Smith first settled in Mersea Township 54 years ago and later went into business in Leamington where he operated a grocery store and later went into partnership with the late J. T. Ferguson in the furniture and undertaking business. He retired 30 years ago. He attended Leamington United Church and was a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

Surviving are one son, Rodell Smith, of Leamington, and three daughters, Mrs. Thomas Maidens, of Mersea Township; Mrs. Frank Perkins, of Detroit; and Mrs. William Gage, of Buffalo, N.Y.; three sisters, Mrs. Walter Edwards, Mrs. O. Heilic and Mrs. Charles Richards, all of Hamilton; also eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

New Machine for Spraying Orchards.

If experiments now being conducted in the Okanagan Valley in British Columbia prove successful, air blast utilization by a simple, light and economic machine may be the answer as to what future methods of spraying orchards and fields may be.

A sprayer-duster of this type has been brought into the Okanagan Valley by the Division of Entomology, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, writes Dr. Jas. Marshall, of the Division at the Summerland Laboratory, and is being operated at Summerland, Penticton, and Kelowna. It is still in the experimental stage and consequently has undergone a number of adjustments and alterations.

Even now it is not suitable for the use of the commercial orchardist. It requires a change in spraying procedure quite apart from the fact that it operates with entirely new types of spray concentrates. Nevertheless, it is less expensive, much faster, and more easily operated than a high pressure machine. At the same time, it indicates that the new type of spraying and dusting equipment will be light and moderately priced and probably operated by one or two men at a speed five to twenty times that of conventional two-gun high pressure equipment.

The future machine may utilize the air-blast principle, whereby fairly concentrated solutions or dusts, or perhaps both together are pumped or injected at little or no pressure into a powerful current of air.

Ontario Hunters Favoured.

The shooting of wild geese has been closed in Central United States for one year, while here in Ontario the season is from November 1st to January 19th, 1947. All thanks are due to The Jack Miner Sanctuary at Kingsville, because otherwise the geese would all pile up in the Southern States.

The season is closed in the middle States because of an excessive kill that took place in Illinois last fall. The idea is that if the birds are not shot at for one year they will find their way to other State Sanctuaries in the United States, and not all congregate at the junction of The Illinois, Ohio and Mississippi River.

With the season opening as usual in Essex and Kent Counties November 1st, it is hoped all true sportsmen will respect the boundaries of The Jack Miner Sanctuary, and help to see to it that there are no trespassers or violation of shooting hours. New signs each year are put up on the boundaries of The Jack Miner Preserve, so there is no excuse for ignorance as to the boundaries, which are the Second Concession Road on the south, Division Road on the east, Fourth Concession Road on the north, and McCain Sideroad on the west.

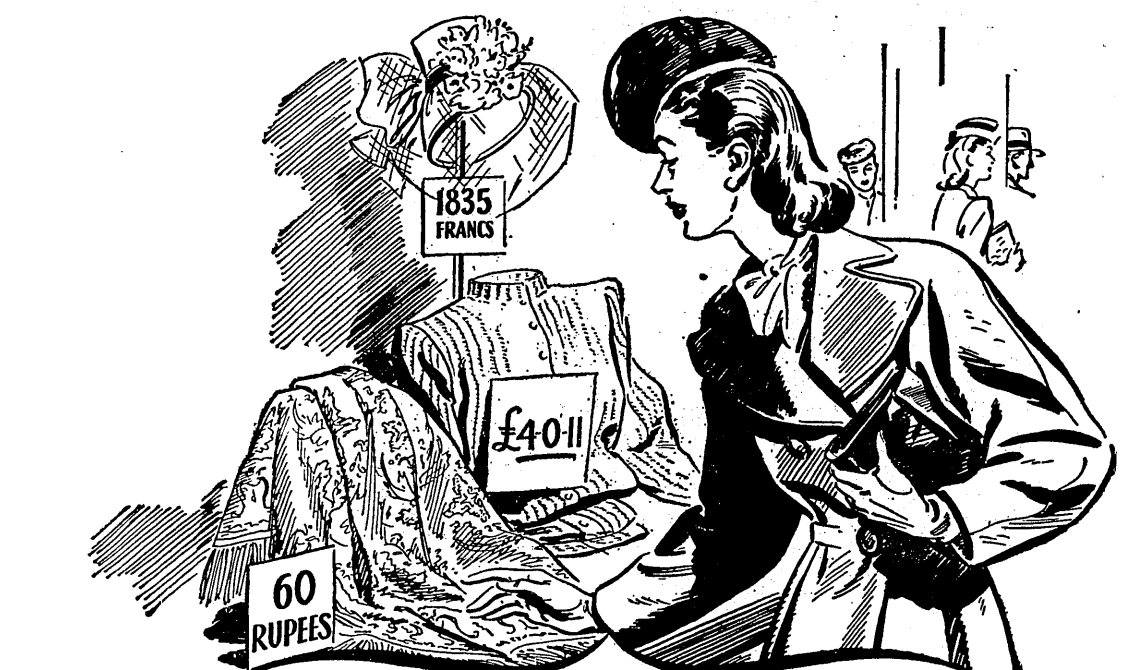

Milk Commission Starts November 18th.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Dalton Wells, Commissioner appointed to enquire into the production and distribution of milk in the Province of Ontario, stated this week that the Commission would commence its sittings on the 18th of November next. The commissioner proposed to sit first in the City of Toronto and to deal first with the history of the relevant legislation and control of milk and milk products and the operation of the Milk Control Board. Representations from interested parties in the Toronto area will not be heard in these preliminary sittings, but a further opportunity will be given at a later date after the time for filing representations has expired. A formal announcement, which will be published throughout the Province, will call for briefs to be submitted to the Secretary of the Royal Commission at Osgoode Hall, by the 21st of November.

The Commissioner plans to sit in various Ontario centres selected with a view to giving the fullest consideration to any special local conditions. Tentatively, the plan is to sit in Hamilton, London, Windsor, North Bay, Port Arthur or Port William, Ottawa and Belleville. The final public hearings will be held in Toronto. This inquiry has not been finally settled and will, of course, depend to some extent on the briefs which are submitted.

The Commissioner emphasized that the inquiry had been authorized to conduct the fullest and most complete investigation in this matter of great public concern and hoped that all interested parties would take full advantage of the invitation to submit representations on relevant facts to the Commission.

HAVE YOU ANY RUPEES IN YOUR PURSE?

Mrs. Blair has been talking for months about buying a real Indian shawl. But wouldn't she be surprised if she found it priced in rupees! That it isn't, is due in large measure to the services rendered by your bank.

When you buy imported goods in Canadian stores, you pay in Canadian dollars—but the people who made them were paid in Indian rupees, British pounds, French francs...

It is the same in reverse with exports. You may be one of the three out of every eight Canadians who make their living through goods sold abroad. If so, you receive your wages in dollars, but your products are sold in all sorts of foreign currencies.

Arranging the complicated exchange and transfer of foreign funds in such transactions is but one of your bank's many services enabling Canadians to buy and sell abroad.

Case of Etiquette.
Declaring that Etiquette is a part of mental practice and rounds out the picture of a healthy mind in a healthy body the Department of National Health and Welfare Ottawa says a good word for good manner.

"Manners in addition to making the Man makes the healthy and happy man" says a departmental bulletin. This statement is based on the assertion that the mannerly person being socially more acceptable in correspondence is happier and hence healthier.

Bylaw No. 390 for conveying the said lands to the township, and bylaw No. 391, for conveying the said land to the Legion, and Bylaw No. 392, providing for making a donation of $3,960 to the Legion, were each given first and second readings.

New Pamphlet on Poultry Feeding.

Feeding of poultry, as explained in the revised publication, No. 541 "Poultry Feeds and Feeding," issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, has been issued to familiarize the uninformed reader with the more common scientific terms in the description of the nutrients. This has been done in such a simple manner that no difficulty with technical phrases will be found by anyone studying and mixing feeds for poultry of all kinds.

Full detailed information is given about the nutrients, and the various feeds — grain, green, animal and mineral. Special chapters are devoted to feeding methods (hopper and moist mash feeding); rations for chickens; instruction for feeding turkeys; general notes on turkey feeding, together with details in feeding ducks, geese, guinea and pea fowl. A free copy of the publication may be obtained by writing to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

People Are Asking.

Q.—I have a small baby who requires evaporated milk in her diet. Some time ago when her three months' ration coupons had been used up, I applied and received the necessary coupons. This week when I applied again I was told I had to have a certificate from a medical doctor, public Health Nurse, or day nursery or Well-Baby clinic every time I apply for more evaporated milk coupons for my baby. Is this true?

A.—Yes. Recently, due to the shortage in supply of evaporated milk it was necessary to revise some of the previous procedures. It used to be that children under two years of age were given an allowance if a medical certificate was presented the first time the application was made. The allowances were then automatically renewed. Now a recognized certificate must be presented every time you apply for the coupons. This is to ensure that those urgently in need of evaporated milk are actually the ones who obtain it.

Q.—When it is so hard to get soap or shortening why isn't it sold at certain definite hours of the day and only to people who present their ration books. Many women with babies can't shop in the morning and when they do arrive at the store others have bought up all the supplies.

A.—Soap and shortening is not rationed by the Board, but the shortage is temporary and improvements are expected shortly. Merchants may adopt any plan they wish in distributing these commodities to their customers. We have no regulations requiring them to sell at certain hours or to limit their sales. They may do this of their own accord. We have discovered that many merchants have their own rationing plans and put these goods on sale at different hours of the day to best accommodate all the prospective buyers.

Q.—I saw large cans of unsweetened peaches in a store the other day and they were not rationed. Why is this when smaller cans are rationed?

A.—These peaches in 105 ounce tins were packed by canners largely for the use of restaurants or public eating places. When the supply is greater than the demand some are sold to retail outlets. However, they require so much sugar that few householders can use them efficiently. The small cans are rationed to protect diabetics who cannot have sweetened foods.

Q.—I paid 23 cents a pound for shortening. Is this price too high?

A.—The price does seem high. However, if you will give us the brand of shortening and the name of the dealer we will check. The ceiling price is the highest price asked during the basic period.

The first indication of domestic happiness is the love of one's home.—Montlosier.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP

is a lot of little things

MAKE FRIENDS OF YOUR NEIGHBORS

Living as closely in contact with one another as we must in modern cities, it's a good idea to get better acquainted with your neighbors.

After all, the welfare of the whole community depends on the harmonious co-operation of its individual members: The first step is to make friends with the people next door, across the back fence—down the street. That's a big step in the direction of "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

The Invisible Partnership.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

We have the highest authority for the statement that a house divided against itself must fall. We are quick to admit the justice and authority of this dictum. But when we state that there is an indivisible partnership in industry, we can expect no such ready acceptance. Personal interests and private prejudices and unstable thinking cloud our judgment. Maxims can be accepted and kept comfortably remote. It is not so easy to detach ourselves from old-time antagonisms and past prejudices. But unless the component parts of industry operate with reasonable unanimity, the best that we can expect is the fate of the divided house.

The partnership of industry is threefold. It is a partnership of capital and management and labor. When in days gone by, labor was sometimes exploited and one or more parties took from the partnership more than their just share they sowed the seed of an industrial revolution that almost destroyed the house. Perhaps, in the light of that fact, the attitude of labor and its leaders is more readily understandable, even if, as sometimes appears, they attempt to repeat the experiment in reverse.

But the same minds of labor and capital and management are increasingly aware that no such division can arise between the interests of the partners without the threat of disaster for all. It spells disaster when labor gets less than its share of the return for the commodities it produces. But disaster is equally near should labor demand more than its share. That can only be assured by taking from its partners. Prices are set by public demand, not by any of the three partners. Prices cannot be expanded at will.

More than that, each of the partners has a share in the actual production. While the worker is entitled to the full return for what he produces, it does not follow that he is entitled to whatever the public will pay for, say, a finished automobile. Could he, or any number of his fellows, unassisted, produce a car that could sell at a price that anyone would pay? It is highly doubtful. Before he can begin to work, there must be factories and tools and materials. That is the part of the work that capital supplies, for which it is entitled to be paid as the worker who runs a stamping press, for without capital there would be no press. So capital also is entitled to all it produces. And the wages of capital we call interest.

But you can have money to buy and equip a plant and men to run the machines without having the ability to produce a saleable product. Machines must be run efficiently, raw materials must be secured and buyers discovered. Even the producers of better mousetraps have to familiarize the public with them before that public will make a beaten path to the door. That is work of management: to relate the capital that makes work possible to the efforts of the men who do the work. So management, too, is a producer and is entitled to a wage for what it produces. No one of the partners alone can produce the product. What they receive for what they do must be related to the daring, the intelligence, and the enthusiasm involved in success, as much as to the manual labor employed.

Therefore, if labor is to have good wages, capital must have its interest, and management its profits. When one fails or gets out of proportion to the productivity of its effort, it spells disaster for all. That is the very simple equation that labor as well as capital and management must come to accept.—Liberty Magazine.

Baby Weights.

Value of weight measurement as a gauge to physical development is the subject of comment from the Department of National Health and Welfare. The Department favours the system of weighing babies frequently. This, it points out, provides valuable record of a baby's gains, and will help the family physician assess and assist the development of the child.

The results of last week's selections in the United States, when the Republican right wing party made great gains, continues to be the interesting subject of discussion and prophecy in Ottawa circles where these are a large part of social activity. There are three main questions capturing the minds of our political prophets. First, what will be the immediate effect, if any, and our Canadian economy? Second, does it indicate a trend of thought which is North American which Canadians should recognize? Third, what effect will it have on world co-operation and the work of the United Nations?

Effect on Canada?

Will Republican control of Congress affect legislation; more particularly will it direct the trend of tariff making — and if so will it be directed against Canadian farm products and tend to break the price of primary products here? Remembering the swing to high tariffs after the last war there is much to indicate that the same trend is effective now and that Canada will be forced to depend more and more on the British market and any other market we can find. Can the Department of Trade and Commerce and the Department of Agriculture find enough new markets to protect our farmers from the effect of closing of our closest external market? Will the Republican victory speed the lifting of all price controls; and if it does will it bring an irresistible pressure on the prices of manufactured goods in Canada?

It is recognized that it is only with the greatest degree of co-operation on the part of all Canadians that the present levels of prices on manufactured goods can be maintained.

Is North American Trend to Right?

The Republican party was supported strongly by the financial interests of United States and is recognized as the party of the "right" — the reactionary and the conservative. Some point to Progressive-Conservative victories in recent Canadian by-elections to prove that sentiment in Canada has also moved to the right. This opinion is strongly protested by Liberals who refuse to believe that there is any such trend in Canada. However, there is some indication that the Progress-Conservative Party, one of its principal campaign issues in the Pontiac by-election was the accusation that the Liberal Party was radical and was flirting with socialism. They pointed to Mr. Coldwell's statement that he was offered the Liberal leadership a strong denial was issued by the Liberal party as proof. Ivan Sabourin, Progressive leader in Quebec, in his speech opening his party's campaign in the by-election of Richelieu-Verchères (the late Mr. Cardin's seat) has continued the same campaign and accuses the Prime Minister, Mr. King, of socialism. The Liberal Party states emphatically that its policies of family allowances, old age pensions, price stabilization, etc., are not "socialism" but real Liberalism.

Most observers here agree that the results of by-elections to date have not been decisive enough to indicate a clear-cut trend to the right.

Effect on the World?

Those who believe that history always repeats itself point to what happened in the United States soon after the first world war when Democratic President Wilson was defeated with its effect in isolating the country from world affairs and eventually killing all possibilities of world co-operation through the League of Nations. Will the same pattern be followed by the Republicans of 1946 or has the lesson of the great depression been learned? Many point to the fact that there is now no essential difference in foreign policy between the two main political parties in the United States to prove that the elections will not have any effect on the objectives of the United Nations. Unfortunately there is much to indicate that the isolationists still have a great deal of influence in the Republican Party and that they pay only lip service to the ideas of "one world."

Will the Republican victory increase the tension between the United States and Russia? There are many who fear it will and there is general recognition that this would place Canada in an awkward position.

Perhaps the outstanding side issue of the United States political campaign was the question of the fate of third parties. Only one third candidate was elected when Vito Marcantonio a labor-democrat, retained his seat in New York. It is obvious that the people of our great neighbour state are strongly attached to their historic political parties.

Of Interest.

Canadians are watching with interest the public reaction in Britain and the United States to the information that has leaked out concerning the military conscription policy of Britain's Labour government. Introduced as a war-time measure compulsory service is now to be extended by the Labour government as a permanent peace time policy. Eighteen months

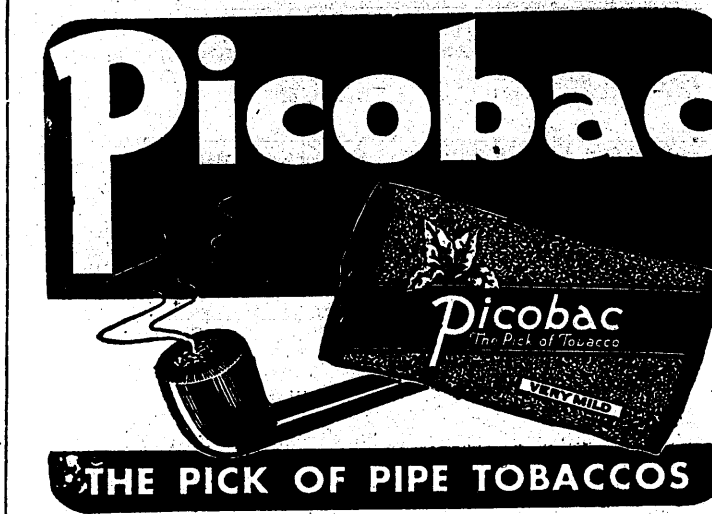

Fitness and Obligation.

Declaring that there is a direct relationship between health and weight, the Department of National Health and Welfare advises everyone to find out how they "stand on the scales of life." Depending upon one's type of body structure — height, build, etc., there are ideal weights. The department states, further, that it is better for a young person to be overweight than underweight, but that putting on weight is a more serious matter for older people.

Work and Thrive.

To be healthy and happy people must be fully occupied. The Department of National Health and Welfare emphasizes this fact in urging everyone to take up hobbies to occupy their spare time if their normal work does not absorb them entirely. "Man may still, in rare instances, earn his daily full time military service will be required from every physically fit young man. The question is asked, "Will this increase the numbers who want to emigrate from the old land?"

bread by the sweat of his brow, but actually only a small percentage of people use their full physical and mental capacities in their daily labour" says a departmental bulletin.

$100,000,000 for more TELEPHONE SERVICE

This year's outlay of 38 millions is part of our 100 million dollar construction programme planned to the end of next year. Practically every Bell Telephone exchange in Ontario and Quebec will benefit in some important way by the expansion of telephone services between now and 1950.

Local Service

On V-J Day, 92,000 persons were waiting for telephones. New orders were coming in faster than they could be filled. We have connected 140,000 additional telephones since then, yet there are still 75,000 people waiting for service.

Central Exchange Equipment—At present seven out of ten of our telephones are dial. Most of the dollars we are planning to spend on local service will be for dial equipment.

The making of dial equipment, discontinued during the war, started again last year. Enough was built to connect 20,000 additional dial telephones in 1945. That figure will be doubled this year. After that there will be enough to connect 100,000 dial telephones a year.

New central exchange equipment will cost $13,000,000

Local Lines—Cable production will provide two billion feet of wire a year to carry local calls.

New local cables, wires, poles and underground ducts, will cost $22,000,000

Telephones, Inside Wires, Private Switchboards—This year we will receive over 125,000 telephone instruments. The 1947 output will be over 200,000. New telephones, telephone booths, private switchboards and inside wire will cost $28,000,000

Long Distance Service

Out-of-town calls have almost trebled since 1939. We now connect over fifty million Long Distance calls a year.

Long Distance Switchboards—100 Long Distance switchboard "positions" will be built this year. Next year we will install 300 more. New long distance switchboards will cost $3,000,000

Long Distance Lines—Our underground cable construction will provide stormproof lines all the way from Quebec to Windsor—with similar connections to the United States.

New apparatus to carry twelve telephone conversations at the same time over one pair of wires will be installed between Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa and other points. More open wire lines are being erected. New long distance lines will cost $17,000,000

Land and Buildings

Many of our present buildings will be extended and a number of new buildings erected. New building will cost $11,500,000

Tools and Vehicles

To install this new equipment and look after it we will enlarge our stock of tools, our fleet of motor vehicles and other working equipment. New tools and vehicles will cost $5,500,000

Total $100,000,000

The overall aim of this $100,000,000 construction programme is to provide the best telephone service at the lowest cost.

Combine-Thresher Straw.

Heavy straw left by the combine-thresher has up to the present been commonly disposed of by burning.

While this practice may facilitate the preparation of land for a succeeding crop, states the Dominion Experimental Farm, Brandon, Man., it is contrary to all principles of soil conservation and should be discouraged at all times.

GUEST SINGER

The guest artist on the Northern Electric Hour on Monday, November 18, will be Edmund Hockridge, baritone. Possessing a voice of exceptional quality and range, he will sing "Gwine to Hebb'n", a Negro spiritual, and a special arrangement of "My Heart Stood Still".

Court of Revision on Assessment Roll.

Monday, November 11th. The Court of Revision of the Town of Essex, sat in the Council Chamber, at 8 p.m., with Messrs. A. E. Benson and J. R. Linton present. Each subscribed to his oath of office.

The Clerk reported receiving six appeals, as follows:

Nicholas Boldin appealed against a raise of $100 on his home (lot 34, plan 236), on St. James street. The Court reduced assessment from $150 on land and $700 on building, to $150 on land and $650 on building.

Chester Stotts, in appealing against his assessment (lot 43, plan 181), the corner of Alice and Conter streets, stated that the assessment had been raised over $600 and he had not improved the property any within the last year. After discussion the assessment was reduced $200, from $275 on land and $2,000 on building to $275 on land and $1,800 on building.

Mr. Brown, agent for the British-American Oil Co., advised the Court that his Company was appealing on a raise of $375 on land value on their property on Talbot street.

The assessor explained that the land, on which the building stood, was 85 ft. frontage, which is assessed as a business property, at $30 per foot, while the vacant piece of land measuring 65 feet, is assessed at only $15 per foot. This makes a total land assessment of $3,525. The increase was due to an error made in previous years as to amount of land covered by the building.

Mr. Brown was satisfied with explanation and the Court confirmed assessment.

Wilfred Bauer addressed the Court, stating that the assessment on his property had been more than doubled and he could see no reason for the sudden raise.

The assessor advised the Court that the land was valued along that section of Laird avenue at $2 per foot and that Mr. Bauer had 200 ft. frontage. This made up part of the increase.

The buildings he had measured and valued at $600 for the home and $200 for the garage and hen house, the latter two had evidently been missed in previous years.

After some consideration the Court reduced the assessment on buildings from $800 to $600.

P. Vanstone appealed against the assessed value of the 16 ft. alley deed to him by the town, basing his assessment on the land on both sides of this piece of land. He had 309 ft. frontage on Brien avenue, assessed at $400, while the 16 ft. had been assessed at $100.

Assessment of the 16 ft. alley reduced to $50.

A. H. Plant, solicitor, advised Court he represented J. Fred Sadler, who was out of town, and that he and his client were asking for a rebate of 1946 taxes, paid on n w pt 6 plan 181, on Talbot street, in respect to that share of the taxes that were levied on the two apartments above the Prince store and Ward's Meat Market. These apartments have been vacant all year and will be vacant the balance of 1946 at least.

He was not asking for any rebate for the four months the stores were vacant due to the fire which occurred October 9th, 1945.

F. B. Geddes, in representing the town, read from the statutes, "that if building is not separately assessed, no rebate can be given; also a clause that if owner hasn't endeavoured to have property occupied." Mr. Plant stated that as to last clause his client cannot get material to finish the flats for occupancy, while as to first clause, the upper half and bottom half of the building were entirely separate.

After a lengthy discussion, both Dr. Benson and Mr. Linton stated they were not ready to make a decision, and asked for more time, so Court was adjourned to Monday, November 18th, at 8 p.m.

Annual W. M. S. Fall Rally. Association.

Nearly two hundred delegates and members of the W. M. S. attended the sectional rally, held in Essex United Church, on Wednesday, October 30th, with Mrs. J. C. Pennington, Presbyterial president, in the chair.

The morning sessions opened with devotions, conducted by Rev. R. H. Parr, minister of Essex church, with Mrs. J. W. Blisley at the organ.

The convention was indeed favoured in having as guests five Conference Branch officers, viz, Mrs. L. C. White, of Talbotville; Mrs. H. Childs, of London; Mrs. G. E. Ashton and Mrs. W. F. Purdy, of Windsor, and Mrs. C. Fagan, of Kingsville.

Discussion groups were led by Mrs. Childs and Mrs. Ashton, for auxiliaries the younger groups, and many points were brought out which were helpful to leaders in these departments. A splendid assortment of good literature was available at the literature table, in charge of Mrs. R. Raymond and Mrs. C. Fagan.

Mrs. White's address on Stewardship, was one of the highlights of the day. She defined Stewardship as "the practice of systematic and proportionate giving of time, abilities and material possessions based on the conviction that these are a trust from God to be used in His service for the benefit of all mankind."

The financial position of the Society was received by Mrs. Purdy, of Windsor, and Mrs. Malott, of Cottam, who urged all to do their best in meeting the allocation assigned to them and even doing better if possible. It was stated that the givings of Essex Presbyterial had increased $1,000 a year in the past four years.

The afternoon devotions, led by Miss Hazel Adsett, of All People's Mission, opened with the beautiful prayer hymn, "Breathe on Me, Breath of God," the theme of her brief message being "Be still and know that I am God."

Mrs. H. A. Walsh, speaking on Temperance and Christian Citizenship, stressed the need of doing all possible in training the youth in the proper channels so that they may become citizens of which Canada can be proud. "Home Missions" was the subject of Mrs. White's afternoon address. "It is well for us to look at our home fields," she said, "and see how our gifts are being used in our own country." We have 201 missionaries, 96 institutions, 60 racial groups, 10 boarding schools, 9 Indian stations, 12 hospitals, 36 community centres in the East, and 20 in the West and 9 Oriental stations, all supported by the W. M. S. In addition to these we have a Sunday school of the mail and air, which reaches those in very remote areas. In closing, Mrs. White told of a recent visit to Algoma Presbyterial, when she and others of the Branch Executive visited many of the outlying churches near Sault Ste. Marie and on St. Joseph's Island, bringing encouragement to the workers there.

The guest speaker in the afternoon was Mrs. Myrtle Fune, recently returned from French Indo-China, who gave a most interesting account of her experiences in that country during the past eleven years, and particularly during the war years. She especially urged the W. M. S. members to keep praying for the missionaries at the front for that is an effectual ministry and means so much to those who are so far from home.

The program closed with the drama, "India Calls," written by Mrs. Childs, and with the following ladies taking part, Mrs. L. C. White, Mrs. T. D. Walcott, Mrs. W. F. Purdy, Mrs. R. Raymond and Mrs. J. McCuat.

Increasing Use of Fertilizers, Lime.

An indication of the increasing extent to which fertilizers have been used by farmers in Canada in recent years is given in the latest annual report of the Agricultural Supplies Board and the Agricultural Food Board.

The consumption or use of fertilizers of all kinds in Canada in 1945 was 600,000 tons compared with 550,000 tons in 1944, 500,000 tons in 1943, and 275,000 tons in 1939.

Assistance to farmers buying fertilizers in the five Eastern Provinces and in British Columbia to the extent of paying the freight cost in excess of $1 per ton up to a maximum of $2.50 per ton unless a higher rate was specifically authorized has been in effect since 1931. This policy which ended June 30th, 1946, had the effect of equalizing generally the cost of fertilizers to farmers.

So as to equalize the cost of fertilizers and to prevent a rise beyond the price ceiling, the Fertilizers Administration, through the Commodity Prices Stabilization Corporation, subsidized imported and domestic materials used in the manufacture of fertilizers.

Another means of increasing field crops production in the Eastern Provinces and British Columbia was the support given by the Agricultural Supplies Board to the production and distribution of ground limestone. One-half of the cost of both production and distribution was given through the Board. The money was used to reduce freight costs from the quarries to the farmers and also for developing the quarries.

As a result of this policy, started in 1943, the supply and use of agricultural lime advanced from 175,000 tons to 450,000 tons in 1945.

Perfect conformity to the will of God is the sole sovereign and complete liberty.—D'Aubigne.

MANLY F. MINER.

The many friends of Manly Miner, president of the Jack Miner Migratory Bird Foundation of Kingsville, will be interested in a recent honour which has come to him. At the meeting of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, held in Montreal this fall, Mr. Miner was elected to be a member of the Senate—the Board of Regents—of Alma College, St. Thomas.

It was four years ago that Alma College honoured the late Jack Miner by establishing a Scholarship carrying his name "The Jack Miner Scholarship," to be awarded annually, with his granddaughter, Wilhelmina Conklin Miner, being chosen as the first recipient.

One can thus see at a glance the very warm and kindly feeling Manly Miner would have for Alma College.

The general committee in charge of all United Church colleges can rest assured that with Mr. Miner as a member of the Alma College Senate, they have a man who will at all times, under all circumstances, give his best to further the interests of this wonderful college for girls.

May Now Export Clover Seed

Canadian alfalfa seed, notable for its hardness and high quality, may now be exported to any country, the Dominion Department of Agriculture announced on October 24th. The only formality now to be met by Canadian exporters is to have an export permit issued by the Export Permit Branch, Department of Trade and Commerce.

For the past few years, due to the world supply of alfalfa seed being short, the Seeds Committee of the International Emergency Food Council, which controlled all exports, restricted shipments to specified countries. Following a meeting of the Council this week in Washington, the agriculture Department at Ottawa was advised that alfalfa seed has been taken off the allocation list.

Production of alfalfa seed in Canada from the 1946 crop is estimated at about nine million pounds. Domestic requirements can be fully met with about five and a half million pounds leaving about three and a half million pounds available for export.

The principal market for Canadian alfalfa seed is the United States, though the seed is in demand in the British Isles and European countries because of its known hardness and good quality.

The situation concerning red clover seed is that the present world supply is not more than 60 per cent of requirement and consequently it has been allocated, with the Northern countries of Europe and the British Isles getting top consideration. Canada will have about two and a half million pounds available for export, from a crop in 1946 of seven and a half million pounds.

The Export Permit Branch Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, is now in a position to deal with applications to export seeds of alfalfa and red clover.

Household Storage of Fruits and Vegetables.

Household storage of fruits and vegetables is not a difficult matter if a few simple rules are carefully followed. These rules, with much additional information on storage will be found in two publications of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, namely No. 632, "Household Storage of Fruits and Vegetables," by the Fruit and Vegetable Division, Marketing Service, and No. 748, "Construction and operation of Home Storage for Fruits and Vegetables," by W. T. Phillips, Division of Horticulture.

All fruits and vegetables selected for winter storage should be well grown, fully mature, and free from damage caused by insects, disease, rough handling, mechanical injury, freezing and chilling. Great care must be exercised in grading and sorting the produce in order to eliminate the decayed specimens. It is essential that all specimens be thoroughly dry and clean because moisture allowed to remain on the produce induces decay. During the storage period, all the fruits and vegetables should be sorted regularly and defective specimens completely removed from the storage room. Refuse allowed to remain in the storage causes contamination of sound stock.

For those who desire a more ambitious scheme for storage than a fenced-in corner of the cellar, plans for a modernized storage equipment will be found in publication No. 748. A copy of both publications may be obtained by writing to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Many secrets of religion are not perceived till they be felt, and not felt but in the day of a great calamity.—Jeremy Taylor.

Oil of Joy.

After playing a round of golf with a friend, the writer once lent him his bicycle on the main road about half a mile from the links. On recovering it later he found a note fastened to it, saying: "Thanks. Give it some oil." Only then did he realize that imperceptibly the bicycle had grown stiffer and harder to ride, and indeed needed lubrication.

Thought can be oiled as well as bicycles and with equally good results. The Bible emphasizes this fact. Isaiah speaks of "the oil of joy" and "the garment of praise." He knew well that joy and gratitude, faithfully expressed, dissolve and replace the stubborn heaviness, rigidity, inflexibility, sorrow, and pain which seem to accompany so much of human existence.

In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 592) Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, defines the spiritual meaning of "oil" as "Consecration, clarity, gentleness; prayer; heavenly inspiration." Occasions arise in human relationships when a little of the oil of charity and gentleness is greatly needed to overcome the friction of personal antagonisms, opinions, and desires. But can love, prayer, gentleness, inspiration heal a discordant physical or moral condition? Here is an illustration.

A woman was suffering from badly chapped hands. They were dry and split in little cuts and much swollen. She searched her thought for the erroneous thinking which was causing this unpleasant condition, and she asked one of her household to help her. The latter suggested gently that perhaps she needed to use more of the oil of joy and gladness. Then she saw she had been making very heavy weather of some work she was doing for her church. Silently she changed her thinking about it and began to rejoice. The next morning her hands were entirely healed, with no sign of the previous day's condition. The "oil of joy" had done its work. Prayer and inspiration had liberated her—Christian Science Monitor.

"Forward With Canada."

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police—the Mounties. For more than seventy years they have kept law and order, and true to their motto, maintained the right. Such is the dramatic opening to the "Forward With Canada" feature, narrated by John Drainie, to be heard on the Northern Electric Hour on Monday, November 18th. The story, entitled "Northern Patrol," tells about the Mounties' longest patrol—the longest patrol ever made by any police force.

The guest artist of the evening, Miss Zara Nelsova, outstanding young cellist, will be heard in her interpretation of "Gypsy Airs" (by Sarasate) and "The Swan" (Saint-Saens).

A native of Winnipeg, Miss Nelsova is of Russian descent—her grandfather was an operatic singer and her father a flautist—and has impressed critical audiences wherever she has appeared, including London, New York and other principal cities in the United States and Canada. Miss Nelsova will be accompanied by the Northern Electric 40-piece concert orchestra under the direction of Paul Scherman.

Heard weekly over the CBC's Regional networks and affiliated stations, the broadcast is produced by Gordon Forsyth and announced by Allan McFee.

Well Bred Hens Mean Less Feed.

Poultry nutrition and heredity determine the efficiency with which a hen utilizes feed, or, in other words, good breeding saves feed. Good breeding—inherited characteristics of high production—makes possible the transformation of a minimum of feed to a maximum of eggs.

The maintenance of poultry is the first cost in egg production, and in this regard Dominion Department of Agriculture nutritionists point out that a 6 lb. hen consume about 73 lb. of feed a year for maintenance alone, Canada.

The greater the egg production, the smaller the amount of feed required for each additional dozen eggs produced. Feed consumption in flocks averaging 150 eggs per 6 lb. hen per year is equivalent to 8 lb. of feed per dozen eggs produced.

Feed consumption in flocks which lay an average of 210 eggs per 6 lb. hen per year is equivalent to practically 6 lb. of feed per dozen eggs produced. Still less feed is required to produce one dozen eggs in flocks laying in excess of 210 eggs per hen. R. Agriculture nutritionists point out that a 6 lb. hen consume about 73 lb. of feed a year for maintenance alone, Canada.

4,315 Birds Shot on Pelee Island.

Latest reports of the 1946 Pelee Island Pheasant Shoot indicates that with some 500 shooters participating, 4,315 cock birds were taken away from the island.

These figures are reported by the Fish and Wildlife Division of the Department of Lands and Forests. Very few birds were shot by the Islanders. They were too busy caring for the guests.

Weather favoured the birds, it being cloudy, with some rain throughout the shoot. On the opening day the birds were reported to be quite numerous, there being evidence of more cock birds than for several years past. The birds were tame and if the weather had been bright with the sunshine the island had for some weeks previous to the shoot, an immense number of birds would have been shot the first half-day. The weather did give the fowling a decided advantage in tracking the birds down.

Taking a count of some 85 hunters, an average of six birds per hunter was taken. It is expected that the Fish and Wildlife Division will attempt to take a census of the birds left. It was said that previous to the shoot there was evidence of some 18,000 birds making up the bird population. The proposed census will be helpful in determining the number of birds that must be imported in order to maintain the pheasant population.

Albino Pheasant.

One pure white cock pheasant was shot and arrangements have been made to have it mounted for the township hall. No accidents were reported this year and the majority of hunters were returned home well satisfied with their bag and after saying they had spent a very enjoyable time. Applications for the 1947 shoot (if there is one) will not be accepted by the clerk-treasurer until May, 1947. It may be expected that after that date there will be the usual rush and the quota will be filled within a week or two.

Leo McCloskey Passes.

The townspeople of Essex were shocked early on Tuesday evening, when they learned that Charles Leo McCloskey, one of its most respected citizens, and well known plumber, had died suddenly in Hotel Dieu Hospital, Windsor. He had undergone a major operation on Thursday of last week, had come through the operation fine and was improving so nicely, it was expected he would be able to be brought home this week-end. Death was due to an embolism.
Leo was born in Maldstone Township, April 10th, 1885, and had lived in this district all his life. He was a graduate of Essex High School over forty years ago. He had been chair-

Hall-Colenutt Wedding.

Pink and white chrysanthemums and burning tapers formed the setting, in Gesto United Church, for the wedding, on Tuesday evening, November 12th, of Miss Martha Irene Colenutt, late of the R.C.A.F. (W.D.), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Colenutt, of Gesto, and John William Hall, Vancouver, B.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hall, of Gesto. The Rev. Clarence
E. Beacom, cousin of the bride, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a pale blue wool street-length dress, a gray hat and gray accessories. She carried a white Bible topped with gardenias, sprayed with satin streamers knotted with white baby chrysanthemums.
Miss Grace Colenutt, sister of the bride, as her only attendant, wore a pale rose wool street-length dress and a black hat and accessories, and corsage of pink and white carnations.

Harold Colenutt, brother of the bride, was best man and the ushers were Bob Colenutt and Murray Hall, brothers of the bride and bridegroom, respectively. Miss Doris Elford played the wedding music and Mrs. Bernard Neice sang "Through the Years" during the ceremony, and "The Lord's Prayer" during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony a reception for 40 guests was held at the home of the bride's brother and sister-in-law,
Mr. and Mrs. Keith Colenutt. Mrs.
Colenutt chose for her daughter's wedding an aqua dress with black accessories, while Mrs. Hall also wore a dress of aqua with black accessories. Both wore corsages of pink carnations.
Mr. and Mrs. Hall will take up residence in Vancouver.

Dental Care.

The Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, joins in urging care of the teeth. It points out, in a recent bulletin, that the great majority of people are subject to dental caries. Dentists should be consulted at least twice a year in order that decay may be detected and checked in its incipient stages.

People Are Asking.

Q. I have been told that it is an error to believe that the average farmer is a miser. Is this true?

A. There is no doubt about it. The average farmer is a miser. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his money. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his time. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his health. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his life. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his soul. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his everything.

Q. You are not correct. The farmer is not a miser. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his money. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his time. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his health. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his life. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his soul. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his everything.

Q. Yes. Before you can manufacture soap to retail it will be necessary to obtain a license and have your price approved by the W.P.T.B.

Q. I read that Donald Gordon said in a broadcast that the payment of subsidies does not mean the transfer of money from one pocket to another. I thought subsidies came out of government funds obtained from the people. Therefore I cannot understand his statement. Can you explain?

A. It is true that subsidies come from government funds collected from the people. However, they do not mean a transfer of money from one pocket to another. Let me explain. Suppose a farmer is a miser. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his money. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his time. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his health. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his life. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his soul. He is a miser in the sense that he is a miser with his everything.

Q. Brought some raisins in July for my Christmas cake. Now when I opened the package I find them unfit for use. Shouldn't I get my money back?

A.—These dried fruits should not be purchased so far ahead of the time you intend using them. They were probably in good condition when you bought them, but special cold storage methods must be used to keep them for the length of time you have had them.

Farmer Condemns Short Work Week.

John Atkins says Disaster Must Follow Producing Less for More.

Unless a reconciliation is effected between farm and factory prices, tens of thousands of our farms may be liquidated according to John Atkins, of Brantford, Ontario, who spoke at the 23rd annual meeting of the Canadian Woolen and Knit Goods Manufacturers' Association, at Montreal, recently. In his address, entitled "A Farmer Looks at Factories," Mr. Atkins pointed to the increasing divergence between the return a farmer receives and the wages paid at the present time to factory workers. The only way equity could be restored, he said, was by unprecedented production in industry which would lower costs and prices. Failing this, he believed that Canada would have to undergo "the surgery of depression."

Many city people lacked understanding of the farmer's life, problems and work the speaker felt. With greater understanding he believed there would be greater willingness to bring about adjustments giving the farmer a return in line with his investment and labour.

He outlined the long hours of hard work on a farm—starting with chores at 5:30 a.m. and pictured a tired farm family reading in their evening newspaper of the high pay and short hours demanded by factory workers.

Farm people, declared Mr. Atkins, were more contented than people in cities and towns. They wanted a fair deal, not one weighted heavily in their favour but one which would restore equity in the exchange of farm and factory labour.

CANADA'S HEALTH.

SCHOOL-CHILD CARE.

For families with school-age children, the Child and Maternal Health Division of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, has drawn up the following "Safety Rules" which, it says, should become the "order of the day" in every household:

1. Adequate rest, plus a properly balanced diet, will set up safeguards against the hazards of ill-health.

2. Never allow a child to go to school without breakfast. This invites trouble.

3. Allow sufficient time in the mornings for proper toilet habits, dressing, eating (not just stuffing) and caution the child against traffic hazards on the way to school.

4. Make sure that your child receives the "booster" dose of Diphtheria toxin. Diphtheria still kills Canada's children.

5. Protect your child with vaccination. Smallpox is almost a thing of the past here, but it can return if all children are not vaccinated.

6. Teach your child to drink at least three glasses of water daily. This aids in elimination of waste and poisonous products by washing the body tissues.

7. Dirty handkerchiefs spread disease. Teach your child the safe way — use of sanitary tissues.

RHEUMATIC FEVER.

The greatest scourge of school-age children is rheumatic fever. As an end result, it causes five times as many deaths as whooping cough, meningitis, measles, diphtheria, scarlet fever and infantile paralysis combined!

Declaring war on rheumatic diseases, National Health authorities urge constant liaison with the family physician to detect signs of trouble. Early symptoms must be treated seriously if the child is to be given a fighting chance before the disease attacks, cripples or kills. What many people shrug off as just "growing pains" in their young ones may, in fact, be the very signs for which the physician must watch.

Many cases of rheumatic disease exist in Canada and medical people know that fever wards of children's hospitals are filled with them. Rheumatic fever is a problem which must be tackled vigorously, if lives are to be saved.

TUBERCULOSIS.

Half a century ago 800 out of every 100,000 Canadians died of tuberculosis. Today the toll has been cut to 47.7 and there is hope for an even greater decline.

Those charged with leading the fight against this killer of mankind credit their achievement to concerted effort and full appreciation of the menace facing them. They believe that we will see conquest of tuberculosis in our generation. The work has been inspired by scientific inquiry which led to discovery that TB can be cured and even eliminated entirely as a threat to humanity.

VITAL STATISTICS.

Canada was the first country to adopt scientific methods of compiling and utilizing vital statistics. A national vital statistics system was established in 1920.

Under this system registration of births, deaths and marriages, through facilities of the provincial governments, became compulsory. The development of the vital statistics branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics exemplified the co-operative spirit in which provincial and federal governments have kept pace with the changing statistical picture, in order to assess the health and welfare status of the people, and to ascertain where to strive for improvement.

NOISE AND VIBRATION.

Noise, one of the many disadvantages of complex modern life, is recognized as a social evil. Centralization of traffic and industry in urban areas has so intensified destructive effects of noise and vibration as to constitute these conditions as major health engineering problems.

In appreciation of this threat to health, the Public Health Engineering Division of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, has published a careful study on "Noise and Vibration Control." This report will be available shortly, through Provincial health departments.

EYES FOR STUDY.

Poor grades at school do not necessarily indicate inferior intellect. All sorts of handicaps may interfere with the normal training of a child, and among the most common is eye affliction. In this modern age teachers are taught to recognize the child with defective vision and to make allowances accordingly.

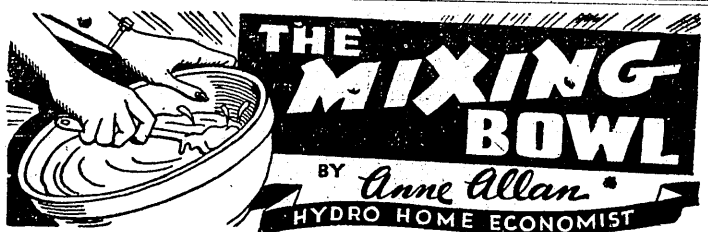

In dealing with a child's eyes, medical men give due consideration to harmful effects of unsatisfactory diet. Vision of children during convalescence from illness also calls for special care. And, at all times, children should be taught the importance of conserving vision by avoiding eye-strain.

Co-operation between teacher, parent and family physician will ensure that a child receives the requisite medical advice and supervision to provide him or her with the health and faculties needed for attention to material presented in classroom and library.

THIS TOWN GETS AROUND

This portable logging camp is now located north of Forestville, not far from Tadoussac on Quebec's north shore. But soon it will be moved to another spot in the heart of the vast Canadian timber land. A self-contained community equipped with electric light, wash rooms and other comforts, this camp will house men harvesting the winter's crop of pulpwood for Canada's biggest industry, pulp and paper.

Hello, Homemakers! Because vegetables are difficult to store in crowded housing conditions, the best use of perishable vegetables should be considered.

Take cauliflower, for instance; how good it tastes when washed, sectioned and cooked in rapidly boiling water until tender, and no longer. Sprinkled with finely grated cheese, chopped parsley or a little paprika, it makes a superb dish. Cauliflower can often be served raw in a salad bowl or instead of pickles on a sandwich plate.

Some people dislike certain vegetables because of their familiarity. Done in the same way with monotonous regularity, is it any wonder they lose their appeal? Yet to get your full quota of good health, vegetables must be included in two meals of each day for they are second on the list of protective foods.

Beet Dishes.

Boil beets in the skin for 1 to 2 hours depending on size, or peel and slice and cook in 2 cups of water. Variety of dishes include Family Favourite (diced beets with harvard sauce flavoured with cloves).

Saladventure (diced beets with sliced oranges and onions with zippy French dressing).

Red Flannel Hash (mix two cups of diced beets with 3 cups meat hash and saute together).

Man-style Beets (sliced beets in vinegar to which bay leaf, onion, peppercorns, celery seed and cloves have been added in a cloth bag).

Raw Nippy Beets are good on salads.

GREEN TOMATOES.

Dip thick slices in egg and crumbs and fry them. Our add to stews and vegetable soups for a new flavour. Molito is a Mexican dish that is wonderfully flavoured. Cook together 1 cup meat stock, (use bouillon cube), 1 chopped carrot, 3 onions, 12 green tomatoes, 2 red tomatoes (diced), 1/2 teaspoon chili powder, 2 bay leaves and piece of garlic, some salt and pepper. Simmer an hour, sieve and add 1 teaspoon butter. Bake meat balls in sauce.

FRENCH STYLE ONIONS.

5 cups small silver-skinned onions (peeled)

1 can condensed consommé pinch of pepper

3 tablespoons grated nippy cheese heat the consommé to boiling, add onions and cook until tender, about 40 minutes. Then add pepper and grated cheese just before serving.

CELERY IN TOMATO SAUCE.

4 cups celery, cut in pieces about 1 inch long
1 can tomato soup

Cook celery 15 minutes in salted boiling water. Heat condensed tomato soup and pour over celery.

World Supply Still Short of Fats and Oils.

World production, trade and consumption of fats and oils have increased materially during the past four decades. Expansion in demand has been due, in part, to technological developments leading to increased per capita utilization of oil. During World War II, blockades, enemy occupation of producing areas, and inadequate shipping seriously curtailed production and consumption of depleted stocks.

In 1946 production is still relatively small, whereas the demand is strong. Total world production of visible fats and oils available for consumption in 1946 is estimated to be about 20 per cent smaller than the pre-war 1935-39 average of 21,600,000 tons. The total quantity available for international trade in 1946 is estimated at about 3 million short-tons as compared Mint Taffy.

1 1/2 cups dark corn syrup
1 teaspoon vinegar

1 tablespoon butter
pinch of salt

1/2 teaspoon soda
3 drops oil of peppermint or spearmint

Boil corn syrup and vinegar in saucepan until mixture is at 270 degrees, or candy forms hard ball when a little is dropped in cold water. Cook slowly and stir to prevent burning. Remove from electric element, add butter, salt and soda. Stir until the candy ceases to foam. Pour in an oiled pan.

When cool enough to pull, pour the oil of peppermint into the centre of the candy, gather the corners toward the centre so that the flavouring will not be lost. Pull until candy is light in color and rather firm. Stretch into a long rope, twist and cut into small pieces. Wrap in waxed paper. Yield: about 25 pieces (1-inch long), or 1/2 pound.

The Upper Crust is Out of Fashion.

Socially speaking, the term "upper crust" has been used to refer to those folks who imagine themselves superior to others and the expression has become synonymous with "high quality."

The "upper crust" referred to here by the home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture does not, however, refer to humans, but rather to the origin of the expression — in other words, to the "high quality" top covering of a well-made pie.

In pie language, the upper crust may be out of fashion nowadays with fats still scarce, but the bottom crust can still be of top quality, tender, crisp, and good enough to eat to the last crumb.

To prevent the bottom crust from becoming soggy and tough when baking an uncooked filling such as custard, the Consumer Section suggests pre-cooking the crust for ten minutes before adding the custard, then baking the pie at a moderate temperature until the custard is set. With fruit pies, the illusion of an upper crust can be given by using the trimmings of dough and criss-crossing them over the filling.

The filling for both the lemon cream pie and the chocolate topped pie, may be served as desserts instead of being used to make one crust pies.

CHOCOLATE TOPPED PIE.

1 baked 9-inch pie shell
1 1/2 cups milk
1 envelope plain, unflavoured gelatin (1 tablespoon)

1/4 cup cold water
2 eggs

1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt

1/2 teaspoon nutmeg (optional)
1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract

2 tablespoons grated chocolate
Scald milk in top of double-boiler.

Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Beat egg yolks with sugar, salt and nutmeg if used. Add milk gradually then cook in top of double-boiler until thickened, about 10 minutes. Remove and stir in gelatin and vanilla. Chill until partially set. Then beat with rotary beater and add to stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into the baked pie shell, and sprinkle with the grated chocolate. Chill until set.

LEMON CREAM PIE.

1 1/2 cups milk

1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 baked 9-inch pie shell

2 egg whites
2 tablespoons sugar

Combine sugar, cornstarch, or flour, salt, milk and beaten egg yolks and cook in top of double boiler until thick, stirring frequently. Add lemon juice and rind. Cool custard slightly. Fill baked pie shell. Top with meringue, made from the 2 egg whites, and 2 tablespoons sugar, and brown in a moderate oven 325°F. Yield: one 9-inch pie.

BUTTERSCOTCH APPLE PIE.

1 deep, uncooked, 9-inch pie shell

10 medium apples
3 tablespoons brown sugar

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon mild-flavoured fat

3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk

Sprinkle 1/2 cup brown sugar over the bottom of the uncooked pie shell. Peel apples and slice thinly, fill the pie shell, heaping apples slightly in the centre. Cream 3 tablespoons brown sugar with the fats and the flour until well blended. Crumble the mixture over the top of the apples. Pour the milk into the pie and bake in a hot oven, 400°F., until top is brown and apples are tender, about 45 minutes. Cool and serve.

The Traffic Is Terrific!

Voices, like people, must use crowded lines and busy central stations when travelling these days.

The cause is the same everywhere—traffic has increased tremendously since war started. Manufacturers were too busy on war orders to meet civilian demands—and now—materials are hard to get.

Under these conditions, telephone people are doing a magnificent job in keeping the service standards high. Our huge extension and improvement program is being rushed through as fast as the supply of materials will permit.

Facts Affecting Your Telephone:

In 1939 we served 780,000 subscribers; today we serve 1,140,000.

Local switchboards are handling more calls than ever before.

Long Distance calls are three times as numerous as in 1939.

In 1939 we had 9,000 employees. Now we have 21,000.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP is a lot of little things

BUY ONLY TO FILL YOUR PRESENT NEEDS

Many much-needed commodities are still in short supply. There could be enough of these to go around—even though thinly spread—if we all bought only for immediate requirements. It's hard to resist temptation after so long a period of doing without things. But if we lead the way and sell our friends on the idea of sharing—not snaring—there'll soon be enough for everybody. Isn't that another worthwhile example of "Good Citizenship"?

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

U. S. Sugar Refinery Now Processes Wheat.

The sugar refinery of Suncor Corporation, in Detroit, is processing wheat instead of raw cane sugar.

The announcement states that more than 2½ million pounds of wheat syrup will be produced for use in the food industry. Company officials said they had previously produced this syrup when allocations of raw cane sugar were exhausted but in the present instance it was necessary, due to the marine and trucking strikes.

PUCE

Mrs. Moise Marchand, of Windsor, was the guest of Mrs. R. Chevalier, part of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Beasley have returned from a trip to Toronto.

Mrs. Francis Lawson was operated on for appendicitis, at Windsor, early this week, and is getting along nicely.

The sudden death of Rev. Fr. Maguire, Baillegoon, at Belle River, last Wednesday morning, just as he was about to begin mass, was a shock to all his parishioners. The ease with which death came was the crowning of a good life. The tribute of esteem in which he was held and offered to him in death was a silent eloquent sermon.

Hundreds from all over, but particularly from his former parishes, St. Alphonsus, Windsor, and St. Clements, McGregor, also from Belle River, Detroit, London and elsewhere packed St. Simon and Jude Church Wednesday and Thursday evenings while his body lay in state, and Friday morning for his funeral. The church was filled long before time for his funeral mass at 10.30. Bishop John T. Kidd, of London, celebrated the pontifical high mass, assisted by Fr. L. Pitre of Tecumseh, and Coadjutor Bishop J. E. Cody preached in both languages.

Two cousins of Fr. Baillegoon acted as deacons, Fr. Baillegoon, of Tecumseh, and Fr. H. Baillegoon, of Detroit. Honorary deacons were Fr. W. Dillon, of Windsor, and Fr. A. McNabb, of Tilbury. A priest's choir, directed by Fr. John Noel, of Holy Rosary Church, Windsor, sang the mass.

The funeral mass was held in the Belle River church, which was filled to overflowing, with the Knights of Columbus standing in two rows from the casket to the doors. Many members of the family, including the Fathers brother, Armand Baillegoon, of Tecumseh, and his sister, Mrs. Forest Burton (Rose de Lima Baillegoon) of Detroit, were present. More than 100 clergy attended and many nuns of several orders. After eulogies were read to the bishops, priests, relatives and all the funeral party by Mrs. (Dr.) Dupuis, assisted by some of the ladies of the church societies, the funeral party went to Tecumseh, where Fr. Baillegoon lay in state in his native church, St. Annes, until 3 p.m. During the services here the church was again crowded with those who held it in respect. Burial was in Tecumseh cemetery following the church service.

In Belle River, throughout the course followed by the funeral cortege, the hydro poles were banded with black cloth bands, each with a purple cross. Father Baillegoon had been pastor of Belle River church less than two years, but will be sorely missed.

The Ladies Home and School Club to Puce school held a successful bazaar and bingo in the school Friday night. Games, etc., were played.

Require Time for Adjustment.

Rev. and Mrs. David Cavers entertained the Essex United Church Presbytery Ministers' Association and the Ministers' Wives' Association at the church and parsonage on Wednesday of last week.

Rev. Charles L. Lewis, M.C., of Windsor, addressed the meeting on "The Church's Approach to Returned Personnel."

He said: "Over one million of Canada's sons and daughters put on the uniform of their country in the recent conflict. More things have happened to these people than in any other period in the history of mankind, particularly to service men and women, one third of them had no 'work' experience previous to military life. We must remember that it took a long period of time to change a boy from a civilian to a soldier and we must not be impatient if it takes quite as long to witness the transition from military to civilian life again."

He said: "The government has taken reasonable good care of the material side of our sons' and daughters' rehabilitation. Fundamentally the basic difficulty is because of emotional disturbances. Troubles come from an unaccustomed manner of life."

"We are creatures of habit and in service we were always under discipline. Some irritation and rebellion was suppressed in wartime and will manifest itself later. This accounts for the present attitude of some. Hitler's first converts were disgruntled veterans who were disillusioned, defeated and jobless. God forbid that these men who are a potential good to democracy, but can become the forces that will destroy it. If these men see that the church is doing a vital work in the community we will win them."

Americans Balk at Heavy Export of Their Sugar.

Officials Reverse Attitude Toward United Nations Food Proposals.

Growing resentment toward the sugar shortage in the United States, caused by large shipments of that commodity abroad, has arrived at such a peak that far-reaching changes in their policies are predicted. One pamphlet distributed to millions of Americans entitled, "Are You Tired of the Sugar Shortage?" — You can End It" states: "The total production of sugar in 1947 in those areas normally supplying the United States will be tremendous — over 9,000,000 tons. How much of it will you get? And how much will our Washington bureaucrats send to other shores?"

This year, the United States pooled its sugar supplies with the U. K. and Canada and withdrew 5.6 million tons. This program conducted by the Combined Food Board is to be continued under the direction of the United Nations International Emergency Food Council but on October 28th it was announced from Washington regarding Sir John Boyd Orr's scheme, "The United States, reversing its previous attitude, rejected today proposals for a permanent world food board to stabilize agricultural prices and organize world food production to prevent famine and crop surpluses."

U. S. Ups Beet Price to Boost Acreage.

To assist United States sugar beet growers in increasing their acreage to meet the goal of 1,069,000 for 1947, the government has guaranteed an average price of $14.50 per ton of beets — $1.00 higher than the 1946 price. The new price is based on beets of average quality (16.2% sugar content).

Stabilization Director John R. Steelman said that processors of 1947 beet sugar, "are assured of an average basic market price of 8c per pound with further assurance that any necessary adjustment will be made to maintain proper relationship between their product and imported Cuban sugar."

As an added incentive to growers, they will be offered, on signing for the 1947 crop, about 80c per 100 pounds additional on one-half their season's returns in line with prices to be paid for Cuban sugar this year under the escalator clause in the U. S.-Cuban contract. This represents a bonus on the total 1946 crop of about $1.15 per ton on beets.

There has been no announcement regarding sugar beet prices for Canadian farmers for 1947.

Balanced Diet.

Even in the matter of diet, one can get "too much of a good thing," say nutrition experts of the Department of National Health and Welfare. They point out that, for comfort as well as health, food must be taken in reasonable amounts. This means choosing a balanced diet. It is suggested that such diet will be found in the "Canada's Food Rules" booklet which has been printed for free distribution by the federal and provincial health departments.

Peace Through Prayer.

The purpose of true prayer is always the attainment of a clearer understanding of God, and of our relationship to him. When the path ahead seems involved, threatening or critical, if we call upon our Heavenly Father for guidance and support, we can be sure that we shall receive a direct answer to our prayer. When we truly understand and trust God, we have nothing to fear. In "Miscellaneous Writings" by Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, we find this tender assurance of God's nearness (p. 81): "In the desolation of human understanding, divine Love hears and answers the human call for help."
Are we confronted with disturbing fears arguing for afflictive experiences ahead? Do we seem to be facing a blank wall of error? It is time, then, for us to pray. When we rely on our creator to direct our ways, aggressive suggestions of evil begin to disappear; and we begin to understand in greater degree that man is as immune from mortal limitations as is his Maker.
A Christian Scientist recently learned that the apartment house in which she lived was to be sold and remodelled, and that all the tenants must find other living quarters. In view of the housing shortage the situation was disturbing, but she refused to be dismayed and began to pray over the matter. She prayed for clearer vision of the truth that in God's universe, the one and only realm, God's law prevails; and she knew that it is not a law of burden and penalty, but of blessing and harmony. She asked for wisdom to see the unfoldment of that righteous activity which would reveal God's loving plan and purpose for His children.
Just as the sale of the house was to be concluded, the entire situation suddenly changed. Transfer of the property was cancelled, and a completely harmonious arrangement was brought about whereby the tenants were assured of keeping their homes for an indefinite period. Mrs. Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 206): "In the scientific relation of God to man, we find that whatever blesses one blesses all, as Jesus showed with the loaves and the fishes—Spirit, not matter, being the source of supply."
Communion with our Maker is a sure defense from false belief in evil as real. Through prayers we truly walk with God.—Christian Science Monitor.

Ration Coupon Due Dates.

Coupons now valid are sugar—serves S1 to S35; butter, B 29 to B32; and meat, M56 to M60.

Handwriting on the Wall for Sugar in Canada.

By Wellington Jeffers.
There is a growing disposition in the United States to examine critically the demands made by the United Nations Food Organization for foreign supplies. The black markets and the high prices are partly attributed to the large exports of food to various countries desiring it. Americans want enough food left at home so that food prices will not go out of sight. End of price controls, they say, makes it more necessary to retain enough supplies to keep the markets steady.
In Canada there is a sugar controller and he has managed to secure enough cane sugar to meet the "rationed demand." The chief emphasis has been on arranging for imported supplies. As United States commentators are now criticizing their own government for its failure to build up supply to meet the demand there would be if supplies were not rationed. Canada's foreign supplies may be in for critical analysis. Fulton Lewis Jr., on October 21st over the American network stated that the great bulk of the world's sugar and that of the United States comes from Cuba. There could have been as much sugar as the United States could use if it had simply ordered enough ahead. There was no labour shortage in Cuba. Failure to provide enough was the reason why frozen storage warehouses over the nation had untold millions of pounds of fruit juices and frozen fruits and berries which could not come out of storage to be made into jams and jellies until there was sugar. Charges were building up against these supplies.
That is bad enough, but hope of relieving the dearth dropped to a low ebb when the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations recommended in its recent report that the United States should have in 1950 a quota 12 per cent less than used in the average prewar year, though the population is now 12 1/2 per cent higher. That would make the average individual ration 30 per cent less than before the war. The FAO knows that, but explains calmly that the Americans need 30 per cent less than before the war.
The sugar industry is taking its case to the American people. Lam-bert & Co. have issued a pamphlet entitled "You're Tired of the Sugar Shortage? You Can End It." It says that the government has managed the sugar industry ever since Pearl Harbor. Canadians might very well con- sider these two sentences: "Because of heavy shipments of sugar to foreign nations, Americans this year will receive only 73 pounds of refined sugar per person as compared with their prewar consumption of 98 pounds. . . . The Tolley program is not a famine relief program but a plan to raise the normal consumption of sugar in other countries at the expense, and through the sacrifice, of the people of the United States."
Canada's Cue.
I have said here at various times that Canada, in this period of sugar shortage, should encourage all the domestic beet sugar production possible both by reasonable price incentives and by provision of labor in the fields. It is more urgent now than ever. There is surely handwriting on the wall that Canada should be able to point out in the months ahead that it is doing the best it can in legal out- put when the American people look critically at the fact that rations are being increased outside the United States and they are asked to stay put. The bottlers of the United States are also paying attention to the fact that the sugar output in all areas sup- plying the United States in 1947 will be 1,500,000 tons greater than in 1946. The question is being asked, Who gets it? If the suggestion of the in- ternational planners is followed, there will be no increase. So the bottlers could have bottles and, lacking sugar, would still be stymied.
Allocations of sugar by the Combin- ed Food Board to the United States are 5.6 million short tons from the world pool, to the United Kingdom 2,081,000 tons, and to Canada 504,000 tons. But United States and its in- sular possessions contribute 61 per cent of its quota, the United Kingdom 25 per cent, and Canada 18 per cent from her domestic beet output. Can- ada is producing beet sugar to the ex- tent of 65 per cent of plant capacity. The large Wallaceburg refinery has been idle years. Possible ceasing of beet sugar output in Ontario in 1947 may result from heavy losses of the last three years if something adequate is not done. That would mean a greater demand for cane su- gar. Canada should do her part. The United States increased its production by adding incentives to grower and processor. That may be the only way here.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

To Estimate Paint Required.

In estimating the amount of paint required to refinish the walls of a room, it should be borne in mind that the quality of paint affects its covering powers so that the area covered varies for each brand of paint. The average area covered by any paint, however, is usually contained in the directions on the tin or is readily ob- tainable from the manufacturer. The exterior surface can be estimated by measuring the distance around the four walls and multiplying that figure by the height. New walls should re- ceive a coat of good primer sealer un- dercoating before the finishing coats are applied.

Miss Natalie Minunzio, talented soprano and winner of the Toronto Conservatory diamond jubilee scholarship, will appear as guest artist on the Northern Electric Hour on Monday, November 25. The program is heard weekly over the Dominion and Quebec Regional networks of the CBC.

Soy Flour for Bees.

Soy bean flour is being tried in Australia to feed bees which would otherwise starve during periods of drought. The Australian News reports. Recent droughts in New South Wales attacked the main source of food for bees—the flowering gums and the ground flora. Many Australian flowers provide copious quantities for feeding the young bees which grow very quickly and need large supplies of food.
As a stop gap, soybean flour in which the fat content has been reduced five per cent and mixed to a dough with sugar or honey is being given the growing bee broods as a substitute for pollen in the expectation that the flour will prove a valuable expedient in the bee industry.

A State to prosper, must be built on foundations of a moral character; and this character is the principal element of its strength and the only guaranty of its permanence and prosperity.—Jabez Curry.

Canada Savings Bonds.

The Minister of Finance has decided that Canada Savings Bonds shall not be withdrawn immediately, but shall remain available to purchasers until further notice. The decision will be of particular interest in agricultural areas of Canada, where income is seasonal and where many farmers will want to make their investment later in the year. Workers in other fields whose income varies periodically will also find benefit in the new plan.
As Finance Minister J. L. Halsey, made public his decision, the cumulative total had reached $257,947,609 from 670,691 applications. Since then this total has increased to a point well beyond the expectations at national headquarters when the bonds first went on sale.
The bonds will continue to be available through authorized investment dealers, stock brokers and trust or loan companies, and through banks.
"Although it was known that a widespread demand existed when the decision was taken to offer the Canada Savings Bond," Mr. Halsey said, "in the new circumstances of peace, time no one could be absolutely certain of the extent to which this demand would be translated into action. No national objective was established, but plans were laid on a scale which would find reasonable justification in a sale of two hundred millions or better. Taking into account returns yet to be officially recorded, it is clear that performance will out- run this reasonable expectation by a considerable margin."
"It is obvious from this that the habit of thrift developed in past years has been well maintained. In purchasing the Canada Savings Bond in volume without the stimulus of the urgent presentations of previous campaigns, the Canadian people give evidence of prudence and good judgment. The savings they have invested will bring many benefits to them and to the communities in which they live."
"The Canada Savings Bond was offered as a convenient facility for the investment of peacetime savings. When the terms were announced, no date was set for the termination of the offering. A restriction of sales to a limited period would not be fully consistent with the principles of the offering. Nevertheless, some initial period of sales activity seemed desirable in order to introduce the new security to the public, and to prove Sight for Scholars.

Eye-sight which requires correction may account for the poor grades of some school children, doctors declare. The Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, has pointed out that low standing in class does not necessarily indicate inferior intellect. The department urges the cooperation of teachers and parents with the family physician to ensure that children are given a fair chance, through adjusted eye-sight where necessary, to study and to avoid eye-strain.

Eye Accidents.

Workers exposed to dangers of flying particles and other hazards are urged by the Department of National Health and Welfare to wear safety goggles. The Department quotes statistics to show that 80 per cent of eye accidents in factories were due to flying particles. Figures also show that 98 per cent of all industrial eye accidents were preventable.
"I am anxious to release the small organization which has been necessary to offer these facilities to employers. I have taken steps to do so as of Wednesday, November 6th, except in those cases where incomplete coverage requires further attention."
"Employers will agree that these reasons, coupled with the general benefit to efficiency in their own establishments, combine to urge early completion of employee coverage under the Payroll Savings Plan."

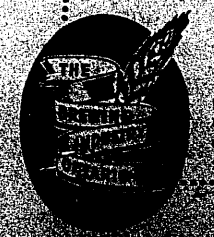

THE PROVINCE OF PROMISE...

Southwestern ONTARIO accommodates nearly half of Canada's furniture manufacturing establishments, and the industry may well be said to centre there. As with other industries, an impressive share of the province's furniture-making facilities were turned from their normal task during the war, but the woodworking plant is one of the most readily convertible and its future one of the most assured... with the greatest demand in history, both for the new homes of Canada's prosperity and the immeasurable replacements required abroad. In Ontario, woodworking is moving steadily to the fine old lumber and ship-building towns such as Collingwood... inspirational localities where the cabinet-maker craftsman finds himself in the midst of Ontario's forest resources—as well as health and quiet.

FURNITURE CENTRE

In 1944, of the 472 Canadian factories engaged in the manufacture of wooden furniture of all kinds, 208 were located in Ontario. In the same year the gross value of the manufactured products was approximately $30,000,000. Nearly 8,000 people were engaged in the industry and more than $11,000,000 was paid in salaries and wages. Sawm lumber was the principal material used and, while much of the hardwoods used came from the United States, the soft woods were the product of Canadian forests.

G. Bowers, Burns Ellis, O. T. Higgins, Geraldine M. McLelland (O.B.E.), Percy Bowers, William Dresser, Cecil Bridgman, Claude Cowan, Ralph Davidson, Harold Tilden, Murray E. Griffin, F. R. Birch, H. Lt.-Col. MacDonald, who was special prosecutor at the Kurt Meyer trial, spoke on the Nuremberg trials. Previous to this war," he said, "our concept of international law was vague. The prisoners of defeated nations were often enslaved or put to death. Christian influence led to The Hague and Geneva Conventions. Having had experience with Germany before, in breaking treaties we were forewarned and forearmed. The Nuremberg trials were new departures in international law. It was necessary to establish a precedent and it had to be done fairly. The Nuremberg trials should curb the ambitions of future Hitler. He described, in detail, the Kurt Meyer case. General Meyer was Commander of the 12th S. S. Division, which was made up of fanatical German youth between the ages of 17 and 19. Meyer was found guilty of having had 18 Canadians shot at his headquarters. "The highest type of courage," he said, "is when men are isolated at the mercy of a ruthless enemy, yet choosing death rather than the betrayal of their comrades and country."

"The wife of a German officer who was condemned to death said to her husband: 'Had you paid the same attention to the teachings of Jesus Christ as you did to those of Hitler, you wouldn't be where you are now.' This can be said of the whole German nation.

E. J. Riley introduced the speaker and Arthur Cote proposed a vote of thanks. President H. K. Ferguson was chairman.

The true grandeur of nations is in those qualities which constitute the true greatness of the individual.—Charles Sumner.

Mrs. Fred Whitney conducted the worship service, assisted by Mrs. Arthur Atton, the theme of which was "Witness of God in Christ," with Mrs. S. R. Johnston at the piano.

It was voted to send a donation to All People's Mission in Windsor for Christmas cheer and also to the woman's ward of the jail.

Sees Continued Need for Sugar Control.

Canada's chief of price control and rationing, Donald Gordon, has issued a grim warning concerning sugar supplies. In one of the addresses early in his present series, he said, "Some government organization will be needed to deal with sugar for perhaps some years."

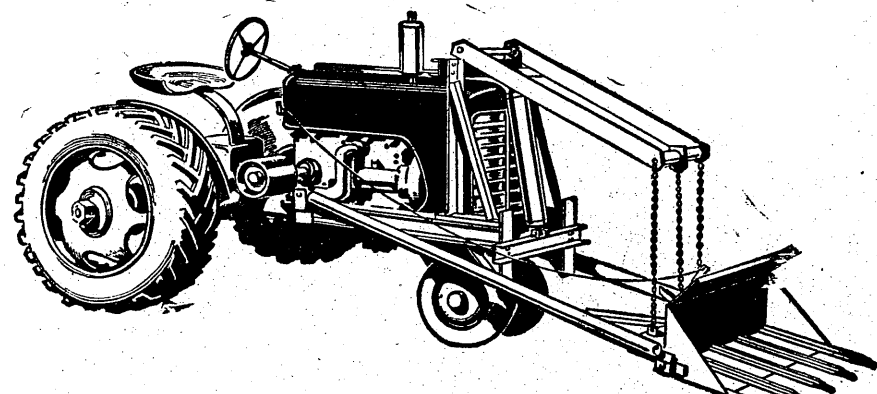

According to a well-known financial editor, this situation is due to too great dependence on imported sugar, 82 per cent of the Dominion's needs being purchased from other countries. He said, "Canada's policy of depending more and more on imported supplies of a vital commodity like sugar is not a wise one while conditions are so disturbed as they are today." Meanwhile, Canada's production of domestic beet sugar has been lagging with Ontario factories turning out only half the sugar possible.

In the United States sugar is one of the three items remaining under government control and observers see the possibility of its early release due to increased domestic production.

REV. MEL W. JOHNSON.

Sunday, December 1st marks the close of a two week revival campaign at the Baptist Church in Essex, with Rev. Mel W. Johnson, of Grand Rapids, Mich. Rev. Johnson, who is better known to radioland's thousands as "Uncle Mel," will bring to a close his evangelistic endeavours with a great program of music and message for the youth as well as parents. Special musical attractions include "Bob" and Rexella Shelton, of Pontiac, Mich., and Bruce Huntwork, golden-toned trumpeter. These three "teenage musicians" will appear at all services on Sunday with "Uncle Mel." Sunday school convenes at 10 a.m., followed by the morning worship at 11. The final service will be at 7.30, when "Uncle Mel" speaks on the subject, "The Glorious Return of Our Lord."

Friends and members of the Baptist Church are looking forward to the completion of the new Sunday School annex to the church. Another step toward the realization of this will be the special ceremony between the Sunday school hour and the worship service, when the corner stone services will be conducted by "Uncle" Mel and the Young People's trio from Pontiac.

Returned Man Killed.

Alfred J. Legault, 26-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Delphis Legault, of New Canada, a World War II veteran, was instantly killed, about 10.30 Thursday evening of last week, when the car he was driving crashed into the rear of a truck, owned by John Joyal, of Gesto, parked on the side of the Malden Road, near Gesto, with a flat tire.
William Campbell, of Gesto, and Sterling Gee, of R. R. 4, Harrow, passengers in the Legault car, escaped with minor injuries.

The automobile, being driven east on the Malden Road, was a total wreck, the top of the sedan being torn off as the back end of the truck caught the front of the frame of the car.

Deceased is survived by his parents;
three brothers, Seymour, of Windsor; Earl and Lawrence at home, and two sisters, Laura and Janette, at home.

St. Paul's Christmas Bazaar.

The event you look forward to yearly is almost at hand. Next Friday, December 6th, the Parish Hall doors will open at 3 p.m. What an array to meet the eye. All you have been anticipating, and more. Going on the theory that every woman is interested in aprons, willing workers have been serving for months on a variety of styles. The plain type for everyday use, and fancy ones for entertaining company. Little girls have a nice philosophy about their clothes, and are really made happy with something pretty to wear. Whatever you choose from the children's display will be sure to gladden a small heart. Hand-knit sweaters, ski-hoods and mittens in lush colours; cosy felt slippers with exquisite embroidery; cuddly stuffed animals, and the ever-practical pyjamas. Even the baby likes to be dressed up for Christmas, and a dainty handmade dress is just the thing.

The fancy work committee have been concentrating on ideas for weeks.
The results are truly amazing. Just a glance and your Christmas gift problems will vanish. Pillow cases, so hard to find these days, and what's more, beautifully embroidered or edged with lace. Luncheon sets for those bridge parties you contemplate; guest towels, exquisite handkerchiefs, port holders, face cloths, and any number of useful gifts.

The children will be delighted to know that they will actually be able to fish at the Fish Pond, with a really and truly fishing pole. What surprises on the hooks! Those who do not care for fishing may try their luck at the White Elephant table. There's always the chance you'll find something you like.

This, no doubt, is about where the crowd will gather. That's around the bake table. The members have been using their sugar and butter and are planning to have a choice array of home-made delicacies.

A hot supper will be served from 5.30 till 7 o'clock, and the price is only 50c for adults and 25c for children. Plan to visit the bazaar, see all the pretty things and enjoy a nice hot meal, prepared by our efficient cooks.

Essex to Vote December 9th.

MAYOR JOHN C. LINTON.

The meeting to nominate candidates for the elected offices of town, for the year 1947, was held in the town hall, on Friday evening, with the largest turnout in years, there being at least one hundred ratepayers present.

del, Earl Pulleyblank, Frank Irwin

ett, Charles Maedel Jr., Percy W. Lee,

Public Utilities Comm.—G. C. Johnston, acc.

Public School Board—Ward 1, Cecil

Simpson, acc.; Ward 2, Perry Van-ston, acc.; Ward 3, Don Wilson, R. L.

Black. Don Wilson did not qualify.

At the close of nominations, at 8.30,

there was a program of speeches, with

K. E. Brett, Town Clerk, as chairman.

Mayor J. C. Linton gave a brief resume of the year's work, bringing particularly to the attention of his liseners, the saving to the town as a result of the refunding of the town's indebtedness. He stated that the town's bonded debt had been reduced from $361,000 dollars when the municipality refinanced in 1940, to a total of $275,000 as at December 31st, 1945.

These debentures still had 34 years to run, the last payment being in 1980, and were drawing 3% interest. The annual amount which had to be raised in the town tax rate each year for the remaining 34 years was slightly over $17,000 per year. The new plan, because of the low interest rate, had to be sold at 97.5 so in order to pay off the present bond holders the $275,-

000 in bonds held by them, Council had to issue $282,000 in debentures. Had new issue, however, was spread over only twenty years and was drawing only 2½% interest the first ten years and 3% the last ten years. The an-annual payment now is only $18,000, or about $1,000 more than previously, and our debt will be paid off in twenty years, as against thirty-four years under the original scheme.

Among other items mentioned by the Mayor, was his regret that our Chief of Police, H. Harrison, had had to resign due to ill-health, after many years of faithful service. However, he thought the town was extremely lucky in filling the position with such a capable officer as Chief Norman Hogarth.

Mr. Linton stated he was standing

Reeve Irwin.

Mr. Irwin spoke briefly on county Council matters and said that the big job confronting the council in 1947 was the settling of the equalization, started this year. He also stated he would seek re-election.

The Councilors were called in order
as they sat at the Council Chamber.
The chairman advised those present that Mr. Chase had to leave the meeting, asked him to announce his candidacy for 1947.

P. W. Lee and J. M. Shaw, after a few words on the work entrusted to them during the year, stated they would stand for 1947.

Next Year's Groceries.

In a nutshell, The Financial Post sums up Canada's 1947 food prospects as follows:

More staples and luxury type foods available now than a year ago, import barometer rising.

Some shortages, notably sugar, shortening, soap, butter, bacon, continue to darken the more favourable overall picture.

The trade and public, accustomed to accept any kind of food item during wartime, are becoming more selective.

Grocery and combination market sales this year, both independent and chain, should top $800 millions as against an estimated $770 millions last year, $567 millions in 1941.

Food prices both inside and outside the WPTB index are pressing upward, accelerated by higher labor, material and repair costs, and discontinuance of Dominion subsidies on many foods.

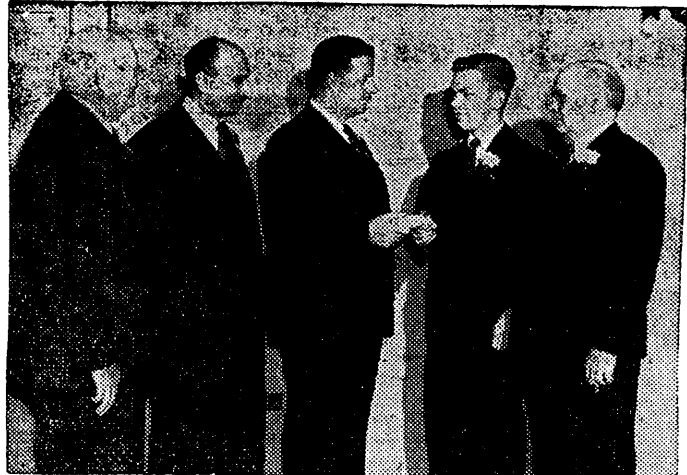

Citrus juices will be cheaper as U. S. production hits record levels and armed services requirements drop.

New foods and other grocery store items are appearing on shelves.

GIVEN POSTHUMOUS AWARD.

In appreciation of the outstanding contribution he has made to Canadian advertising an award was made posthumously to the late W. Howard Batten, who, at the time of his death was president of Rapid Grip and Batten, Limited, Toronto, by the Association of Canadian Advertisers while recently assembled in convention in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto. Here L. E. Phenner, centre, retiring president of the Association of Canadian Advertisers, makes the presentation to A. Campbell Batten, a son of the late W. Howard Batten. Other award winners, left to right, are H. S. Van Scoyoc, recently retired from the position of advertising manager with the Canada Cement Company, Montreal; Emile Jean, managing director of The Nouvelleiste, Three Rivers, Quebec; and right, T. L. Anderson, vice-president of Cockfield Brown & Company, Limited, Toronto.

Hello, Home-makers! The increased price of milk has caused considerable consternation, but there are certain facts we must not lose sight of. The foremost being that milk is the most perfect food in our diet — we must not deprive ourselves of the necessary pint of milk daily and the quart for each child daily. The best ways to use milk are as a cold or hot beverage, creamed soups, creamed sauce, creamed meats, soups, and milk puddings.

The value lies in the body-building materials, sources of energy and fuel, and the vitamins which milk contains. The butterfat or cream of milk is high in fuel for the body, but we have substitutes in large amounts, in the meats and vegetable oils that we use. Thus, skim milk, buttermilk, cottage cheese, are the foods to maintain health and reduce the grocery budget.

Here are some reliable buttermilk recipes — or if whole milk turns sour, don't throw out this expensive food, but substitute it for buttermilk in the following recipes:

BUTTERMILK PANCAKES.
1 cup milk
1 1/2 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
Cream butter, add the sugar and well-beaten egg. Sift together the dry ingredients and add alternately with the buttermilk to the first mixture. Bake in electric oven at 350 degrees for 15 minutes.

BUTTERMILK SCONES.
1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 cups butter
1/2 cups buttermilk
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup raisins if desired
1 egg
Buttermilk to moisten, about 1/2 cup.

TAKE A TIP.
1. Mashed bananas added to beaten egg whites make a good substitute for whipped cream.
2. When making apocryphic cake, grate the apples instead of cooking them. In that way no water is added and the full flavour of the apple is retained.
3. The electric mixer whose beaters can be moved into the kettle of potatoes, pot of squash, fresh applesauce or curdling custard is a great timesaver. It whips food to a velvety smooth consistency.
4. A dozer heater causes plenty of splatters which can be prevented if you cut a whole in a paper plate and slip it over the top of the heater.

THE QUESTION BOX.
Mrs. L. D. asks for Gingersnap Ice Cream recipe.
Answer:
1 cup heavy cream, 2 tablespoons fine sugar, 3 bananas, mashed, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup rolled gingersnap crumbs.
Add 1/4 teaspoon lemon juice to cream and whip until stiff. Add sugar and a few grains of salt. Combine bananas and lemon juice and fold into cream. Stir in rolled gingersnap crumbs. Freeze — stirring once during freezing.

BUTTERMILK SALAD DRESSING.
1/2 cup buttermilk
1/2 cup vinegar
1/2 cup oil
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup salt
1/2 cup mustard
1/2 cup ketchup
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup catsup
1/2 cup relish
1/2 cup onion
1/2 cup celery
1/2 cup lettuce
1/2 cup tomato
1/2 cup cucumber
1/2 cup carrot
1/2 cup radish
1/2 cup turnip
1/2 cup rutabaga
1/2 cup cauliflower
1/2 cup broccoli
1/2 cup asparagus
1/2 cup green beans
1/2 cup peas
1/2 cup corn
1/2 cup lima beans
1/2 cup kidney beans
1/2 cup pinto beans
1/2 cup chickpeas
1/2 cup lentils
1/2 cup mung beans
1/2 cup soybeans
1/2 cup navy beans
1/2 cup black beans

1/2 cup kidney beans
1/2 cup chickpeas
1/2 cup lentils
1/2 cup mung beans
1/2 cup soybeans

People Are Asking.
Q.—I understand there has been some revisions lately in the regulations governing the sale of used cars. Will you please tell me how I can determine the real price of a used car.
A.—The recent revision covered the sale of late models. You may ascertain the proper ceiling price of a used car by applying to the nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board giving the model, model year, serial number and details of accessories including spare tires.

Q.—What is the ceiling price of grade A large eggs?
A.—The ceiling price to the consumer is 56 cents a dozen for loose packed eggs. The ceiling price is two cents more if the eggs are in cartons.

Q.—Where may I obtain a ration book for a new born baby? How old must a baby be before it may have a ration book?
A.—Ration books may be obtained if you apply to a local ration board and present proof of birth. Books are issued to babies immediately following birth.

Q.—I paid 45 cents for a 28 ounce tin of catsup. Is this price too high?
A.—It would seem that this price is above the legal ceiling. If you will give us details of the brand of the catsup and the name of your dealer we will check.

Q.—When will price controls be removed?
A.—The removal of price controls is a matter of government policy and not dependent upon the decision of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. However, it has been stated repeatedly by government spokesmen that controls will not be continued a day longer than they are absolutely necessary.

CANADA'S HEALTH.

HEALTH INTERNATIONAL.
Canada co-operates with the United States authorities in connection with the examination and certification of supplies of drinking and culinary water in use aboard common carriers engaged in international traffic, as well as in examination of dining cars operated internationally.

United States authorities are supplied with reports and certificates concerning water supply sources in Canada which are used by U. S. Common carriers entering and operating in various parts of the Dominion. Similarly, reports and certificates concerning water supplies located in the United States and used by common carriers operating in international traffic, are supplied to Canadian health authorities.

This is only one phase of the co-operation which ensures the highest standard of health protection on this continent.

SAFE MEDICINES.
Under the Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act Canada maintains constant surveillance of the field of remedies, to ensure maximum protection for the purchasing public. The Canadian people annually spend millions of dollars for prepared medicines, which comprise varieties of brands of liniments, lotions, ointments, pills, powders, syrups, tablets, tonics, etc., of both domestic and foreign manufacture.

Canada prohibits false, exaggerated or misleading advertisements in respect of such products, and there are certain diseases for which no medicinal preparation is granted registration. Potent drugs are listed in a schedule of this important Act, and dosages are fixed by a medical board, within reasonable limits of safety.

In connection with this work, the federal authorities maintain a constant check on recommendations for remedies appearing on labels, wrappers, circulars, and in literature and newspaper advertisements, as well as in radio announcements. This work is facilitated by the co-operation of the reputable drug manufacturers and by close liaison with press and radio outlets.

CARBON MONOXIDE.
Burning fuel produces carbon monoxide — a deadly gas. If ventilation is faulty, in factory, garage or even at home, carbon monoxide may escape and contaminate the air. Industrial health authorities of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, say that carbon monoxide strikes without warning. Pointing out that good ventilation is the best protection, they urge careful check of ventilation systems periodically, check of furnace pipes and drafts and use of approved respirators around possible sources of carbon monoxide.

"Although carbon monoxide has no smell, it is commonly associated with odorless gases and fumes given off by burning fuel," says the authority. Headaches and dizziness arise from a variety of causes, but, when these symptoms occur in the presence of cases and fumes from burning fuel, they may indicate an early stage of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Never run engines indoors, without adequate ventilation. First aid treatment prescribed for victims of carbon monoxide: remove the victim to the open air; if breathing has weakened or seems to have stopped, apply artificial respiration. Whenever poisoning is suspected, immediate first aid is essential and no time should be lost in calling a physician.

What is "Enrichment?"
An observant visitor to the United States will notice bread and flour in that country labelled "enriched." If he is curious he will find the "enriched" sign notably absent from the Canadian products. Letting the curiosity run on a little longer one discovers some interesting facts.

Flour, white or dark, is a source of vitamins of the "B" group. Dark flour and dark bread are better sources than the white products, because some of the vitamin content is lost in removing the bran.

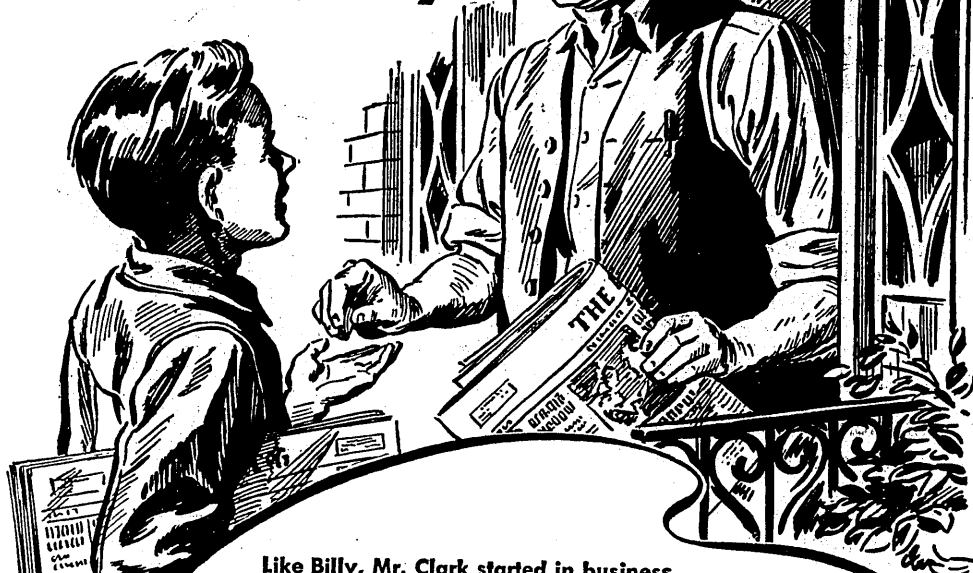

When people don't get enough of these vitamins, either from bread or other foods, they show signs of their deficiency in the form of lack of appetite, tiredness, sometimes pains in arms and legs, and perhaps other ways.

National health surveys in the United States revealed that over half the population suffered from a lack of some of the B vitamins — mostly not serious, but nevertheless below minimum standard advocated by health authorities. The government and health authorities got together and decided to add vitamins to white flour and bread. There was no taste or colour change and everyone was happy, and many healthier.

In Canada the simple enrichment method was turned down and instead a campaign organized to get people to eat "Canada Approved" bread. This failed, and nothing has been done since. "Canada Approved" was made flour with a higher bran content, and met a response similar to that of dark bread — highly favoured by some, but shunned by the majority.

Enrichment in the United States is not a cure-all, but it has gone a long way in preventing serious deficiency diseases, an aid raising those who were just below the recommended level above it. The case for enrichment in Canada might well be reviewed again.

"You're starting just the way I did, Billy!"

Like Billy, Mr. Clark started in business delivering papers. He collected Fridays, settled with his publisher Saturdays and placed a portion of his profits in his savings account at the bank. That was 40 years ago. Mr. Clark has been using his bank regularly ever since.

Whether it was delivering papers, working week-ends at the corner store, or doing chores on the farm, you will always remember how proud you were of your first job, your first pay and your first bank book in your pocket. All were earned by your own initiative.

Today, as in the past, young people whose ambition is to get ahead, put their savings in the bank. It is the first step towards an association which can well be vital to business and personal life.

Appeals to Canadian People For Support.

With complete stability of prices no longer possible, Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, has appealed to the Canadian people for public support and patience during the period of controlled readjustment.

In a series of five broadcasts, unique in the record of the Prices Board the chairman reviewed the present economic situation as it refers to supply and demand of housing accommodation as well as to food and clothing.

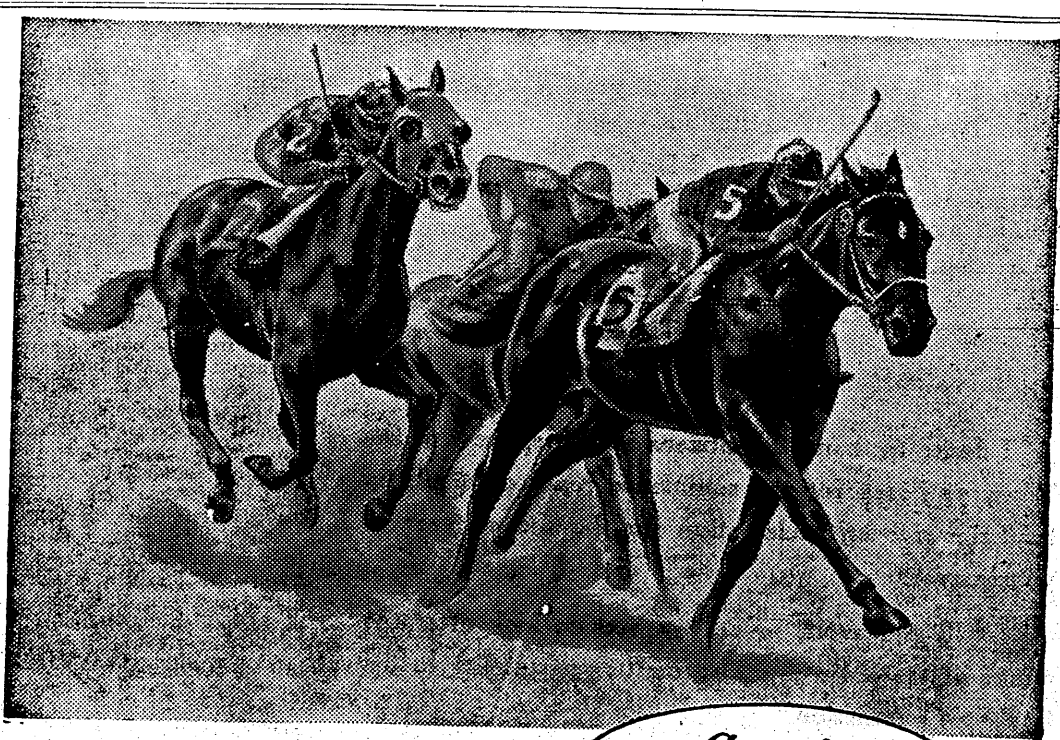

Forecasting spiralling prices if controls were suddenly removed the chairman stated that "if a controlled and orderly readjustment is preferred, run bring the price levels of both countries into an equilibrium. It is continued for a long while yet, Canadians, in their role of producers, whether as working men or women, farmers, storekeepers, manufacturers or landlords, will have to recognize that the price of a controlled readjustment is willingness to accept responsibility for price control by going easy in what may be regarded as just demands for higher wages higher prices and higher incomes."

Referring to the removal of controls in the United States, Mr. Gordon said this step would have a "marked influence" on this country. "But," he continued, "even granting that the play man stated that "if a controlled and orderly readjustment is preferred, run bring the price levels of both countries into an equilibrium. It is continued for a long while yet, Canadians, in their role of producers, whether as working men or women, farmers, storekeepers, manufacturers or landlords, will have to recognize that the price of a controlled readjustment is willingness to accept responsibility for price control by going easy in what may be regarded as just demands for higher wages higher prices and higher incomes."

The Board chairman stated that it should not be long before the United States picture becomes clearer and it is shown whether or not large scale production will rapidly stabilize prices and he adds that "then we can choose our own time for complete decontrol with the benefit of their experience."

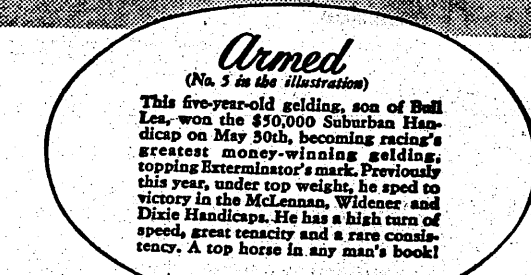

Courage is that virtue which champions the cause of right.—Cicero.

New Pamphlet on Poultry Feeding.

Succulent feeds for poultry should not be classed with greenfeeds as they are much lower in feeding value. Succulent feeds are usually about 90 per cent water and lower in ash, protein, and vitamins. Their chief function is of a regulatory nature and they tend to keep the digestive track of poultry in healthy condition. They should not be considered as substitutes for greenfeeds, but may be used if green feeds are not available.

Mangels, beets, turnips, carrots and such like are the principal succulent feeds, although raw potatoes may also be similarly classed. Cull apples or windfalls are very low in nutrients. Yellow carrots are perhaps the most satisfactory succulent feed because of their high content of vitamin A. Further information may be obtained from Publication 64 "Poultry Feeds and Feeding" issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Interest continues to be centred on the coal mining situation in the United States where, as this is being written, the miners are striking against an essential industry which is being operated by the government. (The U. S. Government took over the coal mines one year ago.) In this contest, as in other things, Canada can learn much from experiences south of the border. Both management and labour here have to avoid the dangers that our great neighbour has encountered.

Is Canada Worthwhile?

Sudbury, Ontario, leads the way in an organization, incorporated by federal charter under the title of "Canadian National Unity" to work for elimination of "racial, geographical and sectional development are agreed there is more real unity and understanding in Canada now than there has ever been before; but they point out that our modern way of life which involves such close contacts between all sections, races and classes, requires more progress still to unity and amity. The physical progress we make continues to be greater than our mental and cultural progress.

This is true, of course, of the whole world and is, perhaps, the main cause of the difficulties encountered by the United Nations. Certainly Canada must not lag behind any other country in freedom from race, colour and class prejudice. The provisional committee of the new organization includes one member of parliament, Leo Gauthier, M.P. for Nipissing, Ont.

The Prime Minister to Speak.

Close observers of the political scene are looking forward to the next public appearance of the Prime Minister which will be in Quebec City. The occasion is a complimentary banquet to Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, the minister of Justice from the people of his constituency (Quebec East) on November 29th, but many think that from the ancient capital, scene of the famous wartime meetings of Roosevelt, Churchill and King, the Prime Minister will give an important message to all Canadians.

Emergency Housing.

Because of the acute nature of the housing problem, Canada had to attack it from two points of view: the long term need of permanent housing and the immediate necessity for accommodation. The latter particularly could only be worked out adequately by the whole-hearted co-operation of federal, provincial and municipal governments and local voluntary committees. In communities where this co-operation has been achieved there has been the most success in meeting the need.

The federal government agency, The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has power to requisition unoccupied buildings for purposes of housing. It was necessary to use this power only occasionally because of the co-operation received from owners when their need was made clear to them. These buildings were leased to the municipal governments and converted to dwelling units. Where necessary the Dominion government helps to meet the conversions costs and assisted financially in the conversion to 3,024 dwelling units. Because of the many municipal governments involved it has not been possible to get the exact total of emergency units provided but it is certain that it has reached 5,000 now and will greatly exceed that number.

Canada Depends on Trade.

Canada's "top dollars," ¼ of her income, the extra income which makes the difference between mere existence and prosperity, comes from her foreign trade. For this reason Canada's action at the International Trade Conference which is now in London is being watched carefully and anxiously.

The International Cartel is recognized as the greatest menace to prosperity because its trade restricting devices keep prices high and prevent that free flow of goods that makes prosperity possible for the masses of people in the world. Our "Combines Investigation Act" was further strengthened at the last session of parliament by legislation that had the approval of all parties in the house but the menace of monopoly has grown far beyond national boundaries and effective control of the most powerful monopolies is possible only by international effort.

One of its decisions, that action must be taken against state owned trading agencies which are monopolistic, as well as against private enterprise, will have far-reaching effects. If carried out effectively this should make it possible for all countries of the world to bring their people the food and other things they need, regardless of the real or pretended ideological differences.

Freight Rates? One of the very interesting proposals now being put forward strongly is the prices of merchandise should be equalized all over Canada regardless of freight rates. A few leading manufacturers have already adopted this policy and our reports are that it

What About Farm Home Improvement?

There is nothing more important to a nation than the state of its homes. No one would contend that a nation can be truly great if its people live amid the risk and discomforts of inadequate and unattractive housing. The homes are significant also because they are an indication of what is happening to the people. A satisfactory social and economic environment very quickly results in comfortable, well-equipped homes and the reverse is also true. Look at the state of the homes and you have an accurate gauge of the position of the people and their state of mind.

There are certain conditions which must obtain before people are likely to establish or improve their homes. They must feel reasonably secure—able to look forward to an assured income in the same place. They must have credit available at reasonable cost—a good home may represent the savings of a whole lifetime. Builders and materials must be available and within their means—not much use building a home if you are never going to own it.

These principles apply to town and country alike through their application may vary with varying conditions. City housing is so inadequate that the city problem gets the spotlight but it is encouraging to note that there is increasing interest in the rural housing problem. "What about Farm Home Improvement" is the National Radio Forum for November 11th.

Farm homes are badly in need of repair and beautification. It is estimated that at least 188,000 farm houses in Canada need external repairs. In addition, 125,000 new farm houses are required. Conditions vary from province to province. The farm homes in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island are said to be in better condition generally than in Ontario, for instance. Prairie homes are in particularly bad condition.

Houses which are in many instances are too often inconvenient and ill-equipped. Electricity is basic to good living, and 99 per cent of city houses have it but only 20 per cent of farm houses. Only 7 per cent have bathrooms with running water, 12 per cent heating, 22 per cent refrigeration as compared with 76%, 62% and 70% of city homes having bathing facilities, furnace heating and refrigeration. That is not a very impressive record. It is to be hoped that the situation will improve with improvement in farm income when materials and equipment are more readily available.

There is another angle to this problem. Given the inclination and the time to do it many people could, at little or no expense, improve their home environment greatly. A bit of paint and some landscaping would often work wonders. Perhaps if Departments of Agriculture, Agricultural Colleges and schools would provide more instruction and advice as well as suitable seeds and shrubs, rural home improvement could be speeded up.

seems to be workable. This plan would quieten some of the most serious complaints from Western Canada and the Maritime Provinces and the spirit of confederation would receive a great boost. Federal government legislation would be necessary and may be within the power of the government. Increases in freight rates, if they are necessary would then be spread fairly among all our people.

You'll understand why it can promise you hearing comfort and satisfaction for years to come.

Adding decidedly to the enjoyment of the program were the introductions, made by the fourth artist, the trio's mother and skilful accompanist, Vera Henderson Davie.—The Listowel Banner.

Miss Frances Davie possesses a voice of pure legato quality and all her songs were sung in good tone and with understanding.—Wingham Advance-Times.

Local Boys Get Shrine Degree.

Don Wilson advises us that he had the pleasure, and honour, on Friday, November 22nd, to travel together with Ralph Pinkerton and Elgin Anderson on a pilgrimage to Mocha Temple, London, and was indeed happy to sponsor as candidates Roy Johnston, Charles Brushett and Ed. Hines, who were newly created Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

A highlight of the day's event was a presentation by London Division of the Knight of Columbus of a cheque for $7,300, proceeds from a ball game, sponsored by the Knights of Columbus and Shriners, of London, in aid of Crippled Children. This cheque was handed to the chairman of the Shrine Crippled Children's Hospital, Montreal.

The Shrine Hospital recognizes neither racial or sectarian regulations, as more than 53 percent of the children treated there in the past year were of Roman Catholic faith.

In fond and dearest memory of my wife, Martha Stickwood, who departed this life November 28th, 1944.

There is an open gate
At the end of the road,
Through which each must go alone;
And there is a light we cannot see,
Our Father claims His own.
Beyond the gate our loved one Finds happiness and rest,
And there is comfort in the thought
That a loving God knew best.
Sleep on dear wife, and take your rest,
They miss you most who loved you best.

—Ever remembered by her husband, William Stickwood.

In loving memory of Roger Knight, who was killed in Italy three years ago, November 29th, 1943.

In depths of sorrow we cannot tell
Of the loss of one loved by all,
And while he sleeps a peaceful sleep,
His memory we shall always keep.

—Ever remembered by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Quick and family.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a dear aunt, Mrs. Elida Brough, who passed away one year ago, November 30th, 1945.

Deep in a heart lies a picture,
Of a loved one laid to rest,
In a memory's frame we shall keep it,
Because she was one of the best.

—Always remembered by her niece Florence.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a dear sister, Elida Brough (nee Harrison) who passed away one year ago, November 30th, 1945.

Her life was earnest, her action kind,
A generous heart and an active mind;
Anxious to please, and loathe to offend,
A loving sister and a faithful friend.

—Ever remembered by brothers and sisters.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs. Angus Robson, who passed away three years ago, November 25th, 1943.

Fond are the ties that are broken,
Dearest is the one that is gone,
In memory we will always keep her,
As year after year rolls on.

The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never,
The memory of those happy days
When we were all together.

—Fondly remembered by husband, sons and daughters.

IN MEMORIAM

In proud and loving memory of our dear son and brother, Roger E. Knight, who died in Italy November 29th, 1943.

We cannot say and we will not say
That he is dead — he is just away!
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land.

And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since he lingers there
And you — oh you, who the wildest year,
For the old time step and the glad return.

Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of there, as the love of here,
Think of him still as the same I say,
He is not dead — he is just away!

—Always remembered by dad and mother, and brothers and sisters.

Malnutrition is World Problem

Food problems of the world are mostly economic writes Dr. W. C. Hopper, Economic Adviser, Agricultural Supplies Board, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Most of the malnutrition in North America, in Europe, and in Asia, is due to poverty. Most, if not all, the wars between nations have been because of real or imagined economic differences. The elimination of war and the fear of war rests in a very large measure on the elimination of want and malnutrition.

One of the primary reasons why so many people in the world are chronically ill-fed is because it has not yet been profitable to bring under cultivation for food production the land areas of the world which are still undeveloped. Nor has it been sufficiently profitable to food producers to drain or irrigate sufficient additional land, to use better cultural methods on present crop land, to employ more and better machinery, and more commercial fertilizers to raise yields per acre.

If, and when, the nations of the world where malnutrition is common obtain the purchasing power necessary to make it possible for their people to pay for foods at a price that will encourage the opening up of new land for productive purposes, and in increasing yields on present farm lands, the world's food producers will supply the food to satisfy the hunger and to eliminate malnutrition in these countries.

It is recognized, of course, that there is a limit to the amount of land in the world that can be used for food crops, and that the extension of scientific and technical knowledge of food production and marketing will help to feed the world adequately, but the main problem is economic.

Price Control Support on the Wane.

"There is no doubt that price control has worked much better here than across the line, but there is also no doubt that there has been substantial weakening in public support since the war," The Financial Post observes.

"While the war was on few Canadians begrudged skimping and doing without if by so doing more vital production was diverted into the war effort. But they are not nearly so willing now and especially when they see production halted by unnecessary strikes or in the case of a product like butter, when producers admit they are unable to meet the domestic demand.

"The Canadian public is in no mood to accept present shortages as either inevitable or permanent. It would be a bad thing for the country if it did. So long as these shortages continue we are risking inflation and black markets. To only safe and permanent cure is to get production booming and store shelves filled."

The course at St. Paul was held under the auspices of the University of Minnesota, the Minnesota State Department of Agriculture and the National Federation of Millers of the United States. Modern methods for controlling insects in grain elevators and flour mills were discussed and Canadian and United States entomologists will co-operate in the fight against the destructive insects.

In the course of his address, Dr. Gray dealt with various methods of control including keeping the premises clean, turning the grain, contact insecticides and aerosols, fumigation, common grain fumigants, and chemical dusts. The measures used to control stored grain pests, he said, fell into two general categories — preventive and curative. The preventive measures aimed to keep the number of insects so reduced that infestation could not develop, while the curative methods were designed to eliminate fully established infestations. Prevention was better than cure. Usually by the time curative measures were applied, the infestation had become serious and the grain had been damaged.

Further, curative measures usually involved in a complete shut-down of the plant and required the use of expensive insecticides, many of which were dangerous to apply. Preventive measures required a continuous program of work on the part of a limited personnel at regular intervals. Their application involved eternal vigilance on the part of the elevator staff in examining at frequent intervals, particularly during the warmer months of the year.

Good housekeeping was the simplest and best preventive measures — keeping the premises as clean as possible at all times. All accumulations of grain, dust, and debris should be cleaned up and removed at frequent intervals. The elimination of breeding and hibernation places was one of the best ways to reduce the number of insects. The bin floor, manhole covers, tripper tracks, roof supports and other places should all be examined and cleaned if necessary. The bin bottoms also should be thoroughly cleaned periodically to eliminate accumulations of weevils and grain mites. The cleaning not only eliminated insects but also rendered the use of contact insecticides more effective when their use was necessary.

The real thinker and worker does his best, and does the thinking for the ages. He improves moments; to him time is money, and he hoards this capital to distribute gain. — Mary Baker Eddy.

Healthy Voices.

Even the human voice plays its part in creating health, says an authority in the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. It works this way — voices influence others; if a person has a pleasing voice, that improves the personality and acceptability; to be socially acceptable brings happiness, and happiness, in turn, brings health. Monotonous, shrill and high pitched voices as well as slurred and mumbled words, lessen chances for happiness.

Depth Planting of Forage Crop Seeds.

Seeding perennial Forage crops at too great a depth is considered to be the principal cause of failure to secure satisfactory stands in the plains region of Western Canada, states Scientific Agriculture. However, under arid conditions, the deeper the seeds can be placed the better the soil moisture may be for germination.

As the result of an experiment carried out with certain promising grasses by the Division of Forage Plants at the Dominion Experimental Station, Swift Current, Sask., it was demonstrated under the conditions of the experiment, that the greatest depth at which the following grasses may be sown on loam soil was: Crested wheat grass, 1 inch; brome and tall wheat grass, 1½ inches; ree wheat grass, ree canary grass and wild Virginia rye, 2 inches; and slender wheat grass, 2½ inches.

"It may be stated," says Scientific Agriculture, "that Tall wheat grass, ree wheat grass, Russian wild rye, and Virginia wild rye may be seeded deeper than Crested wheat grass and as deep or deeper than brome. This is a favourable factor when establishing stands within low rainfall regions. However, the slow emergence of Virginia wild rye is a distinct disadvantage and would discriminate against it as a suitable grass for low rainfall areas, but Russian wild rye, ree wheat grass, and Tall wheat grass appear to be equal or superior to standard grasses in this respect. It is of interest to note the good emergence of Reed Canary grass, a small seeded grass, from the 2-inch depth, and that of Slender wheat grass from a 2½-inch depth."

What's Involved in Being a Charwoman to a Gas Tank.

In one of Vancouver's biggest cleaning and painting jobs ¼ million square feet of tank were scrubbed down, had rust spots removed and finally were given a new coat of paint. The requirements: 2½ tons of paint; 1,600 lbs. of soap powder; 1,800 feet of water hose; a crew of twelve men working for more than ten weeks. Nevertheless, owners of the tank consider the job well worth while so that the tough protective paint film would add many years to the useful life of the big tank.

Blended for Quality"SALADA" TEA*Fifteen Simple Paint Rules.*No More Gravy Stains on the Cloth.

Eighteen months ago the Canadian Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association drew up 15 simple paint rules designed to help all those who at one time or another indulge in a bit of painting for the maintenance or beautification of their property or possessions. So great was the interest that the Association has re-issued the rules, with a few amendments to keep them up-to-date in view of the rapid strides in technical processes within the industry.

Following are the revised rules. They are worth clipping for reference during interior painting this winter, or against the time when you can wield a paint brush outdoors:

1. Use a good quality paint. If the job is worth spending time on, it deserves a paint that will give best results.

2. Stir the paint thoroughly before using. Everybody knows this should be done, but plenty of people still are inclined to skimp on the stirring.

3. Be sure that the surface to be painted is absolutely free from dirt, oil or grease — and, of course, make sure it is dry.

4. Follow the directions on the can. The manufacturer really knows best how his product should be used — he has spent a lot of time and money to find out.

5. When, or if, paint needs thinning, thin it sparingly in the way recommended on the can.

6. Use a good quality brush. It pays off in a better paint job.

7. If it is a new brush, give it a 24-hour soaking in linseed oil before painting.

8. Use a brush of sensible size for the job. Don't try to do a wall with Mosanto Chemical Co. promises a treatment for table linens, that will leave them looking and feeling like untreated cloth, but will make them as easily cleaned as oilcloth, reports The Financial Post. Cloths treated with plastic vinyl butyl will be proof against gravy or fruit stains. The new process also promises new life for slip covers on furniture, draperies and counterpanes.

a little brush, or to paint a narrow pipe with a big brush.

9. Allow plenty of time between coats. Not just enough time so that it has dried hard and firm.

10. Do your painting when the air is warm and dry. In interior painting make sure that there is plenty of air circulating.

11. If the surface hasn't been painted before, use a good primer sealer undercoating for the first coat.

12. Don't apply paint in heavy coats. Two thin coats are always better than one thick one.

13. In choosing paint colors from color chips, remember that the color of the finished job will be somewhat more concentrated than that of the color chip because it has been applied to a greater area.

14. Remember the simple rules of color — that blues, greens and allied tints are "cool" colors and that yellows and orange shades are "warm"; that light colors in a room give an impression of greater spaciousness and dark shades do the opposite.

15. Ask your paint dealer for advice on particular problems; or telephone or write any reputable paint company whose products you are using.

"Bottleneck? Who? Me?"

PERHAPS he's in love... or feeling virtuous because he's studying with a classmate over the telephone... Anyhow, he's forgotten that it's a party line and someone may be waiting to call out... while several people may have got the busy signal while trying to call in. He'd be shocked if you called him selfish, a bottleneck.

It's easy to forget, but kindly to remember that other people share your party line. To get the best results, "Do unto others as you would like them to do to you—and do it first."

The game, we gathered, was evenly matched, but our team came out on the short end of a 26-32 score.

More exhibition games are planned, then the teams will travel around the county to seek wins from Kingsville and Leamington.

The annual Essex High School Commencement exercises will be held in the high school auditorium on the nights of November 29th and 30th. A group of Grade IX pupils, directed by Miss Murphy and accompanied by Melba Billing, will sing "Bless This House," "Loch Lomond," "Comin' Through the Rye," "It's a Grand Night for Singing," and "One World." Grade XI girls will present gymnastics and tumbling, under the direction of Miss Murphy. The boys, directed by Mr. Rapsey, will present gymnastics on the high bar. There will be a dance by Grade XII girls, called "Military Taps," under the direction of Miss McDonagh, accompanied by Maxine Price.

The last number of the program will be a one-act play, "Kidnapping Betty," under the direction of Mrs. Chapman and Miss Stewart.

Corner Stone is Laid.

Although the weather was cold, some 150 people gathered to witness the laying of the corner stone for the new Sunday school and parsonage, being built by the Essex Baptist Church. The service was held at 10.45 a.m., between Sunday school and morning worship service. A special platform had been erected for the officials of the church and choir. Following the hymn "Faith of Our Fathers, Still," the deacons and building committee each took part in reading the scripture, using selections from the second chapter of the Book of Ezra. The Sun-Damm, led in prayer, followed by a choir selection, "Praise Him, Praise Him, Jesus Our Blessed Redeemer."

The documents which were to be placed in the stone, were outlined by Deacon Frank Thompson. These documents included the order of service, the resolution concerning the sale of the old parsonage, and the building of the new Sunday school and parsonage, the names of all church officers for the church year 1946-47, and the names of all active members and adherents. Later the new "Articles of Faith, membership, and constitution of the Essex Baptist Church" will be added.

Rev. Merle Johnson (Uncle Mel) of Grand Rapids, Mich., brought a short message, based on Daniel 9:17. He said: "This is the beginning of a building which will help people to know Christ as their Saviour. This is a Sanctuary of the Lord, a place of worship and a place of service. A building in which God will be praised and the gospel given out." He counselled the people to "pray for the work and to support it with a whole heart."

He also expressed the fact that "to save the children is to save the Dominion, and the strength of the church depends on the strength of the Sunday school."

Rev. Johnson laid the corner stone, assisted by the pastor, Rev. Fred W. Wakeling, and William Steekwood, of Essex.

While the pastor closed with the prayer of Dedication and the benediction, the choir sang softly "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me, Let Me Hide Myself in Thee." The people then assembled inside for the morning worship service.

McCarthy-Lafferty Nuptials

At a nuptial high mass, with the Rev. I. M. O'Neill officiating, in Holy Name Church, Essex, on Saturday morning, at 11 o'clock, Joyce Josephine Lafferty, R.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lafferty, was united in marriage to John K. McCarthy, son of Mrs. Violet McCarthy and the late Cyril McCarthy, of Detroit. The bride being a Sodalist, had the privilege of being married in the sanctuary.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, the bride was lovely in traditional bridal satin fashioned on long torso lines, featuring a yoke of illusion, long sleeves ending in points over her hands, and tiny satin covered buttons down the back of the bodice, and very full skirt. Her veil extending into a very long train, was held to her head in a tangle of pearl orange blossoms, and carried American Beauty roses.

Miss Olga Martinek, R.N., a classmate of the bride, and Miss Helen Myers, R.N., another classmate, as maid of honour and bridesmaid, were gowned alike, in wine velvet with headpiece of yellow ostrich plumes, and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Little Marilyn Lafferty, sister of the bride, as flower girl, in wine velvet, made similarly to the bride's, carried a nosegay of mums. Eugene Renaud was best man, and Junior Lafferty, brother of the bride, was usher.

During the ceremony Miss Miriam Monforton, another classmate, sang "Ave Maria." "O Lord I Am not Worthy" and "On This Day O Beautiful Mother."

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast followed at the Sunnyside Hotel, LaSalle, for the immediate family, and in the afternoon a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride and groom left by motor for New York, and on their return will reside in Detroit.

The bride is a graduate of Essex High school and Hotel Dieu School of Nursing.

St. John's High School Graduation Exercises.

On Friday, November 29th, graduation honours were conferred by Rev. E. G. Doe on Lawrence Mousseau, Evelyn Chevalier and Dolores Sedran.

In the morning, graduates attended holy mass in the parish church. A dainty breakfast followed in the club rooms, during which gifts, class and school spirit prizes were received by the students.

The evening program opened with "O Canada" and "Hymn to St. Ursula," sung by the student body. Lawrence Mousseau class valedictorian, in pointing out the great need of leadership in the world, called upon his classmates to choose Christ as their leader, to develop in themselves Christ-like qualities and thus lead others to Him.

Rev. Fr. Grant, C.S.B., in a few well-chosen words, enlarged on the valedictory theme, explaining to the graduates their duty to take part in the converting of the world.

A dramatization of L. M. Montgomery's famous novel "Anne of Green Gables," was presented by the students. This was followed by a display of eurythmics and dancing.

"God Save the King" brought the graduation to an end. Saturday evening, in the parish hall, there was a graduate's dance, under the auspices of the C. Y. O.

Lure of the Green Fields.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

Every day someone inquires as to the why and wherefore of the housing shortage. The reasons are plain enough. They spring from an immense shortage of trained men. There are too few carpenters, too few plumbers and plasterers, too few men to supply the tools and materials these workers need.

In part, our government has sensed this danger and has removed the restrictions on wages so that the incentive of profit and opportunity might restore the balance. But, strangely enough, it seems to have thought that these were isolated instances, and that partial measures would suffice to remedy the situation.

But they are not isolated instances. They are merely the open symptoms of a deep and profound discouragement that is affecting our whole business and industrial and economic life. One day our financial and industrial organizations, our services and societies and professions may be in the same dire straits as the housing trades. If so, it will be because the young blood that should have been steadily flowing into new positions of responsibility and trust has flowed elsewhere.

We are a country that is peculiarly vulnerable. Of course, it is quite possible to prove that Canada is a land of vast resources and potential opportunity. But what is that to the young? Elsewhere there is the lure of greater financial reward and freedom to achieve it. Here, they remember bitterly that unless they are members of a powerful group, their possibility of reward is rigidly controlled, and controlled not by employers, who know and recognize their worth, but by a government agency that is distant and unapproachable. Here, they remember that even these restricted returns are further limited by confiscatory personal taxation.

As they look to the south they see none of these things. They see, instead, businesses and technical operations eager to bid for new talent at prices that their present employers are not permitted to meet. So the stream of young Canadians flowing across the border in search of opportunity increases with every month. In the year that ended June 30th, visas were granted to three times as many men of professional and managerial training as had been granted the year before. There were more than twice as many in the higher clerical branches, and three times as many among the skilled workers.

These are facts that we must face. And before it is too late, we might ask ourselves if wage regulations that deny incentive, and income taxation that makes the young despair of success, can be justified by the little good that results from them.—Liberty Magazine.

Be a Canadian or Get Out.

If you don't want to be a Canadian Go back to the place you call home. If you think it's better than Canada Better have a doctor examine your home.

You won't find a place like Canada. Tho o'er the whole world you roam.

If you came from South America, South Pacific or Eastern hemisphere. The country where you were born. No doubt you hold quite dear. But if you like it better than Canada Then why do you stay over here?

Perhaps you don't like our constitution. Think it should be changed for you. But it was written for all Canadians. Not like some, for the privileged few. If you don't like this country, There is only one thing for you to do.

A few aliens have come to Canada, As spies for a foreign high command. Pretending to be patriotic citizens, Sang the praises of this fair land, While selling us down the river To some ruthless citricat band.

Most people that came to Canada Strived with all their main and might To become good Canadian citizens. For the red, white and blue they'd fight.

Became the backbone of the country Because Canada treated them right. —Ed. Byrne.

Cleanliness.

An appeal for cleanliness on health grounds has been issued by the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. The health officers point out that personal cleanliness, which includes sanitary living and working quarters, clean linen and outer clothing, and good hygiene of skin, hair, tooth, nail and foot, helps prevent the spread of communicable diseases. It also prevents skin ailments, especially the chance of infecting wounds.

Honour Thy Father.

A plea for respect and care for the elders among us is issued by the Department of National Health and Welfare. The Department points out that, as Science masters disease and the average span of life is lengthened, the proportion of elder people in the population grows rapidly. Calling for "old-fashioned" respect and care for the oldsters, to make the twilight of their lives more liveable, the health and welfare authorities remind the younger members of society that they, too, may be old some day.

The Value of Telephone Service.

Most rural residents, both telephone subscribers and non-subscribers, agree that the value of telephone service in their community is steadily increasing, according to a Bell Telephone canvass of farm areas in Ontario and Quebec. This is one of the many significant findings of two rural opinion surveys described in detail by K. L. Carruthers, Bell general development engineer, at this year's convention of the Canadian Independent Telephone Association, held recently in Toronto.

Mr. Carruthers stated that the specific point which stands out most clearly as a result of the surveys is the need for reducing the number of telephones on a rural line. To reach a satisfactory level, the Bell Company alone must increase the number of its rural circuits by some 2,500 or 35 per cent, he said. The surveys showed the importance of adding new subscribers in those areas not sufficiently developed and the desirability of certain general improvements such as the elimination of magneto (hand crank) systems.

With the realization that some rural areas do not have access to standard telephone service available to urban dwellers and remembering that an estimated one-third of all family dwellings in the two provinces are in rural territory, Bell workers undertook to find out how rural users feel about their present service, what improvements were most urgent, where service extensions were most necessary to give proper coverage; and, finally, why non-users do not have telephones.

Detailed questionnaires were sent out to 4,300, or some seven per cent of rural users, of whom 3,000 replied. There were general inquiries on the quality, value and adequacy of service, and users were asked to comment on types of equipment, rates and billing methods. A carefully selected cross-section was included so that all districts both English and French speaking, were represented.

While a great majority of users indicated a general satisfaction with the present service, there were substantial groups who registered dissatisfaction on particular points. By evaluating this information, Mr. Carruthers pointed out, the company gains a useful basis for determining its long-range improvement plans.

Most complaints related to the fact that the line were too many users on a line; that the line was often busy when needed or there was interference with calls in progress. The need for privacy in telephone conversations was emphasized by 71 per cent of these rural users. They objected to others "listening-in" or multi-party lines.

A somewhat different questionnaire was sent to the 4,750 persons covered in the non-user survey. Only 40 per cent replied but from these some interesting trends of thinking were revealed. For instance, 46 per cent of the non-users look upon the telephone as a necessity. Some consider it more important on the farm than electricity. Some three-quarters of the non-subscribers stated that on occasions they did make use of someone else's telephone, in many cases to the extent of more than 30 calls per month.

Selecting the Mating Pen.

Early in the year poultry raisers are concerned with making up the required number of mating pens for the hatching season. Whether or not an intensive, fully recorded system of pedigree breeding or a more liberal form of mating for the production of eggs for sale to commercial hatcheries is followed the general strength and vigour of the birds should be considered.

Over-fat sluggish, lazy birds will prove disappointing from a breeder's standpoint, and those that are weak, poorly developed are worse than useless, says B. F. Tinney, Dominion Experimental Station, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Birds typical of the breed and only those that are strong and vigorous as indicated by close, bright feathering, upright, alert carriage, prominent, bright eye and clean cut head and feet free from heaviness or meatiness should be selected. The birds, too, should be broad backed, deep heeled and straight, and full breasted. Disqualifications such as split wings, off-colour feathers, feather stubs and side springs are handicaps, so too are birds showing any eye defects such as distorted iris, grey or "pearly" eye, and those carrying too much fat.

While all these points apply to both males and females, it should be borne in mind that "the breeding male is half the flock" and selection of all males should receive special care.

Proper Feeds Help Hogs in Winter.

Many farmers when feeding pigs during the winter months may become discouraged by difficulties encountered due to weather conditions. In addition to a slightly greater feed requirement, special attention is necessary to ensure proper mineral and vitamin content of feed to prevent crippling, says E. Van Nise, Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Sask.

Winter crippling was once thought to be caused by a lack of exercise but is now known to be a deficiency disease (rickets). By feeding adequate minerals and vitamins pigs can be grown and fattened in small pens without sunshine or much exercise. It is a good plan to provide breeding stock with liberal space and pasture in summer and outside runs in winter, but when feeding for market greater gains are made without too much exercise.

A few years ago every feeder prepared his own meal mixture, giving separate attention to minerals, protein supplement and fish oil, but hog concentrates now on the market may be mixed with chop according to instructions supplied by the manufacturer, which simplifies the feed preparation. The vitamin content of such concentrates may be lost when held in storage for many months. In that case, for winter feeding, a half of one per cent fresh fish oil added to the chop would usually correct the deficiency. Pigs running outside do not require fish oil during the summer.

Trials conducted at the Experimental Station at Scott, have shown that a liberal allowance of prepared minerals without vitamin "D" could not be assimilated and pigs became unthrifty and crippled, while pigs receiving fish oil showed no signs of crippling. The addition of fish oil to the feed of the crippled lot quickly improved the thrift and gains. It was also observed in these tests that pigs fattened in August, and allowed to run outside until cold weather, seemed to store up sufficient vitamin "D" from the sunlight to enable them to endure confined winter feeding without crippling. However, the late fall litters required some vitamin supplement to prevent unthriftiness and rickets.

Paralysis of hind quarters of nursing sows usually happens suddenly while nursing a litter of pigs, or soon after. This is usually traceable to a deficiency of calcium in the diet during the gestation period. If a concentrate is not used before farrowing one per cent ground limestone in the chop will be helpful to both sow and unborn litter and should be continued during the nursing period.

Do Scientific Advances Reach the Farmer?

The "Ag Rep." (for District Agriculturalist) is a familiar figure in most farming communities. He is usually a very busy man. His job is to help the farmer. He is the main link between agricultural research and farm practice because he is usually the one who passes scientific information on to the farmer. This is a very important job. What is the use of research if its discoveries never reach the peoples?

The Agricultural Representative is appointed by the Provincial Department of Agriculture to do extension work among farmers. His sources of information are mainly bulletins and releases from Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture and from Colleges of Agriculture. He is, of course, a graduate in agriculture and so is a source of information in himself. But unless he has time to read and study his own knowledge will get out of date. With all their various duties agricultural representatives are hard put to it to know how best to use their time.

This is a problem that concerns the farmer. As a tax payer he supports agricultural research. As a farmer he needs to keep in touch with the latest developments. There are, of course, other extension agencies besides the Agricultural Representative. Where there is an experimental or demonstration farm in a community the specialists are always on hand to advise and inform farmers. Field days are frequently held when farmers are specially invited to visit the farms. Agricultural Colleges are generous in providing speakers for meetings and in supplying information to visitors or in response to letters.

A great deal of free material is available through government bulletins, farm journals and farm broadcasts. Agricultural films are often shown on the rural circuits of the National Film Board.

So although the Agricultural Representative is the main link between scientific research and the farmer he is not the only one.

Agricultural extension services will be the subject for discussion in National Farm Radio Forum on Monday, December 2nd. The broadcast topic will be: Do Scientific Advances Reach the Farmer?

Chemurgy is a fancy word that was invented in 1933 to designate the science of converting farm products to industrial use. It seemed to promise great things in the depression years of the thirties as wheat surpluses got ever bigger and markets for all kinds of farm produce fell off.

Actually the practice of chemurgy is quite old. Our pioneer ancestors knew many chemurgic tricks. They made woollen yarn and homespun cloth from sheep's wool. They made cider vinegar from apples, soap from household fats and leather from cowhide. But it wasn't until the 1930's that the "chemurgists" got organized and chemurgic research was seriously undertaken.

During the war years farmers were working overtime producing food and they had no worries about markets. But now that the war is over and markets may again become uncertain farmers are asking themselves "What

Tobacco Stocks High in Fertilizing Value.

Few crop residues will be found to contain the high level of plant food value of tobacco stalks, especially nitrogen, and potash, says R. J. Haslam, Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, Ont.

A fairly accurate estimate of the quantity of tobacco stalks produced each year can be obtained from the weight of leaf to stalk. This ration may vary considerably with the type of tobacco and with the variety. From records kept each year at the Experimental Station, Harrow, the ration for air-cured tobacco is about 1½ pounds of leaf to one pound of stalks. At the present production of stalk-cut tobacco in the burley and dark tobacco districts of southwestern Ontario the tonnage of tobacco stalks may be calculated to be 2,500 to 3,000 tons annually. Each ton of stalks, according to known analysis, will contain 60 to 70 pounds of nitrogen, 10 to 13 pounds of phosphoric acid and 50 to 90 pounds of potash, so that the total quantity of essential plant foods to be returned to the soil in Essex and Kent Counties is considerable.

Based on the present prices of chemical fertilizers a ton of air-dried tobacco stalks may be calculated to be worth $11 to $13. In comparison a ton of well-preserved barnyard manure is worth $1.50 to $2.00. It requires about 5 tons of barnyard manure to produce the same quantity of plant food as a ton of tobacco stalks.

In consideration of the present shortage of potash for distribution and the high fertilizing value of tobacco stalks tobacco growers would be well advised to put this important by-product of tobacco-growing to the best possible use as a fertilizer.

About Chemurgy " This topic will be discussed in National Farm Radio Forum on Monday, December 9th.

The industrial use of farm products may run along three main lines:

1. New uses for surplus or low-quality products e. g. alcohol from wheat.
2. Industrial crops to supply existing or new needs, e. g. soybeans and sunflowers for vegetable oils.
3. Profitable uses for farm by-products and wastes, e. g. cardboard from straw.

Of these three, the second seems to be on the soundest basis. Tobacco, sugar beets, soybeans are all industrial crops that have proved their worth. Others that show promise are sunflowers, fibre flax, and the starch crops — corn, wheat, potatoes.

As far as "surplus" and "waste" products are concerned there are some serious handicaps. Surpluses are irregular and hence an unreliable source of raw material for industry. Besides, if everybody in the world had enough to eat there would be no surpluses. Waste products are usually expensive raw materials for manufacture because of collection and transportation costs. However, some farm by-products are valuable in industry. For example, casein is used for plastics. Whey is used in the manufacture of penicillin.

Chemurgy does not now seem to be the fairy godmother it seemed in depression years. Nevertheless, both agriculture and industry will most certainly be the richer for some chemurgic developments.

The Milk Industry and the Royal Commission.

President K. D. Moncrieff, of the Ontario Milk Distributors' Association, at the annual convention in Niagara Falls recently, outlined frankly the position of the milk industry in facing the scrutiny of the Royal Commission now underway as a result of the decree of the Ontario Government.

"We welcome this investigation," said Mr. Moncrieff. "And we will do everything in our power to facilitate matters for the members of the Commission and I prophesy that its final findings will show that the Milk Distributors of Ontario have been faithful in our responsibility to the consumer."

"We are not Milk Trusts we are not making millions," stated the President, "and we are convinced that the present system of private enterprise in milk distribution is economical and efficient."

Facts about the dairy industry put forward by Mr. Moncrieff in his address show that more milk in various forms is used per capita in Canada than anywhere else in the world with average Canadian consumption running 500 quarts per year. Thirty-five cents out of every food dollar is spent on dairy products and the dairy farms of Canada represent a capital investment of two and a half billion dollars.

As an example of proving that the dairy industry wasn't "peanuts," to quote the speaker, he said "The dairy industry supports, directly or indirectly, 17% of the people of Canada, involving more than 2,000,000 individuals."

In defence of the present price of milk, the speaker for the Milk Distributors referred to the efforts of the milk producers. "The facts are, milk producers have been the prime movers in price increases and have gained nearly all that was or is to be gained from the increases. In addition, families where there are children are now subsidized by the 'Baby Bonus'. If that bonus is applied as it is meant to be applied, it should not be necessary for the milk industry to give a further subsidy by selling milk below cost."

The mood of the Association was outlined in the closing statement by the President. "I firmly believe that, irrespective of party affiliations, we should not leave it to government or parliament to tell us how to run our business or even to regulate it, other than to point where it prevents undue or unfair interference with the rights of others. The rights and privileges of one are inseparably bound up with the rights and privileges of all, within the law, and any attempt to dispose otherwise is disastrous to national strength and economy."

Love is Consistent.

What is love? Is it something perishable, changeable, based on sense perception? No, love is not that. We read in I John 4:8 that "God is love." Love, then, is wholly spiritual, unchanging, undecaying. When consciousness is awakened to this clearer understanding of love as wholly spiritual, we see that we never can be deprived of it; that it never can be taken from one and bestowed upon another; that it never can turn to hatred or indifference, never can criticize or condemn.

A young woman, soon after her introduction to Christian Science, began receiving letters from a sister telling her that the sister and her family were being extremely annoyed by a former friend who had become antagonistic and troublesome. Every time she received one of these letters she was filled with compassion for her relatives and resentment toward the other person involved.

One day a letter came in which her sister wrote that they were being compelled to take court action against their friend, and that they were dreading the ordeal. This aroused the young woman, and for the first time she saw that instead of seeing with the impartiality of Love, she had been, in thought, throwing the mantle of love over her relatives and leaving the other person outside, an outcast.

The young woman felt something of what Mary Baker Eddy says in "Miscellaneous Writings" (p. 312): "Oh, may the love that is talked, be felt! and so lived, that when weighed in the scale of God we be not found wanting. Love is consistent, uniform, sympathetic, self-sacrificing, unutterably kind." Finally she could honestly say she felt as compassionate toward the troublesome friend as toward her relatives; and if all of them had at that moment entered the room, she would have greeted him as lovingly as she would have greeted them. She had succeeded in obeying the command of Christ Jesus (Matthew 5:44), "Love your enemies," and in learning to love had lost all sense of enmity.

Later she received a letter in which her sister said that soon after the last letter the difficulty with their friend had simply melted away, quickly and completely. The understanding of Love's all-encompassing care had cleared away the mist of personal sense and revealed the qualities of true manhood.—Christian Science Monitor.

Goodness and philanthropy begin with work and never stop working. All that with work reckoning is what we do, and the best of everything is not too good, but is economy and riches.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Besides her husband, she is survived by six children, Lawrence, Beryl, Donna, Allen and, five-month-old twins, Gary Edward and Gail Bethany. Miss K. Driver Must Face Trial in Fatality.

Aftermath to a highway traffic fatality, Lawrence Pickle, of Essex, was committed for trial on motor manslaughter in county magistrate's court, in Windsor, on Nov. 26th. The charge resulted from the death of Lloyd Trudell, of Essex, October 3rd.

Magistrate J. A. Hanrahan committed Pickle for trial after hearing several witnesses called at the preliminary hearing. Trudell was a passenger in Pickle's car when it crashed into the truck of David Goyeau, which was parked on Number Two Highway for tire repairs.

Goyeau testified he was travelling toward Windsor when he had a flat tire. He had stopped his truck, and pulled it off the highway to the right hand side with no more than 2 1/2 feet on the left hand corner not on the right side. Clearance lights and rear lights were on at the time, he said.

Waved Flashlight. John Soulliere, of Maldstone, said he stood at the rear of the truck with a flashlight, waving the traffic safely by. He testified the car driven by Pickle, came down on the truck, and crashed into the rear of the truck.

Provincial Constable Stuart Hutchison testified he had passed the highway where the truck was stalled a short time previous to the accident and that conditions were as stated by Goyeau and Soulliere.

Guarding Public Health.

So that Canadians may live better, safer and longer, health watchdogs stand at the very thresholds of biological science. Canada's soldiers of disease-prevention guard the quality and safety of everything for eating and drinking and of ingredients of drugs and medicines. National Health authorities are working with the family doctor, the specialist and the scientific explorer in clinic and laboratory, for a healthier humanity.

School Lunches.

Teachers, particularly in rural areas, who are interested in seeing that their pupils have proper noon-day meals, are notified by the Department of National Health and Welfare that guidance or organization of such lunches is available. Through Provincial Health departments, school teachers may obtain a film strip entitled "The Rural School Lunch," which illustrates simple ways of planning a program of children's mid-day meals at school.

Fish Liver Oils.

Inclusion of fish liver oils in a child's diet, particularly in the winter months, to supply vitamin D, required for building strong bones and healthy teeth, is recommended by the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa. When the days are short, we can not depend upon the sun's rays as a source of Vitamin D, but health authorities point out that this vitamin is found in fish liver oils, which should be served to compensate for the lack of sunshine.

Local Farmers Getting High Corn Yields.

The Province of Ontario would be leading the Dominion in the way of corn production if all Ontario corn farmers were getting yields like those now being harvested on some Essex county farms.

In a recently harvested field on the farm of Albert Ede, of Gosfield North, the yield was 73 shelled corn bushels per acre. This corn was delivered and sold to the Essex Farmers.

This Pride D86 corn was planted on sweet clover sod on May 20th, and harvested on November 20th. Mr. Ede is very proud of the returns of the field and states, "It is the best crop I ever had."

By comparison, the 10 year (1935 through 1944) average yield of corn in Ontario is 42.2 bus. per acre, Wisconsin 37.2 bus., Illinois 45 bus., Iowa 47.1 bus., Minnesota with 37.9 bus., and the ten year United States average only 28.5 bus. per acre.

According to local officials, these high yields in this section are made possible by effective weed control measures, balanced fertility and crop rotation, high yielding adapted hybrid seed, and with favourable growth conditions.

A Message of Hope.

Perhaps it is appropriate that as the Christmas season approaches, we should have encouraging reports from returning Canadian delegates and observers to the meeting of the general assembly of the United Nations at New York. These reports are confirmed by Senator Wilkie Robertson of the Canadian delegation whose recent address made a marked impression on the assembly despite the controversies and what appears to be bitter debates, he reports that real progress is being made toward understanding and peace. It is well to remind ourselves that this progress is being made against great obstacles. Differences of race and culture, differences of language, national pride, economic interests and difference of religious backgrounds all have to be overcome. When it is considered that only a little over a year has elapsed since the most terrible war the world has ever known, this progress is quite remarkable and denotes an intense will to peace among almost all the peoples of the world.

The Path to Peace.

The experiences of the United Nations and the discussions regarding them have caused much heart-searching in the ranks of Canadian observers. Where is the path to peace? What are Canadians contributing? The courage of her sons in war and the resourceful and tireless support given by her "home front" earned for Canada an influence in world affairs far beyond that commanded by the size of her population. Are we meeting the challenge of our opportunities? On this it is interesting to note the Christmas messages issued by Canadian church leaders. Through them all runs one common note, "Canada's part in the struggle for lasting peace must start from within each Canadian."

Through them all runs, too, the faith that the Christian theory of behaviour is actually translating itself into practice in the relationships of individuals and in the relationships of Nations. In all the attempts at present being made to smooth and ease these various relationships, it is the Christian categories, although they may not be recognized as such, that are the impulse of the effort. Peace, justice, fair dealing on a basis of human mutuality. Toward this world, in spite of great difficulties and many obstacles, is struggling.

Pro-Con, Support Bracken.

John G. Diefenbaker, M.P., speaking to a P. C. business men's luncheon in Toronto, made it plain that the Progressive-Conservative party is solidly behind its leader. "Any suggestion that party members are not solidly behind federal leader John Bracken is wrong," Mr. Diefenbaker emphasized. "Mr. Bracken may not be a dynamic fighter, but we are all with him," he said.

Equality for all Provinces.

Hon. Brooke Claxton, M.P., of his first public addresses since returning from the Peace Conference at Paris, outlined in Montreal the objectives of the government of Canada. "In its proposals to the provinces, the Dominion government has tried to put the provinces in a position where they would be able to carry out their constitutional responsibilities properly. The Dominion is trying to avoid double taxation and treat all Canada on an equal basis," Mr. Claxton said.

Of Interest.

Canada's contribution to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (U.N.R.R.A.) was 154 million dollars in two years — the third largest contribution. In view of the great world need for food the Canadian government is anxious that U.N.R.R.A. be continued. Sweden has promised to send to Russia 300 million dollars worth of industrial goods in the next five years. There is much criticism in Sweden of this agreement on the ground that the Swedish people will have to go short in order to supply goods to other countries.

The United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization (F.A.O.) will draw up a food plan for Europe at its meeting in London, December 3rd. A branch in Europe to take over the work of UNRRA when that organization winds up will be one of the proposals discussed.

As price controls were removed in the United States this month headlines reported soap up 50% a jump in linseed oil from 16 to 35 cents, General Motors cars up another $100 and an additional raise of 9% on farm implements and tractors.

Not by birth does one become an outcast. Not by birth does one become a noble. Through deeds it is that one becomes an outcast.

Through Noble deeds it is that one becomes a noble. I must do something to keep my thoughts fresh and growing.—James A. Garfield.

Quick Breads — Time and Sugar Savers.

Bread is served on the average Canadian table three times a day. If it is served always in the same form meals may become monotonous. It is here that quick breads come to the aid of the harried homemaker. They stimulate the appetite by giving a change in flavour, shape, colour and texture. A batch of golden brown, hot-from-the-oven muffins will dress up the most ordinary meal. Tender, cake-like breads give variety when entertaining and hot biscuits add charm to the dinner menu.

Quick breads made with whole grain flours give both flavour and variety. They provide an excellent source of energy at a comparatively low cost. The fine, full flavour of whole grain cereals or flours should be enjoyed by the family every day, otherwise they miss a delicious treat, as well as cheating themselves of many nutritious food elements.

Today, receipts must be streamlined to meet the demands of time and also of the sugar rations. The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture suggest "Quickbreads" as the solution to this problem. A variety of delicious breads to serve for luncheons or dinners may be made by using different types of whole grain flour.

SPICED APPLE MUFFINS.

1/4 cup mild flavoured fat
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 cup unpeeled, chopped apples
1/2 cup milk
1 cup sifted, all-purpose flour, OR 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons sifted pastry flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup cooking bran
2 tablespoons sugar (extra)
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Cream fat, add sugar and salt and cream together. Add beaten egg, apples, and milk and stir well. Sift flour and baking powder, add bran and add dry mixture to wet ingredients. Fill greased muffin tins 2/3 full. Mix the 2 tablespoons extra sugar with the cinnamon and sprinkle over muffins. Bake in a hot oven, 400° F. for 25 minutes.

Even the full swing of stepped up peacetime production can't quite meet the demand for Surge Milk.

Dairy families need a machine that will do more of their work and save more of their time — they need Surge Milking.

The simple fact is that the Surge does so automatically what other machines have to be helped to do. The Surge does so more of your work and save more of your time. That's why you can afford to wait just a little longer and make sure you get a Surge. A Modern Machine is a better investment.

IT PAYS TO WAIT FOR A SURGE

Even the full swing of stepped up peacetime production can't quite meet the demand for Surge Milk.

Dairy families need a machine that will do more of their work and save more of their time — they need Surge Milking.

The simple fact is that the Surge does so automatically what other machines have to be helped to do. The Surge does so more of your work and save more of your time. That's why you can afford to wait just a little longer and make sure you get a Surge. A Modern Machine is a better investment.

Dieppe Raid Losses Told.

Rev. M. J. Dalton, O.B.E., of the Precious Blood parish, Windsor, major of the Essex Scottish, was the guest speaker at the semi-annual Rotary Ann night of Cottam Rotary Club, Friday night.

Speaking of his war experiences, he said, "I was on a boat for seven days previous to the Dieppe raid. Twenty-eight officers paid the supreme sacrifice; 92 per cent were casualties in one battle; 800 graves are carefully taken care of by the French. Ex-Major Dalton saw 5,000 killed at Caen. He gave a vivid picture of actual warfare at its worst and quoted the prayer he taught his boys in the front: "God keep you in the palm of His hand."

"Europe is sadly in need of food. She would thrive on what we waste. I did not see a banana in six years. What we eat between meals would greatly assist in saving a starving Europe. Canadians should save food for Europe. They have less per week than we have per day."

He said there were more Irish in the British Army than Canadians and that they came over by thousands to enlist. The speaker was introduced by Oscar Lemay and thanked by Harry Webster.

The dinner was served in Essex parish hall. Mrs. Hugh Ferguson and Mrs. Lewis Clark received the guests. President Hugh Ferguson presided and William H. White said grace. A toast to the ladies was proposed by Frank Congdon, who paid tribute to mothers and wives in the destiny of the world and especially in the work and lives of their helpmates.

A short address of welcome on behalf of St. Paul's Church was given by J. Arthur Nightingale. A group of vocal solos was sung by Mrs. Henry Manningham, with Mrs. Edison Squire as accompanist. Dance numbers were given by Misses Doris and Frances Kenyon, with their mother, Mrs. Frank Kenyon, of Essex, at the piano. Community singing was led by Delbert R. Jones, assisted by Harry Cullen, with Mrs. Edison Squire at the piano.

Miss Evelyn Queen presented the topic, "Sports," and roll call was answered by naming "a favourite sport." Miss Stella Hominek gave her report as delegate to the recent Women's Institute convention in London. The hostess served refreshments.

Local S. A. Officer Marries.

Salvationists and friends gathered at Earlscourt Citadel, Toronto, on Saturday afternoon, November 23rd, to witness the union of "two children of the regiment," Pro-Lieutenant Joan Cole and Captain John Carter, respectively the daughter of Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. Bramwell Coles and the son of Lieut.-Colonel and Mrs. H. G. Carter.

Following an appropriate song and scripture reading, the Field Secretary, Colonel G. Best, sought Divine blessing upon the young couple. Vocal solos, "O Perfect Love" and "Deep In My Heart," both arrangements of the bride's father, were effectively sung by Songster Leader Eric Shady, after which Lieut.-Colonel Carter performed the ceremony.

The bride was escorted by her brother, Corporal Raymond Coles, who arrived from England a few hours prior to the ceremony. Songster Catherine Carter attended the bride and the bride's father, Lieut.-Colonel Coles, supported the groom. Others participating were Captains G. Cox and R. Marks and Cadet R. Hicks.

Messages were read from the bride's relatives and former associates at the international Headquarters and in the United States; also from the comrades of Essex Corps where Captain Carter has been stationed for two years past. Also of special interest was a letter read by Corporal Coles from the bride's parents.

Adjutant L. Pindred, Toronto Temple, at which Corps the bride had served since her arrival in Canada, piloted the proceedings during the reception in the tastefully decorated lower hall, and participating were Lieut. Colonels Dray and Carter, Corporals Coles and other speakers. Envoy P. Fowler, of New York, specialising in the city, spoke and sang "My Task." The bride and groom, who are stationed at Essex, Ont., both spoke—S. A. War Cry.

The Crusader's Cavalcade.

Essex United Church is to be honoured with a visit of the Moderator, Dr. T. W. Jones, of Montreal. The Moderator will address all the women of Essex Presbytery on Friday afternoon, December 13th, at 2 o'clock. An invitation is extended to the whole membership and friends of the district. At 4.15 o'clock moving pictures will be shown to the pupils of the public and high schools, in the Sunday school room of the United Church.

The Moderator will arrive in Windsor today (Thursday). Plans have been made for an official reception in Lincoln Road United Church by the Essex Presbytery. Dr. Jones will address a public meeting in Lincoln Road church tonight at 8 o'clock. This address will be in the interest of the Crusade for Christ. From Thursday until Monday the members will continue to hear and meet the best speakers of the United Church of Canada. This is the Crusade Cavalcade.

On Sunday evening, at 7.30 p.m., Essex United will have as special guest, Dr. Gordon Agnew, who has worked untiringly for China during the war. The Van Impes, of Detroit, accorded him a success, and a blessing to all. The Van Impes have recently been converted to Protestantism and are rendering a great service to God by the dedication of themselves to the work of the church.

A special laymen's service has been planned for Friday evening, at 8.15 o'clock in Lincoln Road United Church. Rev. Gordon Agnew will share his experience in China.

Rev. Robert McClure, of China, noted for his leadership during the war, will speak to all the Essex Presbytery Young People, on Monday evening, in Lincoln Road United Church. Cars will convey our Essex young people to Windsor leaving the church at 7.30 o'clock.

These are great days for the United congregations of the county. The membership will see the church in action and will realize the magnitude of the work that the church carries on at home and abroad.

The Unconquerable Hope.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.
Perhaps it is not so strange that a certain breathlessness should have crept into our thinking of late. It is as if all the grim evidence of a man's divided interests had become a challenge to save ourselves and our world "While Time Remains." Others besides Leland Stowe have pointed the urgency of this challenge for us. Writer after writer and speaker after speaker have emphasized that we are facing our last chance, and that time is running out.

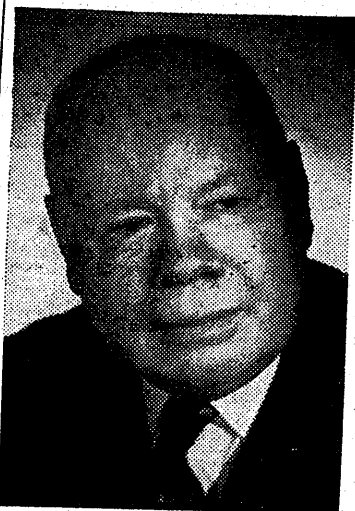

Perhaps it is a necessary challenge. But there is a danger that the very breathlessness of our approach to the happenings of our day may confuse our thinking. It is possible that in seeing the desperate need to find some firm ground on which we all can meet, and in facing the multitudinous problems involved, we have come to believe that safety lies only in finding all the answers. This is too distant a possibility for realistic thinking. But we can still hold to the hope that it is possible to find a way of living together even while we lack sympathy for one another's methods.

Despite innumerable incidents that in other days and other circumstances would have brought us to the very brink of war, despite injudicious actions and more injudicious words, the nations of the world are still in conference together, seeking a common ground of understanding, and expecting, at worst, a workable agreement. The unassailable fact remains: No nation is ready to take steps that might plunge the world into a new war. No nation believes today that any other nation would go to war again because of some quibbling over national honour, as they have in days past. That, at least, is a measure of progress.

To see in a reluctance to accept disarmament proposals a hint of aggressive thinking is to be short in memory, and short of understanding of how close Britain, for one, came to complete annihilation because of adherence to the mood of the moment rather than to the realities. It fails to assess, too, how definitely new weapons have changed all past thinking on essential security.

Those who see in conflicts of opinion as surmountable barrier to peace are too pessimistic. It is somewhat too much to expect that in a world with so many diverse political creeds that even the best intentions could assure complete unanimity. There is a Russian conscious of her strength, yet driven to a measure of truculence because her voiceless millions may assess the virtue of its government by what it secures. There is an uncertain France, turning sharply to the left. There is a Britain experimenting with a new political and economic formula. There is the United States repeating the circumstances of the last peace with her Executive and Congress sharply at variance. There is a South Africa reluctant to forgo advantages achieved a generation ago; an isolated Australia; and a Canada still uncertain what the immediate political future may hold. There is hardly a nation that has not some private sorrow or individual interest to heal or to protect. Yet a score of months after victory they are still determined to find a common ground.

We would be optimistic indeed to believe that out of these tangled interests we could forge a perfect peace. But we are ingrates if we do not sense in the stumbling and often bewildered and petulant negotiations a determination, overriding all this selfishness and stupidity and arrogance and guile, to find a way of life where the Four Freedoms will have a place to breathe.—Liberty Magazine.

A Vital Call to Egg Producers.

J. A. Peacock, Director of Egg Supplies for the British Ministry of Food, on his recent visit to Canada regarding egg contracts emphasized that a larger proportion of our eggs must be supplied in the fall season from fresh receipts if further contracts beyond 1948 are to be negotiated. This means higher fall production by Canada's poultry flocks, otherwise a large part of the present export demand will disappear and the industry will be faced with a twenty-five to thirty-five per cent cut in our present poultry population.

This presents a distinct challenge to the poultry industry which the producers can meet just as they have met others. During the war years production reached to an unthought-of level in answer to a challenge for more eggs for Britain. This new challenge is not one for further increase in producing population but by a reorganized program to move our present production program forward a month to six weeks earlier. Immediate action is necessary in the initial part of the challenge to be met in 1947. We must show some improvement in fall egg supply next year or otherwise the industry may not be so fortunate as to get a contract with Great Britain for 1949. If the industry wants a renewal of the contract it must be prepared to meet the other party's demands.

The problem is not as great, perhaps, as it may at first appear. It simply means that if each producer of chicks will take delivery four to six weeks earlier than in the past, sufficient pullets would be fully developed, ready to start laying early in September to supply the 1,000,000 cases called for and possibly an additional 500,000 as well. This idea of earlier chicks is not new, as more and more people have been getting their chicks earlier each year, from April or May to March, February, or even January.

It is possibly true that a January chick may cost more to rear than a May bird with respect to feed, fuel and housing. It is also true that winter-hatched birds develop into better birds than those of late hatches; the pullets lay from one to three dozen more eggs in their first year; mortality in the growing birds will not be over half that common in late May and June hatched birds. There is also a premium of at least six cents a dozen on all eggs supplied from September first to January 31st under the present contract.

This is not a case of a further increase in population. That is not wanted as the present critical feed situation will not support a larger population. It is simply a case of every one possible starting their chicks earlier, so that, allowing six months to grow, the pullets will be ready to lay next September.

It is important to check the brooding pens and equipment to make sure they are adequate in every way for the job. Then secure a supply of fuel and feed a month before they will be needed. If you have not done so, make arrangements for your chicks so you can get them started a month earlier than last year. Do so at once. Remember, one February-hatched pullet properly reared, will do more than equal three hatched in June receiving equal care in filling the fall contract for eggs.

This challenge can be met as effectively as those in the past. Continuity of supply will help maintain continuity of demand. The poultry producers of Canada cannot afford to lose the outlet for eggs provided by the present British contract and their renewal. It is of vital importance to every producer of eggs in Canada, so let's prove the job can be done.

Sanitation.

Since everyone benefits from sanitary conditions, the Department of National Health and Welfare suggests that everyone should share in the task of maintaining such conditions. The Department asks that work places be kept clean, wastes be disposed of promptly and properly, and toilets and wash places aired thoroughly and disinfected frequently, to ensure healthful living and environment, essential to prevention of disease.

The smooth sea never made a skillful mariner; neither do uninterrupted prosperity and success qualify men for usefulness and happiness.—Burton.

Canada Year Book — 1946.

The 1946 edition of the Canada Year Book, published by authorization of the Hon. James A. MacKinnon, M.P., Minister of Trade and Commerce, is announced by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

The present condition continues the policy of giving such space as can be spared to feature articles of special importance. Such articles give additional meaning and substance to the purely statistical and analytical material that constitute the basic chapter material. In a very real sense, as a perusal of the lists of Special Articles in this and former editions will show, they give to the Year Book Series an encyclopaedia value apart from its function as a statistical abstract.

Special Articles.
Among the special articles appearing in the present edition are two that have reference to wartime accomplishments, data for which were not previously available. These are: "The Relation of Hydrography to Navigation and the War Record of the Hydrographic and May Service," and "The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan — a Summary of the R.C.A.F.'s Major Role in the War of 1939-45." Other articles, many connected with Agriculture during the Transition Period, "The Outlook for the Mineral Industry in Relation to the Economic Development of Canada," and "The Report of the Royal Commission on Co-operatives."

All these articles are sponsored by responsible authorities of the Dominion or Provincial Services.

Other Features.
Because of the public interest in the articles published in former editions of the Canada Year Book, the policy of reprinting such articles as are of continuing value has been approved, and in future a number of these will be made available each year. Information regarding those available, together with the prices, is given in the list appearing at the opening pages of this addition.

In addition to the Special Articles, the regular chapter material has undergone thorough-going revision to reflect latest developments that have so far taken place in the post-war period.

It has been found possible to include more than the usual number of maps and charts in this volume, due to the fact that many of the maps, designed for other reports of the Bureau, were economically printed from existing plates.

By a special concession, a limited number of paper-bound copies have been set aside for ministers of religion, bona fide students and school teachers, who may obtain such copies at the nominal price of $1.00 each. Application, with remittance for paper-bound copies, must be forwarded to the Dominion Statistician, Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa.

How the Economist Helps the Farmer.

In a recent address on "The Economist and the Farmer," Joseph C. McKinnon, Principal Economist, Dominion Department of Agriculture, gave an insight into the work of the economist, particularly in respect to agriculture. Both the farmer and the business man, he said, are interested in securing the production the highest possible return. Farmers have to consider such problems as the kind of land they farm, the crops to be grown, the live stock enterprises to be developed, and the amount of labour and equipment to make a successful farm business. Economists try to provide some of the answers.

The economist uses different tools than his colleagues, the chemist and the biologist. He has no laboratory. He uses no test tubes. He does use statistical methods, accounting, and logic to assure proper analysis. He gets his first-hand information from farmers and business men. The first thing an economist has to do is to assure all who work with him that no one's business will be talked about in the presence of neighbours or competitors. The economist is not an enforcement officer. He does not investigate the farmer. He only endeavours to find out where an inefficiency, if such there may be, may lie and suggest a remedy. The economist searches for truth in the interest of all.

While there are many instances where accounts and records are available to economists, sometimes they have to compile the record. In such cases, they make what they call a survey which is based on a sample of farms. These surveys are carefully planned. In the first place, the economist will look up the census, the number of farms, the types of farms, the sizes, acreage of crops, number of live stock, and so on. He will then decide how many farmers he will have to interview to get a good cross section.

Health Education.

To those who enjoy reading, the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, recommends the numerous books, many of them free, which explain in laymen's language measures adopted by mankind to defeat disease and lengthen the span of life. The department suggests that it is every one's duty, particularly in preventive measures, to know how to safeguard health, both personal and communal.

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding.—Proverbs 4:7

Assails Ottawa for Shortage of Butter and Sugar.

In an address to the Progressive Conservative Business Men's Luncheon recently held in Toronto, John G. Diefenbaker, member of parliament from Lake Centre, Saskatchewan, charged, "Two examples of bureaucracy actually reducing the supply of essential foods come readily to mind. One is sugar, the other is butter."

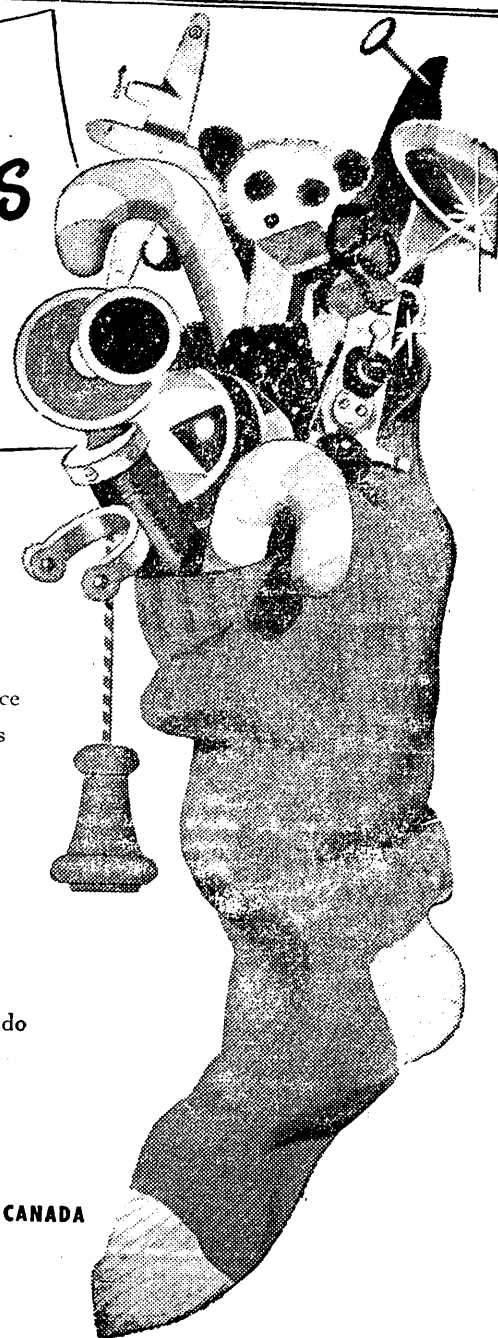

Mr. Diefenbaker continued, "At the moment there is a strong agitation in the United States to cut other countries off from supplies of sugar controlled by that country. At the same time, the government of that country is making valiant efforts — efforts which are meeting with success — to encourage a greater production in that country. Here in Canada we tolerate, or at least the Government tolerates, a production of beet sugar considerably less than it should be. The Ontario production of sugar, is 40 per cent under what it was before the war and what it could be if it were not that bureaucracy — this Government's passion for control — stands in the way. That 40 per cent is about 36,000,000 pounds or enough sugar on the present ration for about 100,000 people.

"More sugar would compel an increase in the ration, but the Government's attitude on controls shows that greater production is the lesser aim. Control for control's sake is paramount.

"When it becomes generally known in the United States that the Ottawa government is not now (even after the war) and has not for some years, worked to produce as much sugar as it could, our position in the three-way partnership will be uncomfortable. As hitch-hikers we may be asked to get out and walk.

"The butter situation is as bad, or worse. Here we are fifteen months after Japan's surrender with a lower ration than we had then. And bureaucracy tells us that the only way out is to reduce the ration — but maybe not until after Christmas.

"The government says it retains the controls where there is scarcity and yet in the face of the supply of milk being below what it is adequate — and against the wish of parliament — all subsidies in the case of milk were removed."—Merlin Standard.

A New Outlook.

If it were possible to have the viewpoint of Almighty God is considering the works of His hands. We should see a universe very different from the one which mortal mind presents. We should see man as he exists in his original perfection, as the manifestation of the Most High.

Since original perfection exists now in the mind which is God, what is there to prevent our appropriation of the primal and eternal facts of creation? What is it that hides reality and excludes from our thoughts man's birthright as the son of God?

Christ Jesus looked beyond the ordinary material standpoint, and with his God-given vision discerned the original perfection of man as the Father's son. The ill and sins of the flesh were excluded from his thought and from his experience as no part of true being. He said (John 10:30), "I and my Father are one, which surely signifies his unity of thought with the Father; one is immeasurable awareness of true being; one in Love, infinite, irresistible, unending. Recognizing this oneness, he was able to discern man's original sonship with God; thus he healed disease and raised the dead.

The understanding by which the sick were healed and the dead were raised for ever to be utilized and demonstrated. Creation as God knows it and as Christ Jesus revealed it is here, and no dark clouds or misapprehension can obscure that which is and always has been altogether lovely and perpetual.

Mary Baker Eddy writes in the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 126): "Human thought ney-projected the least portion of true being. Human belief has sought and interpreted in its own way the echo of Spirit, and so seems to have reversed it and repeated it materially; but the human mind never produced a real tone or sent forth a positive sound."

Can we perceive man in his original perfection as Jesus did, in spite of the opposite argument of a materially-repeated creation? That we can, and that of the demonstrator of that perfection desired above all else that we should share his unrivalled understanding is clearly evidenced in his wonderful prayer (John 17:24), "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, and that thou hast given me; for thou lovest me before the foundation of the world."—Christian Science Monitor.

DON'T CROWD—THERE'S LOTS OF ROOM

Christmas is just around the corner . . . everybody's in a rush—stores are packed with shoppers—so are the streets and the transportation system. Tempers are a bit frayed. Now's a good time for all of us to practice patience. There'll be time to make that purchase even if the counter is surrounded by other eager buyers. There'll be another bus or street car along in a little while. Christmas is a season of unselfishness—of living up to the rules of "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

Two Canadian "grain kings" and a Canadian "grain queen" — first of her sex ever crowned at the 47-year-old hay and grain show run in conjunction with the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago — were named in week-end judging.

Other Canadians Win.
The woman who won top honours was Mrs. Amy Kelsey, of Erickson, B.C., whose exhibit of hard red spring wheat — weighing 66.5 pounds a bushel — won for her the anomalous title of "wheat king of North America." She was not present at the judging and officials said her entry was listed as that of "A. Kelsey."

But later advices from Nelson B.C., identified her as the wife of Charles Kelsey, of Erickson.
A "queen" has never ruled over a grain division of the exposition.
H. L. Steigmeier, of Normal, Ill., was crowned soy bean king, his Lincoln variety having been selected as the best of hundreds of entries. His exhibit weighed 60.1 pounds to the bushel.

The reserve soy bean championship went to Robert H. Peck, of River Canard, Ont., for his Harmon variety, weighing 60.2 pounds.

Other top Canadian winners were: Rye king — W. S. Simpson, of Dawson Creek, B.C., whose "Hiram Cane" — apparently a new species — weighed 56.6 pounds a bushel.

Oats king — Gordon McArthur, of Stayner, Ont., whose beaver variety oats weighed 43.6 pounds a bushel.

Reserve wheat championship went to L. E. Peterson, of Victor, Mont., who showed a hard red winter variety weighing 66.2 pounds.

Ontario Winner.
Earlier Gordon McArthur, of Stayner, Ont., had been named "oat king of North America." His exhibit, weighing 43.6 pounds a bushel, a Beaver variety, brought Canada her third major grain award at the show in two days.

Bowmanville Triumph
Reserve oat king was also a Canadian. Garnet B. Rickard, of Bowmanville, Ont., his Carter variety weighing 45.3 pounds to the bushel.

R. P. Robbins, of Shaunavon, Sask., placed in a number of events. He took second spot in both the flax and the durum wheat competitions, fifth in the hay and grain show, navy bean division, and seventh in the hard red spring wheat class.

A. C. Douglas, of Chippawa, Ont., took first place in the small yellow peas event, while Beverly Tennent, of Ivey, Ont., placed second in the field pea class.

Roy C. Chamber, of Fenwick, Ont., won the white winter wheat prize, John H. Hargreaves, of Beachville, Ont., placing second.

Fred Pavley, of Wembley, Alta., placed second to Kelsey in the hard red spring wheat class, while William Gibson, of Laidner, B.C., placed fifth. Twelfth was Victor Watson, of Air-drie, Alta.

Honourable Line.
Mrs. Kelsey joins an illustrious line of wheat kings. Outstanding individual honours have gone to Dr. Seager Wheeler, Rosthern, Sask., and the late Herman Treble, Wembley, Sask., both five-time winners of the wheat crown. Another Wembley farmer, Francis Lloyd Kirby, equaled the record of Wheeler and Treble in winning the wheat title for three consecutive years.

Treble, who was murdered by a

CHARLES JORDAN

Making his second appearance of the season, Charles Jordan will be the guest singer on the Northern Electric Hour on Monday (December 16). Mr. Jordan, a young baritone who has become one of Canada's favorite concert artists, will sing "Through the Years" and "What is This Thing Called Love?" The program is heard weekly over the CBC's Dominion and Quebec Regional networks.

farmland on the San Bernardino, Calif., ranch of which he was superintendent. In 1945, was also named oats king in 1926 and 1927 and won the field peas championship in 1930 and 1931. His outstanding success in the wheat class resulted in a ruling by directors of the show barring three-time winners from further competition.

Lamb Championship.
W. J. Brodie, of Stouffville, Ont., won the reserve grand championship with his carload lot of purebred South-down lambs.

In the last International in 1941, Brodie placed first in the same event with the same type of animal.

Either "W. J." or "C. J." (Brodie, Senior) has been a force to reckon with for years in the livestock show.

Previous to this year's show, the Brodies had won eight successive annual titles in the carlot lamb contest. The Brodie record has not been approached by any other show family.

Canadian entries in the grain and hay show were lighter this year than previously, and Canadian agricultural officials attending the show said that farmers, after a four-year lapse in the international contest, were not yet "show minded."

O.A.C. Team Seventh.
The Ontario Agricultural College livestock judging team tied for seventh place in the sheep judging class. Top honours in all classes went to the Ohio State University judges. The Guelph contestants in the sheep class tied with Oklahoma University youngsters with 1,171 points out of a possible 5,600.

In individual scores R. H. Marchington and J. C. Rennie of the Canadians carried ninth and 10th places in the horse judging.

In the sheep judging J. A. Stewart won a seven-way tie for 10th place. Blenheim Winner.

In the Flint corn class Archie Laird, of Blenheim, Ont., took first prize, and D. H. Laird, also of Blenheim, placed second.

Thrifty Treats in Meats.

It is commonly thought to have meats which are tender and flavourful, that choice cuts, selling at top prices, must be used. However, the thrifty homemaker knows that the tougher cuts, when correctly cooked and judiciously seasoned, give tastier results at a considerable saving.

Anyone can broil a steak, but it takes an art to broil a stew. Stews go by many names in many countries. They have a popularity that knows no international boundaries. The Hungarian goulash, the French ragout, the English beef stew and the American meat pie are all stews, with that delicious flavour, which comes from long, slow cooking using moist heat. A touch of garlic makes a good seasoning and the liquid may be either tomato juice or the juice from cooked vegetables. A potato topping for meat pies is an excellent substitute for the pastry crust we miss these days.

Another good old favourite on Canadian dinner tables is the pot roast. When the vegetables are cooked with the meat, it makes a complete main course, that requires little attention while cooking. A "bouquet" of herbs, such as thyme, bay leaf and parsley, tied in cheesecloth, points up the flavour. Other seasonings which may be used, are horseradish, Worcester's shire sauce, garlic, chili sauce, or such spices as cloves, or mustard. By having a pot roast during the cooking with the spiced liquid from pickled fruits or vegetables a pleasing flavour is achieved.

If the meat, either in a stew or pot roast, is braised first, a rich colour and flavour is given to the meat and the Department of Agriculture, give the following rules for braising:

Season meat with salt and pepper; dredge (or sprinkle) with flour if desired; brown meat on all sides in hot fat; add only a small amount of liquid — replenish as it cooks away; cover tightly to retain moisture; cook at simmering temperature (below boiling point) on top of range or in a slow oven, until tender.

SAVOURY POT ROAST.

4 lbs. beef, blade, chuck, short ribs, round or rump
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons fat
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups boiling water OR tomato juice
1 teaspoon spicy meat sauce
1 bay leaf
1 onion
4 raw carrots, grated
1 sprig parsley
3 sticks celery

Dredge meat with flour. Brown in hot fat in heavy kettle or Dutch oven. Add water, meat sauce and bay leaf. Grate carrots and chop other vegetables together until very fine. Add to meat, cover and simmer until meat is tender, about 2½ to 3 hours. Add additional boiling water during cooking if needed.

NOTE: Veal or lamb may be used, instead of beef. Six servings.

LAMB RAGOUT.

2 lbs. lamb, breast or shoulder
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon pepper
Dash of ground cloves
2 tablespoons fat

Cut lamb into 1-inch pieces. Remove as much fat from lamb as possible. Dredge meat with flour, to which has been added the salt, pepper and dash of ground cloves. Brown the meat with the onions in hot fat. Add water and simmer in covered pan until tender. Skim off fat, add vegetables, sauce and salt. Cover and continue cooking until vegetables are tender. Serve with dumplings. Six servings.

Essex School Plans Ready.

Preliminary plans of the proposed additions and improvements to the Essex High School were submitted by the architect at a recent board meeting. The board instructed the architect to prepare blueprints and a committee was named to go to Toronto and show these to the minister of education for approval.

The report of the inspector of agriculture was read. He praised the work of the two teachers of agriculture and said: "Every effort is being made by the principal and the board to provide courses of study which will meet with the needs of a larger number of students and give greater service to the community as a whole."

A schedule of salaries with a minimum of $2,000 and a maximum of $2,500 was adopted, this to take effect at opening of school term on September 30th.

Ration Coupon Due Dates.

Coupons now valid are sugar preserves S1 to S36; butter, B29 to B34, and meat, M56 to M63.

All sugar coupons in book five, all evaporated milk beaver coupons, butter B29 to B34 and meat M56 to M63 expire December 31.

Re Butter Coupons.

Housewives, concerned because of a printed report that no butter coupons become valid from December 12th until the day after Christmas, have received heartening news from the War-time Prices and Trade Board.

One coupon will become valid on December 19th and one on December 26th. No butter coupon becomes valid December 12th.

Be Careful of Fire at Christmas Party.

Every year some Christmas festivities are marred by fire accidents to the Christmas tree, or to the decorations, or to the flimsy fancy dresses of little children. At times, the results are tragic. Without care, the kindest people may only be setting a danger trap for their children. Christmas decorations generally are made of inflammable material, and it is court-trouble to have a naked light anywhere in their vicinity.

For example, lighted candles in paper lanterns suspended from the ceiling or hung on a Christmas tree, or an improperly insulated string of electric lights may prove beacons of danger. With children romping about in their flimsy frocks, the greatest danger must be exercised that under no circumstances would it be possible for the children or the decorations to come into contact with a naked light, whether it be from gas, candle, or a flickering flame from a stove. Also a gust of wind may blow curtains or decorations across a naked light, and the damage is done.

Great danger lurks in using strings of electric lights that have done service the year before unless they have been thoroughly examined and tested before being put up. Each inch of every set of lights should be carefully inspected for worn places in the insulation or outer cover. If a worn place is on the outer cover, a strip of friction tape wrapped around it will help to prevent accidents. If the inside insulation is worn, the job is one for a practical electrician. The rough edges of insulation will have to be trimmed off and the wire wrapped spirally with friction tape above the break, overlapping each turn by about a quarter of an inch and ensuring that the damaged area is completely covered.

Often cords become worn where they enter the plug. The wire must be removed, wrapped separately with tape, and re-connected. Broken or damaged plugs should be discarded. Bulbs also should be tested before being fixed.

Facing Critical Power Shortage.

Southern Ontario, in common with other parts of Canada and countries throughout the world, is facing one of the most critical power shortages of all time and in order to get through the most difficult period, from now until the first of March, Hydro has made an urgent appeal to all Southern Ontario municipalities to voluntarily co-operate in exercising the strictest economy in the use of electricity.

This announcement was made at a special press conference this week, when Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, chairman, and Hon. George H. Chalmers and W. Ross Strike, K.C., commissioners, of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, discussed the present power supply situation.

The Commission, it was stated, had suggested in a letter to Hydro municipalities in Southern Ontario that the following specific measures might be adopted to effect the greatest economy:

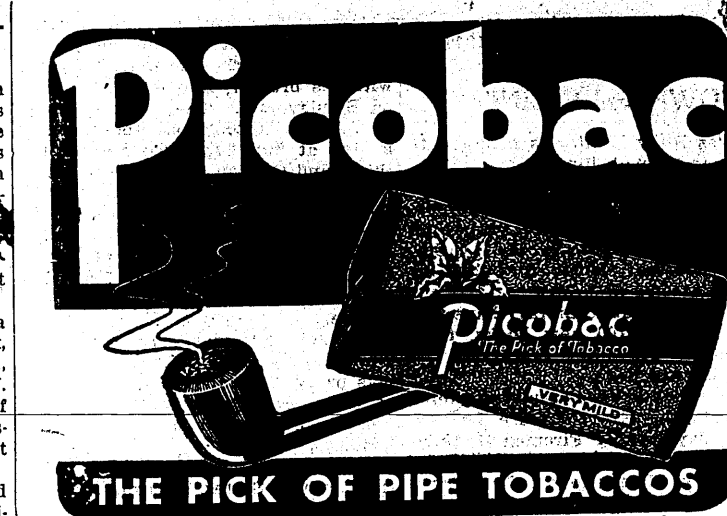

1. Eliminate the use of electricity for signs and the illumination of billboards from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; also eliminate window display lighting from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.
2. Eliminate all Christmas decorative lighting, until Saturday, December 21st, and again after January 1st.
3. Curtail street lighting to the lowest level consistent with public safety.

4. Exercise strict economy in homes, factories and commercial institutions. This involves:
(a) Turning off lights when not required.
(b) Avoiding the use of electric air heaters.

(c) Making the most frugal use of electrically heated water (and checking up on leaking hot water heaters).
(d) Avoiding the operation of range elements on high when a lower heat will serve the purpose and turning all elements off as soon as possible.

(e) Avoiding all non-essential outdoor lighting.

5. Where practicable, endeavour to get industries to switch from day to night operation and exercise strict economy.

THE PICK OF PIPE TOBACCOS

6. Wherever possible, keep water-pumping loads and water-heater loads off the peak daily.

It was explained that during this heavy load winter season the supply of power in Southern Ontario was insufficient to meet the demand. This condition had developed because, during and since the war, the Commission had been unable to develop power in sufficient quantity to keep pace with the enormous increases in demand. Materials and manpower for vital industrial expansion during the war years had outranked the claims of utilities for the construction of new power plants and, after the war, shortages had seriously retarded the Commission's program for the construction of new power plants.

The present power shortage, it was stated, had already resulted in the delivery of power to basic industries of Southern Ontario being severely interrupted at the time of peak demand between the hours of 4 p.m. and 7 p.m., and to a lesser extent throughout the entire working day, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Speaking for the commission, Dr. Hogg said that in a matter of such importance to the people of the province, and to the country at large, he hoped that a great deal could be accomplished through voluntary co-operation.

"I am, therefore, asking," he said, "the earnest co-operation of Hydro municipalities and all Hydro consumers at this time to do everything they can to save in the use of electricity."

Lunch Important.

In a special message to the business girl, the Department of National Health and Welfare points to the importance of the mid-day meal, for best returns in work and enjoyment. This meal is as important as a substantial breakfast. "Don't make it just a soft drink and sandwich, girls," says the health department. "A good lunch should include hot dishes, when available, with milk, meat or meat alternatives, 'Canada Approved' vitamin B bread, vegetables and fruit."

"I thought I was WELL-INSULATED""till polythene came along!"

Well may the thick-skinned rhinoceros grieve, for chemistry has produced an insulating material that puts even his tough hide to shame... It is called polythene—a new plastic that stands up to heat and cold and is unaffected by any known chemicals at ordinary temperature. Its unusual insulating qualities make it an indispensable factor in the vast, new field of radar and television while it gets back to earth again in the form of simple, resilient, waterproof refrigerator bowl covers that seem to last forever... polythene, in its scope of application, is another outstanding example of what Chemistry is contributing to our daily comfort and welfare.

Carbon Black (a nuisance when it collects on the lamp chimney) makes today's tires much tougher and abrasion resistant. 25 years ago tires ran 5,000 miles, with luck. Today's tires, thanks largely to the addition of carbon black, run at least 5 times farther. A versatile material, carbon black finds its way into such diverse products as ink and buttons, fountain pens and, yes, carbon paper.

A strap without stitches will grace the wrist watch of the future. It is molded from the versatile plastic, nylon, which makes it unaffected by weather, perspiration or continuous wear. Tested by servicemen under all climatic conditions, it is now about ready for peacetime use.

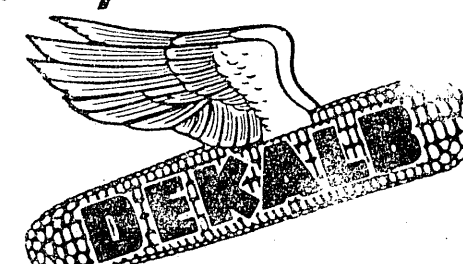

Practical farmers weight their tractors by simply adding water to the tires. In summer this procedure is fine, but in cold weather the addition of some antifreeze to the water load is necessary. Here chemistry steps in. Calcium Magnesium Chloride obtained from C-I-L salt at Neepawa, Manitoba, is the low cost chemical ideal for this purpose. It has no detrimental effect on the tires.

Profitable Way to Feed Winter Steers.

Profits from winter steer feeding are largely governed by the relative market value of steers in fall and spring with the cost of feed, labour and housing. Other factors to be considered include the selecting of good feeders and general management, says E. Van Nice, Dominion Experimental Station, Scott, Sask. When feed grain is available at 1 to 1 1/2 cents per pound and reasonable gains are obtained, a spread of two cents per pound between buying and selling price gives a good profit. Long yearlings are usually fed from 130 to 150 days and calves approximately 200 days.

No horns should be allowed in the feed lot and dehorning trials at the Scott Station indicate that a steer dehorned at the beginning of the feeding period cannot be expected to make the total gains of a similar steer already dehorned, consequently in buying feeders horned cattle are not worth as much.

If only a few steers are to be fed, stall feeding is suggested, but if many are to be fed, lots of 10 and 20 are more satisfactory than larger groups.
Water and salt should be kept constantly before the animals. The tank heater is valuable to take the chill from the water in the cold weather so that plenty will be drunk. Loose salt for the animals is preferable to blocks. One to two pounds of feed per head daily, according to the size of the animal, is sufficient at first and increases or change of mixture should be made gradually.

In the trials at Scott, wheat, barley, rye and oat chop have been compared; each fed alone and a fifth lot was given a mixture of equal parts of each. In an average feeding period of 135 days, mixed grain gave the greatest average gain per head of 209 lbs. wheat 202 lbs., barley 189 lbs., rye 185 lbs., and oats 181 lbs. A medium grind was found more satisfactory than finely ground grain.

Rye chop becomes quite pasty if finely ground and has a further disadvantage of frequently containing ergot which is harmful. Several roughages have been tested at Scott, including prairie hay, sunflower silage, oat straw. Their general value for steers, when used with a full ration of chop, was in the order mentioned. It was also found that in seasons when a green second growth was in the oats before cutting that the oat straw was more profitable to use than hay at a higher price. Normal oat straw containing no green growth was the least valuable of the roughages tested but reasonable profits have been realized by its use with a full grain ration when hay was not available at a normal price.

From a half to one pound per day per head of linseed oil meal added to the chop during the last month of the feeding period improves the finish and coat appearance of feeder cattle.

Because right is right, to follow right quences.—Tennyson.

PUBLISHED IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST BY JOHN LARA, LTD.

CBC Neither Flesh nor Fowl.

There are two main ways to provide a country with adequate radio facilities, and they are exemplified by the systems currently in operation in Great Britain and the United States.
In Britain, all broadcasting is in the hands of the BBC, a government monopoly which sells no time and obtains its revenue directly from the taxpayer. In the United States all radio stations are owned by firms or individuals which receive no revenue from the taxpayer, but support themselves by selling time on the air to advertisers.

Where does the Canadian Broadcast Corporation fit in? It would be hard to say. On the other hand, the CBC is an emanation of the Crown, and receives funds for its operation from the taxing public. On the other hand, it nets a tidy revenue from the sale of its time to advertisers (chiefly American). The CBC, then, is in the very pretty position of enjoying the money-making features of both systems.

How do the services provided by the CBC compare with those provided in Britain and the U. S. A.? Supporters of the government-monopoly system (and they are none too numerous) claim that it stimulates and encourages the country's native talents, and acts as a unifying national influence. This the BBC may do; the CBC, with its preponderance of American network programs and American gramophone records, certainly does not.

Privately-owned American radio gives American listeners programs which, through the competition of broadcasters, have reached and maintained high standards of excellence, and which cost the American taxpayer nothing. The CBC, itself producing virtually no programs of outstanding merit, continues to stifle natural competition in Canada, and at the same time to mulct the Canadian taxpayer of $2.50 a year.

It is time Canadians made up their minds. Which system do they want?
Do they want a complete government monopoly which will tax them to the hilt, and dictate what they may hear?
Or will they wake up to what is happening, and sweep aside stifling governmental interferences so that Canadian individuals and Canadian firms can be free to make of radio in this country the living, dynamic force it is in the United States? There are few who would deny that American radio is the finest in the world. Canadian radio, left free from governmental oppression, could make broadcasting in this country equally fine for Canadians.

Under the present set-up, we are getting the advantages of both systems, and the benefits of neither.

GOLDSMITH.

(Held over from last week)
Workshop Preceptor and Mrs.
Archie Reid, of Goldsmith Royal Black Preceptory 615, held open house on Friday night for members with their wives and families. The evening was spent in playing cards, and string music was provided by William Chadwick, Andrew McGregor and Miss Hazel McMullen, followed by a chicken dinner, served to 40 guests.

Political discussions are many and varied in the nation's capital as the Christmas season approaches but it is noticeable that all the heat and bitterness has gone out of them. Perhaps the season has something to do with this greater moderation in argument but important other reasons are also apparent. There is a growing awareness that Canada's problems are part of a great world problem — the search of human beings for a way to live together — and that the solution to this problem can only be formed in co-operation and understanding. Two outstanding factors seem to contribute to this thoughtful mood: all eyes are on the United States as the coal strike races to a climax and its effect on Canada outlines our common interests with that great country, and seriousminded Canadians are carefully considering the mutual interests of Canada's provinces as they see seven of our nine provinces hopefully negotiating on tax agreements while our two largest and wealthiest provinces stand aloof.

The Prime Minister at Quebec.
One of the hopeful signs of Canadian amity came when, in the ancient Citadel of Quebec, the Prime Minister of Canada paid tribute to one of her greatest sons and tried sincerely and ably to retain the services of Rt. Hon.
Louis St. Laurent for the nation. Notably was the tribute paid by the government's policy on conscription at a time when a refusal to do so would have left Canada without an effective government.

Perhaps next in importance at Quebec was Mr. St. Laurent's outspoken declaration that the federal government had no thought of encroaching on the rights of the province and that no reason to fear any lack of respect for the Canadian federal pact. Mr.
St. Laurent's blows at Mr. Duplessis have had a noticeable effect on thinking in our French-speaking Canadian province.

Ontario.
It is obvious that Mr. St. Laurent's words respecting Quebec are of equal force with regard to Ontario where an active battle is going on under the surface. The Ontario C.C.F. leader has openly charged that Duplessis and Drew are working together and using "Les Unions des Electeurs" (the Social Credit movement in Quebec) as a "Trojan Horse." Ottawa observers are quick to note in Premier Drew's radio talk of last week, references to his party as the "Conservative Party" and his emphasis on that name as he said the party was not apologizing for the name "Conservative." Many ask to what extent this indicates Drew's withdrawal from the "Progressive Conservative" Party headed by Mr.
Bracken.

Danger for Canada?
Although it appeared as a side issue in his address at Quebec, Mr. King's warning against multiple political parties in Canada is considered very seriously in many circles here. It is recognized that the primary duty of responsible government is to govern and effective government can only be by majorities.

Canada is a country with many racial, religious and economic interests but the fundamental division on political issues is between the liberal minded and the conservative minded. It is argued that great care must be taken to see that majorities which are a basis for government are not dissolved by breaking up into racial, economic, sectional or other group interests.

The Federal Proposals
There are some signs of anxiety in Canada that the social legislation outlined in the Dominion government's proposal to the provinces should be dolayed.

The annual meetings of Liberal associations in British Columbia and many elsewhere urged that the old age pensions outlined are needed and many urge higher pensions. Other important projects which will be started as soon as agreements are reached with the provinces include: a co-ordinated Dominion-Provincial policy of public investment, a general exploration mapping, agricultural surveys, development of resources which are interprovincial in nature, demonstration projects on processing and distribution of fishery products, etc., and a national health program.

Items of Interest.
An international plan is under way
now to prevent depression. Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States are preparing forecasts for 12 months ahead on what can be expected in the way of employment, exports, production, public works and private investment. The forecasts will be exchanged and action taken to prevent any threat.

The minister of veterans' affairs has now officially announced the regulations protecting veterans who made commitments on holdings smaller than those now required.

Cereals for Pep.

Such cereals as oatmeal are essential to breakfast on cold mornings, say the nutritionists. An authority in the Department of National Health and Welfare points out that such dishes are not only appetizing, but provide warmth and energy, while supplying important minerals and the B Vita-

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1946.

For the Shut-Ins.

By Irene Bostwick.

My little girl, eight years old, presented me with a list of "shut-ins" that she would like to give a Christmas box. The idea was good, and I felt I should encourage it. This was my problem. What could we give that would be different, useful, yet inexpensive? This is what we did.

We chose a nice Christmas card for each box, and on the back of each she wrote:

"This idea was designed especially for you. You have always been so good and true. Some parcels you can open on Christmas day. But the ones that are dated — just let them lay until the date on the bottom draws nigh. Your curiosity then you can satisfy."

Then we selected seven small gifts from the store, wrapped each with care and dated them from December 26th to January 1st.

For December 26th we bought a cake of toilet soap. We cut a piece of cardboard, slightly larger than the soap, and put under it before wrapping. This was to disguise it so the receiver would not guess what it was. In this parcel she put this verse:

"Take this cake of soap, and add some water. And scrub 'till you look like a white man's daughter. Soap is scarce, I know that's true. That's why I'm giving out last cake to you. Mether always washes my ears and neck. And I'm really sick of it, by heck!"

In the soap gifts for men and boys, we changed the first two lines like this:

"Wash with this soap, and to your joy You'll find you look just like a white boy."

In the parcel dated December 27th, we put a small writing pad, with this verse:

"I tried to think of something to make you glad. That's why I thought of this little pad. It will be handy as can be. When you think of items, one-two-three. That you want the folks to get up town. Before you forget, quick! Write them down."

On December 28th the receiver gets a pencil with a piece of cord two feet long attached. We cut a piece of cardboard three inches wide and the length of the pencil, and folded it into a three-sided parcel to disguise it. The verse reads:

"A pencil is a thing we used to hunt And the fellow who lost it bore the brunt. First mother bought one and to the desk it is tied. And it was ever unlatched it, it is best to hide. So I'm giving you a pencil, with a bit of string. So if you need a pencil, you can find the thing."

The parcel for December 29th includes a handkerchief, on an odd shaped piece of cardboard. This poem was included:

"I've always felt that you were proud of me. And wonder what I'll grow to be. It's nice to feel that you live close by. At your house I never feel the least bit shy. That's why I brought this hanky with love. So you could use it with an important Grace."

For the boys and men, we changed the last two lines to:

"That's why I brought this hanky with a border around. So you can blow your nose with a honking sound."

We bought paper doilies for December 30th. My little girl painted the borders of them with crayons. We put three in each parcel with this poem:

"I painted this doilie as best I could. In just the colours I thought I should. This paper is thin and easy to tear. When I got through it looked the worse for wear. Put it in the centre of your dinner tray. Tomorrow or some other day, When it is soiled as it can be, Don't worry, because I painted you three."

A comb, with the following verse, filled the parcel for December 31st:

"I thought this comb was really a beauty. Because of it I'd hate to be a 'cootie.' I'm sure this comb won't even pull. Even though your hair is tangled like wool. You know I'm just joking, don't you friend, And trying my best a big smile to send."

The last parcel to be opened on January 1st, included a package of paper napkins and this verse.

"I'm giving you these napkins last,

Butter Production Showed Increase in November.

For the first time this year, butter production in Ontario during the month of November showed an increase over the corresponding period of 1945. C. E. Lackner, Director of the Dairy Branch for Ontario, reports in his monthly summary of creamery instructors' reports. He adds, however, that owing to the natural seasonal decline in production this increase, which is in the neighbourhood of five per cent over the 1945 figures, does not help the stock supply very materially. Cream quality, the report states, continues to show improvement over last year, this being to some extent attributed to the interest in quality aroused by the butter quality competitions. Mr. Lackner also reports that more cheese-factories are closed for the season, except those which normally operate during the winter. In some sections of the province, it is reported that producers are turning from the cream to the fluid milk markets, due to the differences in prices paid for the two types of markets.

Lessons from the Christmas Story.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

It is not easy to remember, even in this season, that the spirit of Christmas means to us good will and friendliness and kindly thinking began in Palestine; the same Palestine that is now dyed in blood and bitter prejudice and fanatic hate.

It is not easy to remember that the Wise Men who came from the East came from that very East that is the question mark of our present thinking. From that East too, where Czech and Slav and Pole gaze at one another with suspicion and distrust, there came first the story of Good King Wenceslaus.

It was out of Nuremberg, that so recently echoed to the horrifying story of man's vast inhumanity to man, that there came St. Nicholas and so many of the pious and gentle legends that have surrounded the Christmas story with its heart-searching loveliness.

If Christmas had been a product of our favoured lands, it would have been easier to understand. We know ourselves to be seeking a world where men may live together in kindness and charity, in safety and in peace. We have no such faith in other peoples, not even at Christmastime.

Yet out of the East both near and far was born the Christ Child. There the Christmas story had its origin and the full flowering that made it one of the gentlest influences in our lives.

Perhaps in the light of this knowledge we will have to review the possible self-righteousness of our own thinking. Perhaps we may have to concede that the failures that have brought us the dark forebodings for the future have grown not from political chicanery and diplomatic misdirection, but have resulted from the failure of human understanding.

We look back with something of a sense of failure over the weeks and months past, with the desperate efforts to forge a workable plan of world organization out of a thousand conflicting interests. Yet perhaps it is not so much failure in achievement as it was a failure in method and in hope. Perhaps in our expectations we have been moving a little too fast. Perhaps our successes have been because we tried to achieve a political formula between nations who had yet to learn to understand one another.

Until we find this flux of good will and world companionship to break down our reticences and to emphasize our hopes and aspirations, what chance have we for universal understanding? But if we can make even our weaknesses and our failures understandable to one another for what they are, a stumbling effort toward a common good, we have achieved a forward step. That is a basis on which we might formulate a just and lasting peace.—Liberty Magazine.

Find 2-4-D Unsuitable. Results are Not Good in Greenhouse Test.

The aazing weed killer, 2-4-D, which has worked so well on lawns, has been found unsuitable for greenhouse use, reports Leslie Ounsworth, plant specialist at the Dominion Experimental Station, at Harrow.

Extensive Research.

Mr. Ounsworth has been conducting extensive experiments in the greenhouses of the station.

"A comparison was made between the use of 2-4-D and steam in treating greenhouse compost to control weeds. These treatments were compared against untreated soil," said Mr. Ounsworth.

"Three weeks after the experiment was started a count was made on the weeds in the various plots. The untreated soil averaged 180 actively growing weeds per square foot, while the average for the 2-4-D plots showed 15 weak weeds per square foot. The stand one another's emotions. As this is written another world gathering is meeting in Paris. For all the cumbersome of a name, the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization has an essential purpose and an intelligence of approach that was lacking in the more impressive Assembly.

Its purpose is to achieve a basic understanding that will make world organization intelligible to peoples who have different cultural backgrounds, different faiths, different economic and political thinking. Time and again in the gathering of the United Nations Assembly when who were sincerely seeking some common good failed because there was no attitude of comradeship that would have made clear the integrity of their intentions.

Until we find this flux of good will and world companionship to break down our reticences and to emphasize our hopes and aspirations, what chance have we for universal understanding? But if we can make even our weaknesses and our failures understandable to one another for what they are, a stumbling effort toward a common good, we have achieved a forward step. That is a basis on which we might formulate a just and lasting peace.—Liberty Magazine.

From his experiments the plant specialist concluded:

1. That weed control in greenhouse soil should be established by steaming the compost (this treatment has other advantages).

2. The lawns should not be treated with 2-4-D for weed control before seeding. It would be advisable to wait until the young lawn has developed a month or so.

3. That if the compost is treated with 2-4-D it should be allowed to lie at least a month before the crops are sown.

A purpose underlies character, culture, position, attainment of every sort.—Munger.

Dairymen Talk Insemination Plan.

(Held over from last week)

Essex County milk producers will sponsor an artificial insemination station in Essex County within the next few months if dairymen decide that such a venture would be advantageous.

At an initial meeting of Sandwich South Township milk producers Friday night, the idea was discussed thoroughly and 18 milk producers in the township with 315 cows declared themselves in favour of such a station.

Higher prices for sires, high cost of keeping them and the danger of handling bulls are some of the arguments advanced by proponents of the venture.

Other factors are the improvement of herds which would be facilitated by the availability of proven sires and the fact that proven sires of the desired type are likely to cost more than now.

Angus McKenney, Essex County agricultural representative, explained how the stations are operated. Most economical way of operation found thus far, Mr. McKenney pointed out, are units of 1200 cows which employ a full-time technician.

Financing of the venture is accomplished through membership fees of $5 for each member, underwriting the cost of bulls through promissory notes of $35 for each member and a service fee of $5 per cow, he explained.

Mr. McKenney said that if milk producers are of the opinion that a station for artificial insemination of dairy cattle seem advantageous, and if farmers want one, it could be put into operation within six months to one year.

A number of farmers spoke in favour of the plan, saying that with present prices for livestock, the individual owner can no longer put out the cash for the type of sire he would like to have head his herd.

W. M. S. Christmas Meeting.

(Held over from last week)

The Christmas meeting of the W. M. S. of Essex United Church was held at the parsonage, on Tuesday afternoon. A special feature of the meeting was the affiliation of the C.G.I. group, who will be given a missionary project for the coming year. The devotional period was in charge of Mrs. J. A. Dowse, assisted by Mrs. R. H. Findlay and Mrs. E. Richardson.

Plans were made for the visit of the Moderator to Essex, on Friday the 13th, when a rally of W. A. and W. M. S. members of the Presbytery will be held. The treasurer's report was very gratifying, considerably more than the allocation for the year, having been raised.

A beautiful Christmas duet was rendered by Mrs. Parr and Mrs. McMullen. Miss E. Johnston gave a most interesting review of Chapter III of "India at the threshold," the splendid attention given being evidence of the able presentation of the subject.

The nominating committee brought in the following slate of officers for 1947: Past president, Mrs. R. H. Parr, president, Mrs. S. E. Hill; vice-president, Mrs. A. H. Plant; recording secretary, Miss E. Johnston; treasurer, Mrs. J. A. Dowse; supply secretary, Mrs. Alger Naylor; Christian Stewardship secretary, Mrs. E. Richardson; missionary monthly secretary, Mrs. H. McGill; literature secretary, Mrs. R. Heaton; community friendship secretary, Mrs. J. A. Naylor; associate helper's secretary, Mrs. A. H. Plant; temperance and Christian citizenship secretary, Mrs. R. H. Findlay.

The meeting closed with a Christmas story, told by Mrs. A. Naylor, after which the hostess served refreshments.

Fire Proofing Christmas Trees.

Christmas trees of themselves may be fire hazards. While freshly cut trees do not ignite easily they soon become dry and constitute a fire hazard on account of the amount of resinous substance they contain. At the same time, the danger of fire may be obviated, if not entirely prevented, through chemical treatment. On the other hand, Christmas trees are marketed rapidly after being cut, so that chemical treatment is not always practicable.

However, it has been proved that the wood and the pine needles of Christmas trees may be made fire-resistant if treated as soon as possible after the tree has been cut down. Freshly cut trees have a water absorbing power which permits the introduction of either calcium chloride or ammonium sulphate into the tree in solution form.

The method is as follows: The stem of the tree is freshly sawed, preferably at an oblique angle or "V" shape, and placed in a receptacle containing the solution and left in a room of moderate temperature (55 to 65 degrees F.) until the tree is to be used. The quantity of the chemical required either of the calcium chloride or the ammonium sulphate, should equal one-quarter of the weight of the tree. Dissolve the chemical in water at the rate of 1½ pints per pound of chemical. The degree of the fire resistance depends on the amount of the solution taken up by the tree, and freshly cut trees respond readily to treatment, the quantity of the chemical absorbed varying with the freshness of the tree will not burn even when exposed to a large flame.

The virtue of prosperity is temperance but the virtue of adversity is fortitude; and the last is the more sublime attainment.—Bacon.

M. A. Drew, chairman of the Ontario Burley Tobacco Marketing Association, announced that the price set at a meeting of the directorate in the William Pitt Hotel Monday for this year's yield will be 27 cents a pound. Last year it was 25 cents. This is the average price and actual payments will vary according to the grades which have already been given producers.

Officials estimate the price paid in the district for the burley crop will reach $3,000,000. Prices to be paid for the different grades on the 27-cent average are: CB-1, 43.83; CB-2, 39.72; CB-3, 36.62; CB-4, 32.19; CB-5, 28.77; CB-6, 26.03; CB-7, 23.25; CB-8, 20.55; CB-9, 18.49; CB-10, 16.44.

Crops of Harrow velvet, 3,988,100; This total yield is composed of whole pounds; Kelly, 713,900 pounds; Judy's Pride, 131,600 pounds; Halley's, 420,200 pounds; miscellaneous, 6,848,700 pounds.

The general crop average is stated to be slightly better than last year.

C. E. Gladman, secretary of the Burley Board, stated the estimated yield from the 1946 crop is 12,100,500 pounds, or an increase over the 1945 crop of nearly two million pounds.

The district's 2,733 crops were planted under contracted acreage on an estimated acreage of 10,478, with the expected yield per acre, 1170; with the average acreage per crop, 4.49.

Of this estimated total 7,145,000 pounds will be received from Kent and a part of Lambton, and 4,684,000 pounds from Essex County.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1946.

As the soft coal miners in the United States are ordered back to work for a limited period by John L. Lewis, many observers note the growing maturity, and sense of responsibility to the public, found in the ranks of organized labour in Canada.

Before the war, in 1933, the total working force in Canada was 3.8 millions, of which a little over 2 millions were non-agricultural wage and salary workers. 358 thousands or 17% of this group belonged to labour unions. Today the total Canadian working force is considerably over 4.9 millions, of which 2.9 millions are non-agricultural wage and salary workers. 711 thousands (25%) of these are members of labour unions.

Political observers point out that Canada is still a very young country industrially. Some progress was made toward industrialization between the two great wars but the greatest part of our industrial growth came after war was declared in October, 1939. In the quick-growing process great responsibilities were thrust on both management and labour. That both rose to challenge and worked out their problems with (under the circumstances outlined) a minimum of discord and trouble is admitted by all who know something of the real story of the Canadian industrial development.

The credit for this achievement must go first of all to the rank and file of the labour union membership. Strong elements of discord, including communistic agitators and others, had to be kept in check at all times. It is obvious that the urgent transition from a peace time economy to all-out war production and the quick-change back after the end of the fighting offered many opportunities to exploit every problem which could not be solved at once. That the great majority in the ranks of labour kept their heads and worked out these problems in a spirit of mutual respect cannot be forgotten. Management too, much of it inexperienced and aggressively anxious to produce, should be given due credit.

It is true that the strikes which we had have delayed reconversion and — perhaps more serious — lost many chances to capture export markets that we may need badly — and soon.

Labour itself, as well as the public generally, will eventually feel, perhaps sharply, the impact of these things and place the blame where it belongs, but the achievements and progress of labour are real and must be remembered.

Not by Accident.

Students of the political and economic scene in Canada maintain that these achievements and this progress did not just happen. They are quick too, to give a fair measure of the credit to Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, the Federal Minister of Labour. Mr. Mitchell was described by himself as the most hated man in Canada when the labour difficulties were at a climax. Today it is recognized by all except a few extremists that no one in Canada knows as much about all sides of the question, and no one has a deeper feeling of concern for the man who labours than Mr. Mitchell. He is determined that the democratic right to bargain under conditions of equality, be retained for both labour and management. Force as it is known in totalitarian countries has no place in the Canadian way.

Dominion-Provincial Co-operation. In no field has Dominion-Provincial co-operation been more earnest and effective than in the field of labour relations. The federal labour code known as PC 1003 was enacted in 1944 under the war measures act and has been kept in force under the "National Emergency Transitional Powers Act." It was actually created at a Protests Grow Against U. S. Sugar Exports.

Increasing demands are being made on the U. S. government to reduce exports of sugar to those countries with whom supplies are still being shared. This cooperative scheme was adopted during the war as an emergency measure and still continues. The Chamber of Commerce and leaders of major food associations, including the National Food Brokers' Association, plan to demand that government officials cut allocations of the American supply of sugar going to foreign countries. This reduction of allocations is to increase the amount of sugar available to American industry. The 1946 shipments to European countries alone were about 176,000 short tons.

Lowry & Company, Inc., sugar brokers, writing on this subject of international commitments, suggest those sharing in the U. S. supply of sugar may not be doing everything possible to increase production within their own boundaries. Their report states: "Suppose for example, that the United States, by the application of capital and technical knowledge, could increase its domestic and insular supply of sugar by 20 per cent, or even 50 per cent, where is the incentive or equity if it must share this increase on an equal or pro-rata basis with others who may not be so enterprising? In any share-the-wealth scheme there is always a tendency for one or more of the beneficiaries to sit back and let the other parties produce most of the wealth that is to be shared."

Since 1942, Canada has drawn sugar from the "pool" operated by the Dominion of the United States and the United Kingdom under the Combined Food Board. Plans in both the U. K. and U. S. call for maximum production of beet sugar next year. Sugar beet growing is "enforced" at attractive prices in England and increased support payments to farmers in the States will make it possible for them to grow the largest crop in that nation's history. There have been no official announcements regarding sugar beet prices in Canada for 1947.

Adaptability.

The normal, healthy person should have no trouble in "finding his feet" in any situation, according to authorities in the Department of National Health and Welfare. "Don't be a fish out of water," says the department. "No matter where life takes you, learn to adapt yourself and make the most of environment and opportunity. The manner and speed with which we adjust ourselves to new conditions depend upon our knowledge, our intelligence, our willingness, and, of course, the state of our health."

conference of Dominion and Provincial labour ministers and all recognize that it is beyond the peace time powers of the federal government.

All labour ministers are anxious that satisfactory and practically uniform labour legislation should continue in force across Canada. The plan is that the federal government will adopt new legislation based on PC 1003 plus the necessary changes based on experience. The new legislation will be enforced by the federal government over such classes of industry as comes under the jurisdiction of the federal government. If the Dominion legislation is so framed that it meets the views of all the provinces it may quite well develop that provincial governments will see fit to adopt the same legislation in the provinces. Only in this way can industrial peace be maintained and Canada's progress be continued.

The Old Parties.

It is noted here with interest that twice within ten days the Prime Minister made strong public statements about the value of experience and tradition to political parties and the danger to Canada of "a bewildering" political parties that have no past, and but little promise of any future. That a political party has lasted a long time is certainly strong proof that it meets a definite Canadian need and expresses a strong Canadian sentiment.

Mr. King's statement on the fundamental aims of the Liberal Party was put in a new form. "To maintain national unity and to strive for world unity; to extend social security and to co-operate for international security; to defend and to extend the frontiers of freedom."

Producing Ability of Farm Land Falling.

In a recent address to the Prescott Rotary Club, Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director, Experimental Farms Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, dealt at length on the subject of "Food and Agriculture." While touching on Canada's great effort, he stressed the fact that in future the agreements with Britain and other countries, or through any food board that might be set up under the jurisdiction of the Food and Agriculture Organization (F.A.O.) of the United Nations left Canada with the very maximum for years to a heavy responsibility for producing up come.

"We in Canada," said Dr. Archibald, "although heavy producers of foods still have our obligations in improved production in Canada and in other countries. We are heavy exporters of certain types of commercial fertilizer, of implements and tools, of farm machinery, and we have a wealth of experience and knowledge in many matters which might well be adopted by other countries less advanced. We are heavy exporters of improved seeds and all of certain vaccines and sera. In all these factors, too, we in Canada can improve our own practices in the adoption of methods toward lowering costs of production and improving the quality of our products."

But in regard to soil conservation for the food of tomorrow, Dr. Archibald issued a warning. Because, he said, of time vastly increased production by Canada in agricultural foodstuffs during the war, many Canadians were prone to be very complacent as to Canada's producing ability and reach the dangerous assumption that that feat could be repeated with no special thought of soils conservation.

Actually there is evidence that over a period of years Canada's producing ability is declining, and that, in spite of the fine work of plant breeders toward producing heavy-yielding varieties of better quality and resistant to disease and insects, these insect plagues were on the increase and had been so for fifty years. Many people failed to realize that, although Canada's population was small in relation to her total food production, nevertheless the world's population was rapidly catching up to the acres of agricultural land. With nearly two and a quarter billion acres of agricultural land, the time was rapidly approaching when, in order to prevent continuous malnutrition, all countries must conserve soil fertility that nations must be fed. And there was plenty to do in Canada in regard to soil conservation.

Sugar Holds Secret of World Peace.

By Lewis Milligan.

"Whenever there's nothing we can view with alarm, life ain't worth living for an American," says Ed Erard in the Kingsville (Texas) Record. But that epigram does not apply only to Americans, the whole civilized world has acquired such an appetite for alarms and jitters during the past seven years or more that, although the war is now well behind us, we still crave for something to worry about. And there is no shortage in the supply. When we are not alarmed over the atomic bomb and being worked-up into a state of belligerence by the reports of the peace conferences, the labor unions provide us with alarming interludes in the form of strikes.

The consequence of this extreme nervous tension is that more people than ever are suffering from high blood pressure and stomach ulcers. These are said to be "diseases of adaptation," which "result from an abnormal or excessively prolonged adaptive reaction to the stresses and strains of life." Dr. Hans Selye, of the University of Montreal, has been studying the influence of certain diets upon such diseases. During the war, it was observed in England that inhabitants of heavily bombed cities suffered from an extraordinary "high incidence" of stomach ulcers at the time of heavy air raids. Dr. Selye says that after numerous futile efforts to understand the cause of these so-called "air-raid ulcers," it was found that similar ulcers could be produced in animals by mental stress, and that they could be prevented by diets rich in sugar.

That, of course, does not necessarily mean that stomach ulcers can be cured by a sugar diet, but it struck me as of special interest in view of the fact that there has been, and is, a world shortage of sugar. I began to wonder whether all our international and social troubles were due to the sugar shortage. Every parent knows the pacifying effect of a piece of candy upon an obstinate or crying child. An ill-tempered horse can be rendered docile and friendly with a piece of lump-sugar. Young lovers know the seductive powers of a box of chocolates. So that the scientists cannot claim to have been the first to discover the pacifying powers of sugar.

The world is bad-tempered, peevish, and jittery, and it may well be that it is suffering from what Dr. Selye defines as "disease of adaptation." The delegates at the U.N.O. conferences certainly display symptoms of high blood pressure and dyspepsia in many of their speeches. Here is an opportunity for the scientists to test their theories as to the value of sugar in cases of "mental stress." It would never do, of course, to let the delegates know that they were being used as guinea pigs, but it might be arranged to slip a box of chocolates or succulent candies on each delegate's desk before a debate. A little sweetening might well soothe Mr. Molotov's fears of the atomic bomb and even induce him to give up the Veto!

Sugar may thus prove the secret of world peace, and all that we would have to do would be to turn from the manufacture of atomic bombs and armaments to an intensive development of sugar beet industries. It would, at least, be worth a trial, for the people of all the nations are undoubtedly suffering from sugar-starvation.

Plans for Safety Campaign.

Plans for an elaborate safety campaign which will be inaugurated in 1947, in an effort to halt the mounting toll of traffic fatalities on Ontario's highways, were outlined in a report of the Board of Directors to the 20th annual meeting of the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario which has just been held at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto.

"Those of us in the transport industry will give leadership in accident prevention," the report stated. "All out for safety" will be the slogan which we will use during 1947. Appropriate awards will be made to drivers who establish no-accident records. At the same time they will be enrolled into the Legion of Safety. Monthly awards will be given, too, to transport drivers who show the greatest courtesy and exercise the greatest safety on our highways.

The report also intimated that a truck rodeo will be held in Ontario in 1947, the purpose being to show the skill, ability and politeness of transport drivers to the general public and efforts will be made to develop a "driver's pledge."

Members of the transport industry from various parts of Ontario attended the annual meeting of the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario. They discussed many problems affecting their industry and heard talks by outstanding speakers including Ted V. Rodgers, president of the American Trucking Associations and W. J. Scott, fire marshal for the province.

Harry E. Adams, of Chatham, was elected president of the Association, while Rodger Leslie and Stan Noble, of Toronto, were named vice-presidents. Stacey Martin, of Toronto, was appointed treasurer, while C. W. Tanner, Toronto, was named secretary. J. O. Goodman, of Toronto, was re-elected general manager.

Re Peeling.

"Spare the knife and save time and health," advises the nutrition division of the Department of National Health and Welfare, in a note to homemakers on the preparation of vegetables. If skins are left on, the vitamins and minerals are retained, and don't escape into cooking water. The health authorities also suggest the eating of vegetable skins in order to get the best of their food value. They remind cooks that thorough scrubbing of the skins is essential to health.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our mother, Elizabeth Wismer, who passed away four years ago, December 21st, 1942, and our father, A. E. Wismer, who passed away 12 years ago, January 31st, 1935.
Those precious to our hearts have gone,
The voices we loved are stilled.
The places made vacant in our home can never more be filled.
Our Father, in His wisdom called,
The boon His love had given,
And though on earth the bodies lay,
The souls are safe in heaven.
—Sadly missed by their daughters, Lulu and Nellie.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our dear brother, Pte. Floyd Robert Lambier, who was killed in action, in Italy, on December 23rd, 1943.
If I had all the world to give,
I'd give it, yes, and more.
To hear your dear voice and see your smile
And greet you at the door.
So you who have a dear brother,
Cherish him with care,
You'll never know a heartache
Till you see his empty chair.
—Sadly missed by brother Bill, wife and family.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Stephen White, who passed away two years ago, December 18th, 1944.
There is a sad but sweet remembrance,
There is a memory fond and true,
There is a token of affection, father,
And a heartache still for you.
—Fondly remembered by his wife and family.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our dear brother, Pte. Floyd Lambier, killed in action, in Italy, on December 23rd, 1943.
His faint last wish we should like to have heard,
And breathe in his ear one last parting word.
Only those who have lost are able to tell
The pain of the heart in not saying farewell.
Sleep on, dear brother, and take your rest.
They miss you most, who loved you best.
—Sadly missed by sisters, Violet, Lily, Beatrice and Mary, and brothers Bill, John, Gordon and Lawrence.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of our dear mother, Clara Farough, who passed away two years ago, December 22nd, 1944.
When evening shades are falling,
And we sit in quiet alone,
To our hearts their comes a longing,
If she only could come home.
Friends may think we have forgotten,
When at times they see us smile,
But they little know the sorrow
Our smiles hide all the while.
—Ever remembered by her daughters and son.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Louise Boos, who passed away two years ago, December 21st, 1944.
Deep in our heart lies a picture,
Of a loved one laid to rest,
In a memory frame we shall keep it,
Because she was one of the best.
—Sadly missed by sons and daughters.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Pte. Floyd Lambier, killed in action, in Italy, on December 23rd, 1943.
Not dead to us who loved him,
He lives with us in memory,
And will for ever more.
We often think we see his smiling face
As he bade his last goodbye;
And he left his home forever,
In a distant land to die.
—Sadly missed by mom, dad and Dorothy.

Strike Effect on Canadian Supplies.

The recent strike in the coal mines of the United States and its effect on Canadian supplies, won't mean much to at least one large city.

That city is Edmonton, Alta., which, aside from being adjacent to great quantities of coal, is also close to an inexhaustible supply of natural gas.

For nearly a quarter of a century, according to an article by A. B. Watt, published in the current Canadian Geographical Journal, many Edmonton homes have been heated with natural gas piped in from a field 70 miles east of the city.

With no strikes in either industry, residents of that area need not fear the extremes of winter.

Mr. Watt's article, which is one of a series now being published by the Geological Society of Canada, traces the history of Edmonton from its earliest days to the present time.

The growth of the city since the turn of the century has been astonishing.

The author states, but this growth will be considered modest in comparison to the expansion that is to take place in the future.

The opening of the Yellowknife Mining fields, so important a source of uranium for atomic energy, the drilling of the Canol pipeline, and the building of the Alaska highway make Edmonton a vital point to the Prairies as well as to the vast northland as far as the Arctic Ocean.

The population of Edmonton in 1945 was 4,176 as against 111,745 in 1945.

This tremendous increase, Mr. Watt believes, is an indication of the even greater things in store for that Western city.

In any case the people of Edmonton are sure to keep warm this winter, coal strikes notwithstanding.

Minor Infections.

Need of attention for apparently minor ailments and seemingly trivial infections is stressed in a bulletin from Ottawa where the Department of National Health and Welfare warns that such small troubles may develop serious complications. From "mere colds," such afflictions as sinusitis, bronchitis and even pneumonia, may grow. The health authorities urge constant liaison with the family physician to nip such troubles in the bud, by early detection and treatment.

Eyes and Light.

Importance of light for preservation of sight is the subject of a pronouncement from Ottawa, where the Department of National Health and Welfare reminds Canadians that there is no substitute for clear vision.

"Your eyes will serve a lifetime if you look after them," says a National Health expert. "Avoid eye-strain. Don't read in light too dim or too glaring."

Public Health Enemies.

There are more ways of being a public enemy than pointing a gun or running amok with an automobile, according to health authorities. The Department of National Health and Welfare brands as a menace to society the person who fails to ensure his or her own isolation when suffering from a contagious ailment, or who is careless about seeking treatment and advice leading to a cure for the ailment.

Sons of God Now.

No name given to Dietz is more significant of loving care and affection than that of "Father" employed by Jesus of Nazareth to designate God.

The understanding of man's divine sonship aids in comprehending our unity and our co-existence with that which Christian Science calls Infinite Spirit or divine Mind. This spiritual concept of the children of God is in harmony with the following statement by Mary Baker Eddy, which constitutes one of the fundamental verities of divine metaphysics ("Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" p. 256): "All things are created spiritually. Mind, not matter, is the creator. Love, the divine Principle, is the Father and Mother of God, then, including man." The child of God, then, is the spiritual and eternal man created in the divine likeness; the expression of Soul, apart from matter; the perfect manifestation of all the qualities of the Divine Mind; in a word, ideal and indestructible man, created, constituted, and governed by divine Spirit.

To understand man as the perfect and spiritual child of God is to part with the personality and materiality, the two great obstacles which obstruct and retard spiritual understanding. When through right thinking we perceive man as the child of God, we no longer accept materiality as real in our daily life. Right thinking, or spiritual discernment, thus becomes for us a powerful instrument of good and a protective armour against the evil forces or influences which seem to pervade human existence.

If at times the mists of error seem to envelop us, if doubt or discouragement seem to attack us, let us recall the inspiring and memorable words of the Apostle John (1 John 3:2), "Beloved, now are we the sons of God. Then the light divine, a moment hidden, will reappear; the way will be brightened, and we shall be able to continue our upward course to new summits of higher and broader spiritual vision."

—Christian Science Monitor.

THE MIXING BOWL.

Hello, Grandmother! We often think of you, so this week we are addressing the column to you. It is our sincere wish that you are well and that you keep well this winter.

Make yourself a cup of hot cocoa or hot soup in the mid-morning and again before you retire. If you will persist in getting up early, the long winter days can be shortened by snacks, which provide not only extra energy, but a rest period.

As to your regular meals, you have many more years of cooking experience than we have so you really know how to cook, but do not take too much trouble. Take your work less seriously.

Plain foods cooked in ways that make them easily digested are best. This means that fried foods, hot barbecue sauces, planked steaks are no longer on your menu. All meats should be ground twice to make them tender—except, of course, fish and poultry. Fatty meats and greasy foods should be used with discretion.

You are a champion soup maker. One of your old-fashioned soups can be the main supper dish. If you plan a fish dinner—steam it and serve with cream sauce to which you have added chopped hard-cooked eggs. Your vegetables should be baked two or three times a week. Gelatine and cottage cheese help to make finely chopped vegetables more appetizing. Desserts take a lot of fussing sometimes and the packaged ones save you many steps, so use them and forget your pride.

We always welcome your suggestions and appreciate your interest in our column.

HOT STEAMED SALMON.

Place rack in bottom of pan; fill pan with 1½ to 2 inches water; cover; bring water to boil. Use 3 lbs. fresh salmon; tie in piece of cheesecloth; place on rack; cover tightly and steam 30 to 35 minutes. Serve 2 lbs. of salmon hot with a sauce, and save the remainder for a salad.

COLD CHICKEN BANANA ASPIC.

2 envelopes (2 tablespoons) gelatine, ½ cup cold water, 2 cups chicken stock, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 cups diced, cooked or canned chicken, 1 cup cubed banana, 2 tablespoons chopped tomatoes, 2 tablespoons salt, ½ cup diced celery.

Soften gelatine in cold water; dissolve in hot chicken stock. Add lemon juice and salt; chill until syrupy. Add remaining ingredients; pour into rinsed mould; chill in electric refrigerator or until firm. Unmould. Serves 4 to 6. Serve with hot muffins.

CHILLED BUTTERSCOTCH PUDDING.

Prepare package of Butterscotch Pudding, using 1½ cups milk. Cool, fold in ½ cup cream, whipped. Line mould with waxed paper and arrange triangles of cake around edge. Pour in butterscotch mixture. Chill overnight. Serves 4 to 6.

THE SUGGESTION BOX.

My grandmother's cook book is seventy-eight years old. I wish you could see it, and the clippings pasted on the back pages. An advertisement taken from the hometown paper reads: "Cut out this ad. won't appear again—25 assorted choice gladioli, 25 cents. Currant bushes, 2 for 5 cents."

The weights and measures will be interesting to brides from overseas; "One pound, 2 ounces flour is equal to 1 quart. Four large tablespoons are equal to ½ gill. Sixteen large tablespoons are equal to 1 pound. Ten pullet eggs are equal to 1 pound. To wash carpets: Use 1 peck of potatoes for a large carpet; scrape them into a pail and let stand overnight in a pailful of water. Use a brush and scrub carpet with liquid. If brown in colour use juice of raw beef, too. When dry, brush with clean broom."

"To restore frost-bitten plants: Pour cold water over them, wetting every inch thoroughly. In this state place them in the dark, carefully covered with newspaper."

"To preserve autumn leaves: Place sprigs between two newspapers and leave with a light weight upon them until moisture has been absorbed. Then dip into wax which you have melted over water. Take off stove. Add a few drops of turpentine carefully. Draw leaves into pan to coat with wax immediately on both sides. If too hot, leaf will shrivel; if too cool, it will harden too thick."

"Winter sauce: One peck chopped green tomatoes, two dozen large onions peeled and chopped, one dozen green or red peppers, chopped fine; salt, pepper and spice to suit taste; one cup brown sugar, vinegar to cover; pour the vinegar over all boiling hot and bottle for winter use."

"Egg balls for soup. Rub yolks of 4 boiled eggs to a smooth paste, with salt, pepper and teaspoon of oil, to these add two raw ones, beat light, add enough flour to hold together. Set in cool place until soup is ready to serve. Put egg balls in soup for 1 minute. Then ladle out with soup."

Another old clipping reads: "Whether well-to-do, or in narrow circumstances you will hold that circumstances, against yourself and the world, sin, against yourself in cleanliness, light and warmth and let what you have be the best and prettiest for the cost."

In an old letter from Grandma's friend: "More disease comes into the world than anyone dreams of but doctors, we bring our milk to a roll-hot quickly three times and then cool it in running water."

Flickering flames in their motley hues hold the warmth of our good wishes in their vivid beauty. Through the years — of candle-light, incandescent light and fluorescent light, this organization has served this community to the best of its ability. Another Christmas . . . another year . . . to you, good cheer!

The teachers of S. S. No. 1, Colchester North, are to be congratulated on the splendid performance of their pupils in the program presented by them on Friday, December 13th. Parents were amazed at the musical talent displayed by their children in the drills, action songs and carols, which were directed by Miss Margaret Walker. The highlight of the program, to the children, as well as to the parents, were the moving pictures shown by Mr. Cross, of Leamington, "The Prince of Peace" and "The Night Before Christmas." "Sing Songs" "Christmas Toys" and "The Little King" were the titles of the pictures. A goodly assortment, combining the lighter and serious thoughts. Santa arrived on time and could scarcely make his way about because of the packed house. In fact, the whole program showed hard work, patient and careful training on the part of Mrs. Anderson and Miss Myles.

Henricks-Jones Nuptials.

At a quiet ceremony, on Saturday, December 21st, at the United Church parsonage, Essex, the Rev. R. H. Parr officiated in marriage Miss Marjorie Marie Jones, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Jones, of Leamington, and Dale Henricks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Henricks, of Maidstone.

The bride was lovely in an aqua marine wool skirt and white sheer blouse, set off by a corsage of red roses.

Miss Madeleine Boos, of Essex, a girl friend of the bride, was her only attendant. Albert Rounding, also of Essex, was best man.

A dinner was held at "Rudy's Diner," after which the happy couple left on a short wedding trip, and on their return will reside on Maidstone avenue, Essex.

Essex Legion Provide Christmas Cheer for Children.

A gala event of Santa Claus coming to town was provided for the children of Essex on Monday evening last, in the Canadian Legion club rooms.

Santa arrived on the fire truck, at 4 p.m., and was greeted by 500 children, cheering wildly at the sight of him.

As Santa took his position by the Christmas tree, with his three assistants, George McQuarrie, Jerry Billing and Dunc McPherson, the children filed past and first received a bag containing candy, nuts, apple and orange, and then each was presented with a present from Santa himself.

As they moved into the other room they were entertained by a magician doing tricks of magic and ventriloquism.

The club rooms were beautifully decorated with a large Christmas tree, hundreds of balloons, and other beautiful decorations.

Rev. Tully, Legion chaplain, and Rev. Whealen officiated.

Mrs. Lee Metter Dies.

The Free Press has just learned of the death of Mrs. Elsie Metter, in Detroit, on December 8th.

Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brady and spent most of her childhood in Gosfield North and Maidstone townships. She married in 1909 and had resided in Detroit ever since.

Surviving are a brother, Delver, of Windsor, and three sisters, Cora (Mrs. Heming) of Toronto; Mabel (Mrs. Ferguson) of Lakewood, Fla., and Ida (Mrs. E. Maddams), of Maidstone. Two brothers, Carlos and Herbert predeceased her.

Burial was in Detroit on Wednesday, December 11th.

Clifford Haggins Passes.

Clifford Haggins, aged 42 years, son of Joseph Haggins, of Windsor, passed away on December 19th, in Receiving Hospital, Detroit, following a lengthy illness.

Deceased was born in Colchester North Township, but had been a resident of Detroit the past twenty years or more.

Surviving are his widow, Victoria, of 12352 Frankfort Road, Detroit, and four children: Audrey, Barbara, Claudia and Marcia, all at home; also four sisters, Mrs. Ethel Bridgen, Miss Pearl Haggins, of Gosfield North Township; Mrs. Lila Howson, of Colchester North Township; Mrs. Cora Fathers, of Windsor, and two brothers, Lorence and John Haggins, both of Essex.

Funeral services were held from the Van Lerburch Funeral Home, Detroit, on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial was in Van Dyke Cemetery, Detroit.

Mrs. Annie Doyle Passes.

Mrs. Annie Maude Doyle, aged 69 years, widow of the late Dr. W. C. Doyle, former well-known surgeon and physician, of Essex, and Windsor, passed away in Grace Hospital, Windsor, on Friday last, following months of ill-health.

She had spent the past summer months with George Soto and sister, Mrs. Laura White, at Cottam.

The Doyles resided in Essex about twenty years from the turn of the present century, first residing in a house now on the Smith farm on the Gosfield North-Maidstone Township, which stood at the corner of Talbot street and Arthur avenue, and then in the large brick home, purchased by Dr. J. D. MacDonald when he took over Dr. Doyle's practice a little over twenty years ago.

Deceased is survived by a daughter Margaret (Mrs. Harold Buck) and a son William B., both of Windsor; also two sisters, Mrs. Nelson Irwin, and Mrs. C. Brown, of Merlin.

Funeral services were held from the Anderson Funeral Home, Windsor, on Monday, in charge of Rev. Dr. Mick. Burial was in Valetta Cemetery.

Cottam Post Office Robbed.

Thieves, for the second time this year, robbed the Cottam post office, this time early Christmas Day. When Provincial Constable Thurston was driving through Cottam, about 3 o'clock Christmas morning, he tried the door and found everything o.k. However, around 8 o'clock Christmas Day, Miss Orpha Stotts found that the bolt lock on the front door had been sawn in two. She immediately notified Postmaster Riley, who in turn got in touch with the Provincial Police. Mr. Riley states that the thieves got in the neighbourhood of $160.

Impressive Candlelight Service at Essex United.

The vesper candlelighting service in the United Church with nearly 1,000 candles lighted at one time, was witnessed by a large congregation, which received a candle as the choir members entered. The master candle stood by the altar and on the table were candles representing the 12 disciples.

The ends of the pews each bore a candle, while the pulpit, the organ and the piano had their quota of lighted candles when the services began. The choir members carried lighted tapers as they sang the processional hymn, "O Come All Ye Faithful." Thus began a most impressive service conducted by the minister, Rev. R. H. Parr. Eight C.G.I.T. girls lighted the altar lights as the congregation sang "Day is Dying in the West," while the new lights were lighted during the singing of "It Came Upon the Midnight Hour."

The minister chose for his short sermon "The Miracle of Christmas." The choir under the direction of Marjorie Allen, sang three anthems the solo parts being sung by Miss Marion McIlwain and Murray Kennedy. The solo "Canticle de Noel," was sung by Mary Lewis, of Kingsville.

The closing carol, "Christians Awake," followed the lighting of the candles in the hands of the congregation — the lights being obtained from the new lights.

Norma Hill, at the piano, joined the organist in playing the offertory, "Star of the East."

Jack Miner Memorial Defaced.

Police have been asked to locate the person or persons who cut down a number of Norway spruce trees which were planted a few years ago by the late Jack Miner and were considered to be "his living memorial," the Miner family has expressed great concern about the theft.

"The late Jack Miner became famous for his conservation of bird life, but everyone in Essex County knows he spent equally as much time in planting and growing trees on his famous bird sanctuary at Kingsville," Manley Miner stated after the Christmas tree cutters had visited the Miner property. "He used to remark to visitors that his trees were his living monuments."

As a Tribute.

"The last acreage of trees he planted was an evergreen variety known as Norway Spruce which he planted on an acreage he owned on the Fifth Concession in Gosfield South, just north of Kingsville. He personally watered and hoed these lovely trees until today they stand as a tribute and a living memorial to him."

"Our neighbours called us yesterday and said some thief had cut a portion of the trees. Upon investigating it was found that the most beautiful trees along the roadside had been cut about two feet above the ground."

"The matter has been put in the hands of the provincial police and the Miner family has offered a reward of $50 for the convicting evidence for the party or parties who cut these trees. It is not only damaging and stealing personal property but it is destroying the trees that were planted by the hands of the late Jack Miner, which is a great personal loss to the entire community," Mr. Miner stated.

Awarded the LaFleche trophy last season as the best classical singer in Canadian radio, Miss Gould will appear as guest artist on the Northern Electric Hour on Monday (December 30). The program will be heard on the CBC's Dominion and Quebec Regional networks.

Maintenance of Tobacco Machinery.

Flue-cured tobacco farmers have a considerable investment in farm machinery. To minimize overhead expenses the machines should be preserved from rust, repaired, and stored when not in use. The Dominion Experimental Substation, Delhi, has found from experience that machinery can be preserved many years by proper care and storage.

Simply storing machinery for the winter is not enough. All frictional parts such as the transplanter shoes and packer assembly, pivot points and stalk moldboards, cultivator teeth and stalk moldboards should be coated with either used crankshaft oil or a rust preventer. Any other parts such as gears, drive shafts and bearings should be greased and preserved from rust. Sprayer nozzles should be removed from the pipes, cleaned thoroughly and stored away in a dry place. Caution should be taken to see that no water is left in the hose connections to freeze and cause deterioration. Fertilizer drills should be thoroughly cleaned immediately after being used. Fertilizers left in drills will cause rust to form rapidly.

Some farms are not equipped with implement sheds. Packbarns are usually empty from February to August and kilns from October to July which should not doubt supply ample storage space. If there do not allow sufficient space there are some farms which have permanent glass greenhouses that may be used.

During the winter months, before spring operations, flue-cured tobacco farmers usually have one to two months between haling and greenhouse preparations. This period could be well spent by repairing farm implements for the coming season. Worn out parts should be replaced to prevent any unnecessary delay when time is at a premium.

Preserving parts from rust, replacing those broken or worn, and proper storage will, no doubt, double the life of any farm implement.

Moved by Messrs. Collins and Jobin that the treasurer be authorized to strike off the arrears of taxes for the Don'ts for Christmas.

"Deaths, injuries and damage to property are caused by fires due to carelessness every Christmas and therefore the public is urged to take member some simple precautions," said the Canadian Underwriters' Association in a statement issued today.

The Association's list of 13 "Don'ts" include the following:

Don't strike matches beside the Christmas tree.

Don't strike matches with your hand.

Don't place matches within the reach of children.

Don't use strings of lights unless "approved" label is attached.

Don't place the tree near a fire-place or hot electric bulbs.

Don't play the part of an amateur electrician.

Don't permit tissue wrappings to collect around the tree or room.

Don't allow children to use gasoline, alcohol or kerosene-powered toys unless supervised by an adult.

Don't purchase electrical toys unless they bear the "approved" label.

Don't permit the use of anything but safety film in movie projectors.

Don't attend crowded halls with improper exit facilities.

Don't stuff paper into furnaces because of the danger of back drafts.

"If" officials of the Association said, "the above suggestions were rigidly followed there would be far less suffering and fewer fires at Christmas time."

Nature's Tonic.

Cold weather should benefit health, unless there is a physical reason why a person should not be subjected to it. That, at least, is the opinion of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, which urges everyone to get out into the open this season. "Your lungs crave fresh air. So bundle up to avoid catching cold, and get out and breathe the deeply of nature's own tonic — bracing air," says a departmental message.

Milk as Food.

Pointing out that milk provides just about everything in food value — calcium, protein, minerals, and vitamins (particularly Vitamin A), nutritionists of the Department of National Health and Welfare urge adults to choose milk in preference to other beverages. They point to the universal acceptability of milk for children, and to the preference shown for milk by young soldiers during the war. But, they say, many adults seem to feel that they have outgrown the healthful milk habit.

years 1944 and 1945, against the following lands purchased by the Township at tax sale: parts of lots 13, 14, 15, Concessions 6 and 7, $6.61; part of lot 297, N.T.R., $2.32; lots 121, 122, 135, 136, plan 1332, $24.13; lot 180, plan 1351, $3.58; lots 94, 95, 98, plan 1366, making a total of $41.14.—Car.

John McAuliffe submitted his resignation as treasurer of the Township and as secretary of the Sandwich South Municipal Telephone System, to take effect at the end of the year. However, after much discussion the treasurer was asked to continue in office until the end of January, 1947, which he agreed to do.

Moved by Messrs. Cultivating Health.

True health, say the authorities, means more than mere absence of disease. It implies pep, a feeling of well-being and alertness of mind and body. The Department of National Health and Welfare declares that the first law of health-keeping is prevention — immunization and protection. Then, it says, comes physical development, recreation and health advancement, all down the years. Those who would be well are advised to do more than merely dodge disease, by avoiding the excesses in which disease lurks. They should also cultivate healthful habits.

Flickering flames in their motley hues hold the warmth of our good wishes in their vivid beauty. Through the years — of candle-light, incandescent light and fluorescent light, this organization has served this community to the best of its ability.

Gas Tax Loss $3,000,000.

Removal of the federal tax of three cents a gallon on gasoline next April 1st will mean a loss of $3,000,000 in Dominion revenue, but may not mean that much of a saving to motorists if the provinces decide to increase their gas tax.

Decision to remove the tax, imposed by the Dominion for the first time in 1941, was announced Saturday by Finance Minister Abbott. The announcement came after practically all provinces had requested the Dominion to quit the gasoline tax field. These requests, some believed, meant that if the federal government removed its tax the provinces would boost theirs.

The present rates of gasoline tax per gallon, are: Dominion, three cents; Prince Edward Island, 10 cents; New Brunswick, 10 cents; Quebec, 8 cents; Ontario, 8 cents; Manitoba, 7 cents; Saskatchewan, 8 cents; Alberta, 7 cents; British Columbia, 7 cents; Yukon, 3 cents.

In making his announcement, Mr. Abbott said: "The Dominion gasoline tax was put on in wartime in order to meet the urgent needs of war and it was not intended to remain it."

Early Treatment.

Emphasis placed on training in First Aid is based on appreciation of the fact that early recognition of disease and prompt measures to combat it, ensure rapid and effective treatment. National Health and Welfare officials at Ottawa, commending First Aid instruction, advise all interested in staying off a serious illness to report any symptoms at once to the family physician no matter how minor it may seem.

CANADIAN NATIONAL

It must have been with mixed feelings of pride and satisfaction that Canadian farmers read last week of the debate in the British House of Commons which showed the importance of Canadian wheat in the lives of millions of people. A delay in the transportation of Western wheat to ocean ports threatened a "very grave emergency" as the Christmas season approached in the land of rationed bread.

Wheat Policies.

Those who watch the developing economic scene and appreciate the value of Canadian food to a hungry world noted recently two heavily-headed stories in a Winnipeg daily paper which pointed up two opposing policies on wheat marketing.

The first story reported an attack on the Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Canada's Minister of Agriculture, by the President of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. The "Exchange" president charged that Mr. Gardiner "was the world's largest short seller of wheat, and the farmers were paying the penalty."

The second article on the same page was the report of a statement by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Hon. J. A. MacKinnon. The statement was that, in actual prices paid to the producers of wheat, Canadian farmers are in a better position than farmers of most other exporting countries. Mr. MacKinnon's statement shows that the farmers were paying the penalty.

The Wheat Agreement.

Mr. Gardiner, speaking to the Montreal section of the Agricultural Institute of Canada, stated that the wheat agreement with Great Britain did not differ in principle from other food contracts Britain had made with Canada, the United States and other countries. "It was demonstrated that this was a commercial transaction... such contracts were not bilateral agreements in restraint of trade but commercial transactions which in every particular promote world trade," said the Minister. He claimed that the Winnipeg Grain Exchange was asking for a return to "what we had in the 1930s" under that system wheat growing in Western Canada at a profit is impossible.

Fish, Bacon and Cheese.

It is not only Canadian wheat that saves us from the threat of starvation or malnutrition at this Christmas season. Canadian Fish, Canadian Bacon, and Canadian Cheese have become essential parts of the diet of millions in Europe and important items in their "food security."

A representative of the British Food Mission in Ottawa pointed out to the column that the 750,000 cases of Canadian canned salmon that goes to the United Kingdom every year is needed "variety" to a diet based mainly on bread and potatoes. The 7 million lbs. of frozen ground fish that will be sent from Canada this year gives additional security against any temporary failure of her own fishing industry in times of bad weather (in war years they took 20 million lbs.). Canadian canned herring goes to the British Army.

Wards of the World.

One million people still adrift in Europe refugees and displaced persons, is a challenge to the Christian world at this season.

To feed and clothe them in camps is a great and philanthropic task—but it is not enough. They must be re-established and given jobs and opportunities. The participation of Canada as a nation in the International Refugee Organization should not be under estimated. The whole world gives due credit to the Canadian delegation for the effective meetings of this body, and particularly to the Hon. Paul Martin who so eloquently and successfully pleaded the refugees' cause before the United Nations.

But the active interest and participation of individual Canadians on a personal level and in a spirit of brotherhood is needed and needed now that the most effective way to get the experiences of the war have shown things done is to form a local committee which will draw support from the entire community. The committee could survey local possibilities and ask the government to allow definite number of displaced persons to settle in this community.

There's a Reason.

To emphasize that every accident has a reason and isn't just an unavoidable incident, the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations have issued an illustrated poster for plant bulletin boards. The poster portrays a worker with arms outstretched in a resigned attitude, commenting "Just One of Those Things." The caption reads: "This accident could have been avoided if the worker had followed the safety rules."

Wisdom or Experience?

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

With the dawning of a new year the relief in personal taxation promised prior to the last election comes into full effect. What might have been a pleasant New Year's thought is somewhat qualified by the recognition that the relief is both too little and too late.

The announcement made many months ago was one that was nicely keyed to send the people to the polls with good will in their hearts and a warm gratitude to the government responsible. Of course the immediate concession had a rather niggardly appearance, but it was coupled with glowing promises of what was to happen next year. But now that next year has become this year, it has also become somewhat harder to accept these promises with the warm glow of approbation that Mr. Isley manifestly expected.

Naturally the 600,000 or so persons earning less than $750 in their single blessedness or their married counterparts earning not more than $1,500, who this year are eliminated as taxpayers, may sigh with relief. How much of that relief results from the meagre savings involved and how much from the knowledge that they were free at last from the complicated tyranny of form T1 General, it might be hard to say.

What is patent is that almost three times as many persons in the medium-income group, looking over those golden promises, find that the relief runs to a nominal 10-to-15-per-cent cut, which still leaves them among the most heavily taxed citizens in the world.

Unfortunately, that is not the sort of distinction that can be carried from war into peace without a growing question in the minds of the taxed. They are becoming increasingly aware that their government is taking from them on the basis of its past needs rather than its postwar needs, even when the latter include the requirements for repatriation and rehabilitation. They are aware that the $300,000,000 deficit that Finance Minister Isley foresaw as late as June 1946, did not materialize. Indeed, governmental economies, the restriction of supplies that curtails the expenditures of the government as it does of individuals, combined with a $175,000,000 increase in personal income and excess profit taxes turned Mr. Isley's $300,000,000 red figures into a small but encouraging surplus.

The not unnatural result has been that the taxpayers who otherwise might have been gratified over small mercies have become Oliver Twists rather plaintively asking for more. The general burden of these appeals is that further reductions should be related to the necessities of a country that has ceased to face desperate needs imposed by desperate needs and has become solvent once more.

There is very little doubt that the government has been thinking along this line. The ability to reduce taxation being any government's prime ace-in-the-hole is obvious. The government is possibly growingly aware that high taxation in the face of declining needs would tend to make good political losses. There is no reflection needed on that thinking. It is reasonable and sound. One question, however, remains. It is: Will the government make these changes promptly, hoping for the lasting effect of public approval, or will it hold this trump card to be played when it can influence the voting most dramatically? Quite possibly the Canadian people will determine their allegiance by considering whether these necessary changes bring the suggestion of sound policy or of party expediency.—Liberty Magazine.

Another Development for the Home.

Out of the war has come another new development for the home, a burnproof ironing board cover, made of asbestos, a new type of asbestos fabric.

Manufactured by the textile division of Dominion Rubber Company Limited, of Kitchener, Ontario, this new ironing board cover is lightweight and durable with a smooth finish that will not deteriorate with use. In fact, the manufacturers claim that the surface actually improves with use.

Textile technicians who have been experimenting with the postwar possibilities of this new fabric find that it is long lasting and washable and that its smooth porous weave makes ironing easier and faster.

This fabric was first developed during the war to protect the firefighters in our Armed Forces and it is now being utilized for many household commodities today.

This new type of ironing board cover as a regular place of her household equipment, today's housewife can find reassurance in its burnproof qualities as she goes about her household duties.

Should the telephone ring, the door need answering, or Junior fall downstairs and need a little comfort for his newly acquired bruises, the sorely tried housewife can rest assured that her home won't burn down because she forgot to turn the iron on end or switch off the electricity while attending to these matters.

This new ironing board cover made of asbestos, complete with faces that tie firmly to ensure a snug fit, can be used on any board.

People Are Asking?

Q.—Who should tear out coupons which have become invalid the merchant or the customer?

A.—The customer should destroy all coupons which have become invalid. They must not be given to anyone including dealers.

Q.—I read in the papers the other day that the wholesale price of turkeys has been increased two cents. I raise and sell turkeys but the other day the merchant with whom I deal would not pay me more than the former selling price.

A.—The two cent increase is only allowed to wholesalers of poultry who prior to November 30th were in possession of a license and they cannot pay the producer the two cent increase. However, licensed wholesalers are permitted to charge retailers the two cents increase. This increase must be absorbed by the retailer. It cannot be charged to the consumer public.

Q.—I paid two dollars to have a tooth extracted last year. This year the same dentist charged me three dollars. Is this legal?

A.—Dental services are not under price regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Q.—I bought a bag of potatoes recently and when I got them home I discovered many of them had rotted. Can't I make the dealer return my money?

A.—No regulations of the Board govern this situation. You would have to exercise your civil rights in this regard.

Q.—I make butter on my farm and send some to a friend of mine in the city. I have been told she should give me coupons. But she does not pay me, the butter is a gift. My friends tell me I am breaking the law in not collecting coupons.

A.—You are breaking ration regulations when you do not collect coupons from your friend. Your friend has coupons with which to obtain her butter requirements, and when she gets butter from you without surrendering coupons, she is getting more than her rightful share. Both she and you are breaking existing regulations in dealing in butter without surrendering coupons.

Short Course at Ridgetown.

The annual Junior Farmers' Short Course for Southwestern Ontario will be held at the Experimental Farm, Ridgetown, from January 6th to January 17th, 1947. Arrangements have been made by Prof. J. C. Steckley, Director of the Farm, to enlarge the course this year and provide for a larger enrolment. Special forenoon programmes for Junior Farmers are to be included, with more general sessions in the afternoon. The agricultural representatives in Southwestern Ontario are co-operating with Prof. Steckley in organizing the course, and will be glad to hear from prospective students, and to give them full information.

NEW ARMoured EQUIPMENT FOR CANADIAN ARMY.

In the above layout are pictured American Sherman and Stuart tanks which are now being groomed for the equipping of Canadian Active and Reserve Army Forces. Already a large number of these tanks have arrived in Canada from the United States and soon will be grinding over Canadian terrain carrying Canadian Army personnel in training for Canada's post-war army. The tanks are being serviced at the Ordnance Depot at Longue Pointe, Que., and at Canada's tank training area at Camp Borden, Ont. When the work of re-numbering, painting, installing wireless equipment and overhaul jobs has been completed, the tanks will be shipped to active and reserve units throughout Canada.

Canada's Sugar Quota Decided in Washington.

United Nations Food Council to Determine Each Country's Share.

Canada's supply of import sugar for 1947 (about 80 per cent of its consumption) will be determined by the International Emergency Food Council presently meeting in Washington, D.C. Early reports from this capital indicate that Canada's share will be lower and the percentage retained by the United States larger than last year. U. S. public sentiment will be credited with bringing about this change, if it occurs.

Since 1942, participating nations have shared sugar equally on a per capita basis regardless of the contribution each made to the pooled supply. U. S. citizens, in their criticism of this policy, state that all nations have not been doing their utmost to boost their own sugar output and many have been reaping the benefits of increased American sugar production secured at a reported cost to the U. S. taxpayer of $100,000,000 last year. They also refer to questionable use of sugar in European areas which was exported from the United States as further argument for reducing foreign sugar allotments and retaining more for home use.

Should the I.E.F.C. still recommend that sugar be shared equally, some observers fear the new Congress might Beet Cheques are Above the $2,000,000 Mark.

Later Bonuses Will Increase Earnings of District Sugar Beet Growers.

Another distribution of sugar beet cheques amounting to $680,000 is in the mails for farmers of this district, according to a Sugar Company report. This sum which is the initial payment for beets delivered during November follows a larger one of $1,350,000 paid for record-breaking deliveries of sugar beets in October.

The total amount of $2,030,000 paid to date is only the initial payment for beets delivered during these two months, officials state. It will be increased by later bonuses. Labor Supply Better. The harvest has been completed for some days, fieldmen report, but some deliveries still are arriving at the Chatham factory from distant receiving stations. Ontario beet growers were more fortunate than those in Western Canada and United States who lost considerable tonnage of beets due to an early arrival of winter. No fields of beets were left unharvested in Ontario. Credit for this is given to ideal harvesting weather; better supply of labor; and increased availability of mechanized equipment, particularly field loaders.

Final figures on this yield of this year's 23,375-acre crop will be above 231,000 tons with sugar content of 13 per cent — an above average test.

NEW YEAR'S—RESOLUTION TIME

They say that resolutions are made to be broken—but that's when we set our sights too high. It's better to take resolutions in easy steps... perhaps getting into the habit of cheerfully greeting those with whom we come in daily contact. Or determining not to let minor irritations upset us. Even to put into practice some of these "little things" is to live up to the best traditions of "Good Citizenship".

Maidstone Boy Plans Business Expansion.

Announcement of plans for expansion of the J. L. Johns Leatherbest Products Company was made recently by Industrial Commissioner William Gray.

Headed by J. L. Johns, war veteran, the company produces leather goods in assorted styles and shapes, covering wrist straps, wallets, key cases, ladies' purses, and souvenirs. As materials become available, Mr. Gray revealed, larger quarters will be obtained or built and the firm's sales territory will be expanded.

At the present time there are four people at work in the small leather goods plant. It is expected that several other workers will be added to the staff when Leatherbest launches work on plastic aprons and belts—a work which has already been planned.

Mr. Johns is a native of Maidstone. During the war years he was stationed at No. 12 Basic Training Centre in Chatham. He married a Chatham girl and settled there after receiving his discharge from the army. Mr. Johns learned the leather trade while he was a patient in an army hospital.

Materials used in the production of the various leather articles are of the highest quality. They are sold throughout Essex, Kent, Lambton, Middlesex and Elgin Counties.

Seed Corn Men Stage Annual Meet.

Annual meeting of the Ontario Seed Growers' Marketing Board held one day last week, heard a healthy financial report filed by the secretary treasurer, J. Duff Brien, as approximately 150 seed corn growers from all over Ontario met in Harrison Hall, Chatham.

Big Surplus.

A surplus of $8,278.08 was shown on the auditor's report for the year, tabled by Auditor Oliver Drury, made up principally of license fees and the registered sale of open pollinated seed corn.

License fees totalled $5,465.89 and seed corn sales $5,503.11.

Noted among the disbursements for the year was $461.50 for seed corn for veterans starting their own farms throughout Ontario. It was charged to "crop improvements."

Following the annual discussions and the speaker's address, the corn men elected a seven-man slate of directors and a three-man advisory board.

Essex Representatives.

For Essex County, M. C. Dalton and William Wallace, the board's present chairman, were re-elected to office by acclamation, while the third man, John Walstedt, who starts his first term in January as director, also received an acclamation.

For Kent, Ross Townsend, Clarence Nichols and Lawrence Kerr were re-elected by acclamation, while the outside counties growing seed corn will be represented by William Corniel, Applin, for another year.

Vocational advisors from Essex will be Blake Cohoe and George Little, while Eugene King, president of the Kent Production of Agriculture, and Frank Weaver will represent Kent, with W. R. Morrison representing the rest of Ontario.

In his address, Mr. Wallace thanked the growers and dealers for the "splendid help afforded during the past year."

He said that the board could not have accomplished half the work had it not been for the effort put out by every grower and dealer.

More Machines Needed.

Mr. Dalton said that, speaking for the Essex County growers, he was aware that much better conditions could be had if machinery did not limit our production.

The speaker said that if the proper equipment could be produced it would be an added factor to home marketing conditions for seed corn.

He suggested that a committee be appointed to keep all available machinery in Ontario to aid expansion of the seed corn industry.

His suggestion will be considered by the board in the new year.

Messrs. King, Townsend, Kerr, Nichols, Corniel and Cohoe, all spoke briefly.

Bad Breath.

"The importance of a 'clean mouth' is emphasized in a National Health and Welfare announcement at Ottawa. 'Your best friend may not tell you, but your dentist will. If you have a breath which offends,' says the department. The health authorities suggest that if troubled with bad breath, even after the dentist has done all he can for oral hygiene, the sufferer should see the family doctor, as the condition may be due to some physical ailment."

Help Dream Come True.

Essex Ambulance and Nurse Pick Up Veteran.

Pte. Arthur Olsen, a paralyzed Detroit soldier, patient in Vaughn General Hospital, near Chicago, has been dreaming about being sent home for Christmas ever since 1943.

Dream Comes True.

This week his dream came true, thanks to Rev. John Hunter, a former pastor of Olsen's church in Detroit, and formerly in charge of the First Baptist Church, in town.

Rev. Hunter arranged to have Pte. Olsen released from hospital at 8 a.m. Monday, when the S. L. Kennedy Ambulance Service, of Essex, was on hand to carry the paralyzed G. I. to his home in Detroit.

Mrs. S. L. Kennedy and Miss Dora Hill, both registered nurses, and Rev. Hunter were on hand to see that Pte. Olsen had a safe trip from Chicago to Detroit.

The ambulance left Essex Sunday night for Chicago and was back in Detroit Monday afternoon. Pte. Olsen will be home for 10 days at the end of which time he must return to his hospital bed.

Rev. Hunter has been planning for several weeks to ensure Pte. Olsen a merry Christmas at home.

Wounded in 1944.

Olsen was wounded in 1944 while serving with the American forces in Italy and has been confined to a hospital bed ever since. He is faced with the possibility of never walking again, according to doctors who have been looking after him.

Before enlisting Pte. Olsen took an active part in church activities. He belonged to the Ambassador Baptist Church in Detroit, where Rev. Hunter was the pastor, he being choir leader during his pre-service days.

Pte. Olsen was anxious to get home to see his aged mother, Mrs. August Olsen, 74, and his wife, Rosella, 32, who reside at 19320 Alvar in Detroit. Rosella has been granted 10 days' leave from her employment to spend every minute with her husband.

Mrs. Olsen has visited her crippled husband regularly.

More Land is Purchased at Harrow.

Experimental Farm to be Expanded in Essex Crops.

The Harrow Experimental Station will be enlarged with the acquisition of the 40-acre Monk farm immediately west of the station's holdings, S. Mur-Clark, M.P., Essex South, has announced.

Besides the new acreage, the farm is well built, with a good home, greenhouses, barns and other buildings. The Crown paid $30,000 for the property.

Acquisition of the new property, Mr. Clark explained, is part of a long-range program to place the Harrow Experimental Station in a position where it will be able to deal effectively with the problems arising in the early vegetable, fruit and other special crop industries.

This is the second time within a year that additional acreage has been sought for the Harrow Station. Less than a year ago, the government acquired a 100-acre farm on Highway 98 to enable the Harrow Station to do some much needed research work on the rehabilitation of the heavier soils in Essex County.

Light Soil.

At that time, it was felt that since most of the soil research done at Harrow was on the light soil the station did not have an opportunity to serve other areas of Western Ontario whose crops are grown on heavy clay loams.

The Highway 98 farm was tile drained this year and through the winter months the work which is to be carried on there will be planned and set up.

Actually soil conservation, dealing with washouts, erosion and other soil depleting factors, captivates the imagination with the result that dams and flood controls on a grandiose scale are undertaken.

Not So, Problem.

In the flat lands of Southwestern Ontario, erosion does not present a serious problem. However, the gradual wearing down of the soil structure through the production of cash crops has seriously depleted the productivity of land. The humus content of soil has been seriously depleted, a factor which has altered soil structure, made the land less productive than it was and should be. Moreover, being harder to till, the soil has been depleted of humus to the point where more hours have to be spent in the preparation of seed beds—thus increasing costs of production.

Rich in land food, Southwestern Ontario land requires building up to replace the land less productive than it was and should be. Moreover, being harder to till, the soil has been depleted of humus to the point where more hours have to be spent in the preparation of seed beds—thus increasing costs of production.

Scientists and soil specialists hope to devise some cheap and practical means of soil improvement which farmers can undertake as a long-range program while continuing to carry on their farming operations.

Expansion.

The new farm at Harrow will be utilized for the expansion of the work already being carried on with vegetables.

At the present time the station's plant breeding men are seeking a melon which will be resistant to fusarium wilt and which will be marketable. Essex County is one of the major melon producing areas and the wilt is threatening growers.

Corn Takes Room.

Corn takes up quite a bit of the farm's present acreage as do the breeding of root rot resistant tobacco strains, particularly of the true tobacco variety.

Early tomatoes are also subject to wilts and the hothouse varieties are particularly susceptible to this plant ailment.

As a matter of fact, the vegetable growing industry itself can produce any number of problems for the station to work on and scientific agricultural men don't need to fear they'll run out of work for years.

Cottage Cheese.

Use of cottage cheese as a substitute for meat as a food is suggested by the nutrition authorities of the Department of National Health and Welfare. The nutritionists point out that, as well as adding variety to a meal, cottage cheese is an ideal source of animal protein, is rich in Vitamin B, and, if made from whole milk, contains Vitamin A. Weight for weight it contains even more protein than meat.

Essex Town Council.

Monday, December 16th.
Council met in regular session, at 8 p.m., with Mayor Linton, Reeve Irwin, and Councillors Chase, Lee, Shaw, Francotte and Pulleyblank present.

Minutes of last meeting were read and on motion of Messrs. Irwin and Shaw, adopted as read.

Letters were read from the Township of Colchester North Council, and the Essex High School Board, re: terrible condition of Victoria avenue, from end of pavement to the South Rear Road, also from High School Board, re Arthur avenue, from end of pavement to Naylor Sideroad.

A letter enclosing a motion passed by Amherstburg Council re opening of Bol Lo Island to Canadians, through the port of Amherstburg, was read and concurred in, the Clerk being instructed to forward copy of same to the Secretary of State.

Harry Slote addressed Council requesting permission to cut down the three large trees in front of the Dr. Brien property. He had the subcontract from the contractors building the new bank, and they would like him to cut them down as soon as possible.

He intended cutting the trees down limb by limb and fell only the stumps into the yard. He asked permission to rope off the sidewalk during the time they were at work.

Request was granted, Mr. Slote to look after protection of the public.

Frank Brown, building inspector, presented his report for the year, itemizing each permit issued, and estimated cost of building. Included were 34 new homes, 13 garages and 3 business places (Len Black, A. Michael and Essex Farmers Ltd.), valued very conservatively at $168,100.

John A. Naylor was, on motion of Messrs. Francotte and Irwin, appointed as Council's representative on the Essex High School District Board, for 1947.

At the request of the merchants in town, Thursday, December 26th (Boxing Day) was, on motion, declared a Civic Holiday.

Mr. Lee reported that Charles Frost would like permission to cut down a tree in the corner of his yard, at the intersection of Brien avenue and Talbot street.—Granted.

Mr. Lee also reported that Mr. Farkas would cut the dead tree in front of R. L. Black's new building, the first chance that he got.

Mr. Pulleyblank advised Council that the local Legion was going to have a large electric lighted Christmas tree in front of their Club rooms, for the Christmas entertainment they were providing for the younger children of town. He was wondering if Council also wanted the tree in front of the Town Hall lighted as in other years.

Council decided to light the town hall tree, a matter which was left with Messrs. Pulleyblank and Francotte.

The assistant treasurer went over the expenditures for the year, comparing same with amounts estimated in the budget and found Town had a small surplus.

On motion of Messrs. Shaw and Pulleyblank, the following accounts were passed: County of Essex, gravel and grading, $461.60; Mac Vicar Bros., cartage, tile, $12; I.O.O.F. Lodge, 14 tent, town hall, $75; Provincial Treasurer, 14 supervision, $15; F. B. Geddes, 14 salary, $100; Dr. J. D. MacDonald, salary, M.O.H., $100; L. The interesting program included an account of pioneer life in Essex County given by the president; a reading by Mrs. William Bishop, entitled "Mother's New Dress," and a reading by Mrs. Ernest Noble, "The Hospital."

Artificial Light and Egg Yields.

The stimulating effect of artificial light has long been recognized as a valuable aid to higher egg production during the winter period, but, like all stimulants, it should be applied in moderation for the best results.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, investigation into the value of lights left on all night has shown a great frequency and persistency of broodiness as well as a lower egg yield among the birds under all night lights than in the pens where light was provided to make a 14-hour day.

Whether lights are used in the morning before sunrise, or kept on after sunset to extend the feeding period to 14 hours makes little difference in the rate of increase. Both systems can be relied upon to improve production, provided the birds are in good condition and the feed is enough to extend over the extra time.

As the egg laying for the day is usually finished by late afternoon under an evening lighting system closing the nests at the time of the last meal of scratch grain, which should be about two hours before the lights go off, tends to lessen the degree of broodiness among the birds which are predisposed to the trouble.

Because chickens, like most other birds, have the instinct and means to sleep comfortably on a perch, the use of a dimming device with evening lights provides the signal to seek their resting place in an orderly manner before darkness comes.

Where an automatic switch is used to turn the lights on early in the morning and the birds are allowed to retire with the sun, scratch grain should be put in the pens after dark to provide warming food and exercise during the period prior to chore time the following morning.

As a general rule, the feeding times should be adjusted to the lengthened day to offset the dangers that may result from extended periods without attention.

Church of Redeemer Annual Meeting of W. A.

Hymns 517 and 318 opened the devotional period of the annual meeting of the W. A. of Redeemer Church, held at the home of Mrs. Hugh White, on Tuesday evening, December 10th. Special prayers for Missions and the election of officers were read by the president, Freda O'Neill. Rev. Mr. Tully offered a prayer for the Anglican Advance Appeal Movement.

Intercessory prayers from the "Living Message" were read by Mrs. Tully. The Bible reading, chosen for the oratory president, Mrs. Tully; president, meeting was Ephesians, Chapter II, verse 11, to the end. Rev. Mr. Tully gave an interesting explanation of the passages and showed how its lessons might be applied to our everyday lives.

Thirteen members and three visitors were present. It was agreed that a Christmas party be held on Monday night, December 30th, at the home of Miss Agnes Hartley. Everyone is to take a gift for exchange and to take lunch. All ladies of the parish are cordially invited to come.

An election of officers for 1947 was held with the following results: Honorary president, Mrs. Tully; president, Freda O'Neill; vice-president, Erin Pettapiece; assistant secretary, Elizabeth McKim; treasurer, Mrs. Agnes Hartley; Dorcas secretary, Ethel Combeau.

The meeting closed with prayer.

A new series of children's films on community services is being produced by the National Film Board, "The Policeman," the first of the series, has been released and will be followed by films describing community postal services.

60th Anniversary
DOMINION EXPERIMENTAL FARMS
1886 — 1946*A Tribute*

Sixty years ago the Dominion Experimental Farms were established. Few Canadians except farmers and others directly associated with the Experimental Farms or the Dominion Department of Agriculture fully realise how abundant have been the returns to all the people of Canada from the comparatively modest investment made in these Farms, nor how great has been the broad measure of success attained.

And the wilderness shall rejoice and blossom . . .

Land that was not considered of much value agriculturally in 1886 has been, through scientific soil surveys and analysis, found to be ideal for the production of imported and developed varieties of flue-cured tobacco leaf. Through scientific development of fertilizers, crop rotation and methods of processing, pioneered by The Tobacco Division, Experimental Farms Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, practically 100% Canadian grown leaf is now used by Canadian Manufacturers. The flue-cured tobacco crop has increased during the last thirty years from less than one million pounds to 110 million pounds annually, with an increased value to Canadian growers now exceeding $40,000,000. The growth of the tobacco industry in Canada in the past 60 years has been principally due to the fine teamwork of the grower and the manufacturer. Both have worked in close co-operation, not only with the Tobacco Division, but with all the Divisions of the Dominion Experimental Farms and the Services of the Dominion Department of Agriculture as a whole — Science, Production and Marketing.

The Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited is proud to have been associated with the Dominion Experimental Farms in the development of tobacco culture in Canada and appreciates this opportunity to pay Tribute on the occasion of the 60th Anniversary.

The Canadian Citizenship Act.

And Its Effect on the Status of Canadian Women.

The Canadian Citizenship Act which becomes effective January 1st, 1947, breaks new constitutional ground, particularly as regards Canadian women. For the first time in our history the statute governing citizenship recognizes the equal status of women. Formerly, women applying for citizenship were classed as persons "under a disability" in the same category as minors and insane persons. Under the new Act women will have control of their national status.

Because the legislation is important to them, as it is to all Canadians, women's organizations across Canada are taking an enthusiastic part in Canadian Citizenship Week, which is being observed from January 5th to January 11th. During that week Citizenship ceremonies are being held in Charlotteville, Halifax, Fredericton, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, St. Catharines, Welland, Windsor, Sudbury, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Regina, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria. In each of these cities, local committees of women's organizations, service clubs and educational bodies are working with civic and provincial officials in arranging ceremonies when new citizens will be sworn in.

Here are some of the clauses which affect women: When a Canadian woman marries an alien she no longer automatically changes her nationality. She retains her Canadian citizenship until such time as she files a form voluntarily relinquishing it.

A woman who marries a Canadian can, if she wishes, obtain Canadian citizenship after one year's service in Canada with her husband. Previously such wives were regarded as "Canadian Nationals" under the Canadian National Act of 1921 even prior to landing in Canada. Under the 1947 Act they were entitled to receive a Canadian passport which requested protection and assistance in foreign countries as a Canadian national, but they were not regarded as Canadian citizens under the Immigration Act. This anomaly no longer exists under the Canadian Citizenship Act and the Immigration Act has been altered to conform.

In accordance with the principle of giving women an equal position with men, an alien wife does not acquire Canadian citizenship as a result of her husband becoming a naturalized Canadian. She applies separately and after qualifying under the regulations will receive her own certificate as a Canadian.

Women who married Canadians and were lawfully admitted to Canada before January 1st, 1947, when the Citizenship Act comes into effect, automatically become Canadian citizens under the Act.

After January 1st, 1947, it requires one year's residence before they can acquire Canadian citizenship. A woman married to a Canadian and who is already a British subject can become a Canadian citizen after:

(a) Legal admission to Canada for permanent residence.

(b) One year's continuous residence in Canada with her husband.

(c) Filing the appropriate form with the Naturalization Branch, Department of the Secretary of State Ottawa.

An alien wife in this category must appear before a court for examination, must be lawfully admitted to Canada for permanent residence and reside here for one year preceding the date of her petition for citizenship, and must file an appropriate form with the clerk of the Court in the judicial district where she resides.

"Fright Before Christmas."

Mrs. David Cavers, of South Woodlee, guest speaker, gave a thought provoking address on "The Fright Before Christmas."

"During the last few weeks before the joyous occasion there is frenzied preparation. Too much has entered into the observance of Christmas that is pagan; gift-giving has become commercialized. This could be eliminated if we had the right attitude. Let us leave the hurry and stress of the material world and on Christmas eve send our way back to Bethlehem, to open our hearts to the spirit of the Christ child, and like the shepherds of old, glorify God for His wonderful gift."

Mrs. Raymond Griffin presented the treasurer's report, and Mrs. McQuat spoke briefly on Christian stewardship.

The meeting closed with a candlelighting service dramatizing the influence of Christianity in India and challenging Canadian Christians to respond to the needs of India. Those participating were Mrs. Gordon Macdonald, Mrs. McQuat, Mrs. Scarlett, Mrs. William Armstrong, Mrs. Donald Reeb, Mrs. Norman Simpson and Mrs. Stockwell, with Mrs. Lawrence Johnston conducting the service, and Mrs. Stanley R. Johnston at the piano.

A vocal duet, "Sleep Little Babe," was contributed by Mrs. S. R. Johnston and Mrs. Mary Johnston.

The annual supper meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Norman Simpson on Friday, January 10th, for which the committee appointed were Mrs. Scarlett, Mrs. Malott and Mrs. Simpson.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Robert Upcott and Mrs. Stockwell.

Heinz Company Honours Old Employees.

After completing 57 years of continuous employment at the main plant of the H. J. Heinz Company, makers of the 57 Varieties, Miss Julia Fischer, 69-year-old forelady, is retiring from the firm December 31st.

At a party, on December 19th, in the Heinz Women's Cafeteria, 110 co-workers honoured Miss Fischer and Miss Mayne Stack, another forelady who is retiring. Miss Stack has completed 50 years of service with the Heinz Company. Both women were presented with gifts by their fellow workers.

Born in Pittsburgh only a few blocks from the site of the Heinz plant on the North Side, Miss Fischer first was employed by the company when she was a girl. The company was founded in 1859, just eight years before her birth.

Miss Fischer's first job was in the wrapping department. In those days virtually all Heinz products were hand-wrapped in fancy paper and deft fingers were required to wrap a bottle or package attractively and securely.

So skillful was Miss Fischer at this work that she was offered the foreladyship of the department only a year after her employment. However, she declined the promotion because she felt her inexperience was disqualifying. When offered the job after she had reached 16, Miss Fischer accepted. She has been in charge of the wrapping department ever since.

We cannot let this joyous season pass without extending to you our sincerest wishes for a happy New Year.

The continuous employment record achieved by Miss Fischer is unsurpassed among Heinz women employees. In the entire 77-year history of the company, only one other employee has a longer service record — oddly enough, he is William Fischer, same last name but no relation to Julia, who retired a few years ago after 58 years with the company.

Miss Stack, 55, Mrs. who was employed by the Heinz Company in the hand-labeling department. She was promoted to forelady of the department and had held the same job since.

Another retired Heinz employee, is scheduled to retire in pension this year. He is Frank Kopt, manager of the "Vinegar" Distilling Department who has been employed for 43 years.

Bird Roost?

By T. R. Campbell.

Bird roost is what some critics called it 100 years ago when a line was erected between Toronto and Hamilton. Yet it was from this meagre beginning that the country's present extensive network of pole lines has grown. Canada surely is a large country, but not too large for the vision of the men who, throughout the years, have designed, built and now direct its many telephone and power systems.

The first "line" built in Canada was for telegraph service and was erected in 1846 between Toronto and Buffalo, N.Y. There was a rapid growth in telegraph service during the following year and at the close of 1847, five hundred and forty-seven miles of line had been completed; nine offices opened; and thirty-three thousand messages transmitted. These first lines consisted of a single iron wire supported on poles and insulators but, with the rapid increase in the number of lines and their commercial importance, it soon became necessary to provide means to accommodate several wires on each pole and to use larger poles and stronger material at every point on the line.

This type of overhead construction, broadly speaking, has not been greatly improved upon even today and, with differences in detail only, has been applied to all systems of electrical transmission for communication, lighting or power purposes. Improvements have been along the lines of building for greater safety against accidents and freedom from interruption of services. No doubt the remarkable growth of all concerns giving a service which requires pole line equipment has been due largely to their attitude in insisting that interruptions from line troubles must be reduced to the lowest possible minimum. They have demanded better material and building methods each year until today both are as well standardized as those employed in other branches of construction or engineering work.

Telegraph service has kept abreast with the general application of electricity for other uses and those early telegraph lines have grown until, today, there are several hundred lines in Canada handling millions of messages a year.

The earliest commercial telephone line in Canada was undoubtedly the one equipped with six telephones and first tested on August 29th, 1877. This line was built in Hamilton and employed only a single wire using the ground for the return circuit. It is quite probable that this was the first occasion where more than two telephone lines had ever been used on one circuit. The successful operation of this line led to the opening at Hamilton of the first telephone exchange in Canada, and the third in the world. At about this same time, attempts were made to talk simultaneously on two circuits from Hamilton to Dundas—five miles distant—when the interference between the two conversations was very troublesome, and the inventor of the telephone was appealed to for help. He recommended that each insulator on the line should have a zinc thimble between it and the cross-arm. This was tried, but without any improvement, and this interference or cross-talk as it is now referred to was not overcome until each of the single wire circuits was made "metallic" by stringing a second wire for each line and eliminating the ground return. This principle of having the two sides of the circuit has made possible telephone transmission over lines of great length. It permits the placing of as many circuits on a pole as may be required for the traffic, an forms one of the most important steps in outside construction work, as far as it pertains to telephone service. On September 29th, 1877, the first successful conversation over any considerable distance was carried on between Montreal and Quebec. This was the record conversation at that time.

From this beginning, Canada's telephone system has grown until today the wire mileage runs into several million circuit miles.

With the development of satisfactory electric generators and lamps, it became necessary to provide a system of distribution from the generating station to the users, and so another important branch of construction work was brought into being and was soon in great demand. The standards of these early electric lighting companies were similar to the early telegraph and telephone lines, except that copper wire was more generally used and, in most cases, this wire was covered with weatherproof braid.

With the development of larger water power and centralized steam generating stations, high voltage transmission lines became necessary. The type of construction for these lines is now practically standardized by the use of steel towers, high voltage insulators, and fittings.

Another requirement is construction work for electric railways. This development has grown rapidly. Thousands of miles of electric railway exist in Canada today and the yearly car mileage runs into several million miles.

Horses on Farms.

Horses on farms in Canada as at June 1st, 1946, were 2,396,850. There has been a steady decline in the number since 1942. In the first nine months of 1946 fifteen thousand head were exported to Poland, six thousand to France and ten thousand to the United States.

Cooking of Cereals.

You would never think of trying to operate an automobile on an empty fuel tank. Yet many people attempt to do half a day's work on practically an empty stomach. You have heard the saying: "You can't eat like a bird and work like a horse." It is necessary that we refuel each morning with a good substantial breakfast.

No other meal receives so little thought in its planning and preparation. Breakfasts should not be of the hit-and-run fashion. Although they follow more or less the same pattern, variety should still be the keystone.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggests serving hot cereals. They are economical, give variety and at the same time supply that "morning energy" so needed for success. In order to serve a hot cereal which will be palatable, and give consistently good results, a few simple rules must be followed.

To ascertain the best cooking methods the Consumer Section asked the Household Science departments of Canadian Universities to co-operate with them in conducting an experimental project. The tests were over the cereal, the proportion of water to cereal was varied, also the amount of salt required and the length of cooking time. In addition, all methods most commonly used in Canadian homes were tried out, and the following rules for cooking "regular" and "quick-cooking" rolled oats were those generally conceded to be best.

ROLLED OAT PORRIDGE.

(using regular rolled oats)

1 cup regular rolled oats

3 cups boiling water

¼ teaspoon salt

Start cooking cereal in top of double boiler over direct heat. Sprinkle cereal gradually into the boiling water, stirring constantly, to prevent lumping. Keep water boiling to prevent cereal from becoming sticky. Boil over direct heat for 1 hour or over boiling water, stirring only occasionally. Makes about 3 cups.

To reduce time of cooking in the double boiler, soak cereal in the specified amount of water overnight, then bring to boil and cook over direct heat for 5 minutes. Finish cooking in double boiler for 30 minutes.

If wheat germ is added use 2 tablespoons wheat germ per cup of raw cereal.

ROLLED OAT PORRIDGE.

(using quick-cooking rolled oats)

1 cup quick-cooking rolled oats

¾ cups boiling water

1 teaspoon salt

Sprinkle cereal gradually into the boiling, salted water, stirring constantly to prevent lumping. Keep water boiling to prevent cereal from becoming sticky. Boil over direct heat for 3 minutes, then cover and cook for 10 minutes over boiling water. Makes about 3½ cups.

CRACKED WHEAT CASSEOLE.

1 cup cracked wheat

2½ cups boiling water

1 teaspoon salt

1 cup thinly sliced onion

1 tablespoon fat

2 cups canned tomatoes OR

¾ cups tomato juice

¼ teaspoon salt

Dash of cayenne pepper

1½ teaspoons catsup

1 cup grated cheese

Sprinkle gradually the cracked wheat into the boiling, salted water, stirring constantly until thickened. Cook for 2 hours over boiling water. Add onion, cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Add ¼ teaspoon salt, cayenne pepper and catsup. In a greased casserole arrange alternate layers of the cereal, tomatoes and cheese, with the cheese as top layer. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375°F. for 30 minutes. Serve with green beans or cabbage salad. Six servings.

CEREAL PRUNE WHIP.

1½ cups cooked prunes (½ lb. dried)

½ cup cold cooked rolled oats

(quick cooking or regular)

¼ cup milk

¼ teaspoon cinnamon

Dash of salt

3 tablespoons sugar

1 egg white

Remove pits from prunes and mash. Add porridge, milk, cinnamon, salt and half the sugar. Beat egg white until stiff; gradually beat in remaining sugar, and fold into prune mixture. Chill thoroughly and serve plain or with a custard sauce. Six servings.

Britain Plans Planes of 1950's.

Even before construction work begins on Britain's revolutionary new begins on Britain's revolutionary new begins on Britain's revolutionary new of Brabazon air liners, designers and engineers in the United Kingdom are already suggesting their successors for "sometime in the 'fifties'".

The plane of the next decade according to the experts' composite ideas will be tailless, shaped like an arrowhead, capable of a speed of 600 miles per hour at 50,000 feet altitude, and will have a range of 3,500 miles. While it is emphasized that four years normally elapse between the drawing board and the actual construction, a six-foot model of this type of plane will be one of the main items at the United Kingdom Ministry of Supply's stand at the 17th International Aeronautical Exhibition, which opens in Paris on November 15th.

How to Cook Without Cooking the Cook.

This could easily be a $64 question on a quiz program. A homemaker with many years of cooking experience behind her could answer that question, but it might puzzle a bride.

No matter how hot it is, some people insist on having hot food, never thinking, of course, about the person who has to serve in the kitchen. The time has yet to come when cooking may be done with light-rays and eliminate heat entirely on the hottest days, but there are a number of things that help reduce cooking discomforts in hot weather.

For instance, the number of burners used may be reduced to a minimum when a gas, electric or oil stove is used. In the case of a wood or coal stove, it is a little more complicated, but the menu can be so planned that the cooking for the whole day is done in the early part of the day, when it is still reasonably cool. The double-boiler may be used to cook several foods at one time. The bottom part can cook vegetables while a dessert or a sauce is being cooked in the top part. If the oven has to be heated for one dish, it is a good idea to make it do at least double duty.

The home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggests the following recipes:

VEAL LOAF.

¼ cup finely chopped onion

2 tablespoons fat, melted

2 lbs. ground veal (shoulder or breast)

1 egg or 2 egg yolks

2 tablespoons milk

½ teaspoon salt

½ teaspoon pepper

½ teaspoon thyme

½ teaspoon sage

1 tablespoon chopped parsley

½ cup dried bread crumbs

Saute onions in hot fat until tender. Combine with remaining ingredients and blend well. Shape into loaf and bake in a shallow pan, in a moderate oven, 350°F. for 1 hour. Six to eight servings.

STEAMED CHERRY PUDDING.

2 cups pitted cherries

½ cup sugar

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour

2 teaspoons baking powder

½ teaspoon salt

2 tablespoons mild-flavored fat

½ cup milk

Place pitted cherries into the greased top of a double boiler. Add sugar. Mix and sift the dry ingredients, cut in fat and add the milk. Spread the dough over the berries. Set over boiling water, cover and steam 35 minutes. Turn out to serve. Six servings.

FRUIT CRUSH.

3 cups fruit (pitted cherries, currants)

¼ cup sugar

½ teaspoon salt

1½ tablespoons gelatin

½ cup cold water

Crush fruit, add sugar and salt. Bring slowly to a boil. Add gelatin. In fat and salt the dry ingredients, cut in fat and add the milk. Spread the dough over the berries. Set over boiling water, cover and steam 35 minutes. Turn out to serve. Six servings.

NOTE—With very sour cherries and red currants, increase sugar to ½ cup.

Record Pack of Fruits and Vegetables in 1946.

In a recent address on the outlook for 1947 to the Ontario Canned Foods Association convention at Niagara Falls, F. J. Perry, Chief Canning Inspector, Fruit and Vegetable Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, said that the figures of the estimated total pack of canned fruits and vegetables clearly indicated that the 1946 pack of some of the commodities was a record, and that if there were another bumper pack in 1947, it would bring about a return to normal supply.

In another year, said Mr. Perry, canners would be looking for exports. At the present time, exports were on a quota basis and would so remain for some time until there was assurance of a reasonably fair supply for the domestic market. Over and above the present quota for export, it was hoped that 75,000 cases of Choice Quality tomatoes and 500,000 cases of Fancy and Choice Quality tomato juice would be obtained for Great Britain. Probably the supply for juice would be met but there was likely to be a considerable falling down on the canned tomatoes, due to the poor quality of the pack, because much of it was graded Standard. Great Britain would also like to obtain a further supply of 50,000 cases of peaches and 50,000 cases of plums. There was no set-aside for these particular lots. If their requests could not be met, every effort should be made to ship at least a fair quantity of peaches, because undoubtedly in years to come, canners would be looking for export to relieve the domestic market of an over-supply.

Large quantities of citrus fruit were now being imported. The United States production in 1946 was double that of any pre-war year, and although the Prices Board was endeavoring to hold down imported prices to domestic prices, large imports in the future might be expected unless Canadian prices could be held within reason and better quality products made.

The silence that accepts merit as the most natural thing in the world is the highest applause.—Emmerson.

Famous Lady Boats Returning to Peacetime Service

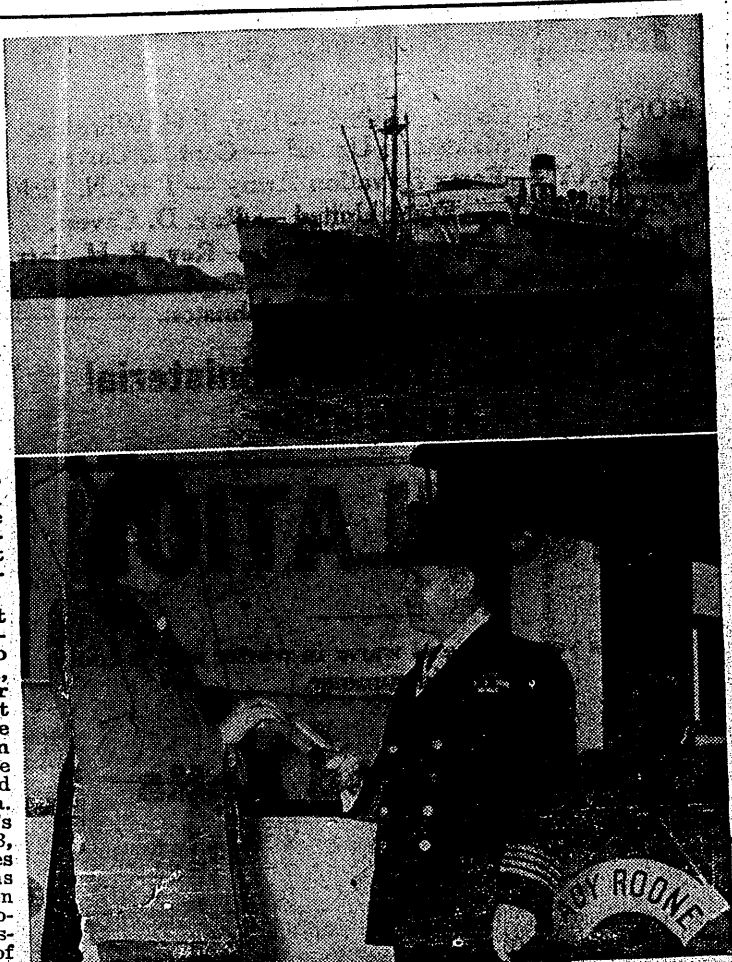

When the Lady Rodney docked at Halifax recently with nearly 200 Canadian servicemen's wives and children from overseas, she brought to a close more than four years of half-year war service. The Lady Rodney was immediately turned back to the Canadian National Steamships by the Department of National Defence.

Taken over by the government in June, 1942, the former C.N.S. peacetime luxury cruiser to the West Indies became a troop transport. Since that time she has travelled almost 170,000 miles between Canada, Newfoundland and Labrador and the United Kingdom and in several trips between England, Rotterdam and Antwerp carrying servicemen overseas and after VE Day in logged when German submarines were desperately trying to choke off the flow of men and munitions going overseas. The Lady Rodney carried almost 67,000 persons in this service. Except for approximately 2,000 dependents, all were servicemen.

The Lady Rodney is the last vessel to be returned to the Canadian National Steamships. Two weeks earlier, the Lady Nelson, former flagship and only other survivor of the famous Lady boat fleet, was also turned back to the company in March 1942, while in company in the West Indies service. She was torpedoed and badly damaged in the port of Castles, St. Lucia.

Returned to service as Canada's first hospital ship in April 1943, just before the Canadian forces landed on Guadalcanal, she has since sailed over 100,000 miles between Canadian ports and other South American ports, carrying 25,580 passengers, who with the exception of about 1,000 dependents, were sick and wounded servicemen.

The Lady Rodney went directly into drydock for reconversion to carry passengers and freight traffic. When work on the two ships is completed in late February or early March, 1947, they will return to the West Indies run. Sailing from Halifax almost every three weeks, their ports of call will be on, Bermuda, Leeward Islands, St. John's, Barbados, Trinidad, Demerara, returning via St. John, N.B.

CANADA'S Health

EYE STRAIN

How to recognize eye strain is explained by National Health leaders at Ottawa. Among the first signs of an abnormal eye condition may be itching lids, styes, redness of the lids or eyes, burning of the eyeball, light-sensitivity, headaches, dizziness or even disturbed stomachs. Even unusual fatigue after work may indicate eye strain.

Consultations with the eye clinic or family physician is recommended immediately such conditions are experienced.

RICKETS REPORT

Rickets are rife in some parts of Canada. Surveys made by government nutrition authorities in one province revealed that one child in every ten had definite signs of rickets.

It was also discovered that at least six out of ten had not been getting a cod liver oil.

Vitamin D which is present in fish liver oils, is used by the body for proper development of bones. Nutritionists therefore urge parents to forestall rickets by including some form of fish liver oil in the children's diet all the year around.

FOILING FUMES

Respirators designed to combat particular hazards are recommended by industrial health experts to protect workers against dust, fumes and gas, which are inevitable by-products of many industrial processes. The Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa, urges with Provincial Health Departments to ensure that workers are safeguarded with adequate respiratory protective equipment.

CHICKEN'S CHANCE

Pointing to the care taken of livestock, particularly in feeding, health authorities declare that many Canadian children aren't given a chicken's chance in their diet.

A variety of carefully-chosen foods declare nutritionists at Ottawa, is essential to health. Deformed bones, anaemia, skin affections, goitre, sore eyes, loss of weight digestive disturbances and even mild unnoted conditions may occur, particularly in children, as a result of the food which they eat—or don't eat.

COLD COMFORT

Want to avoid colds this winter? Here's how—according to Ottawa Health and Welfare authorities, eat regularly, having well-balanced meals; sleep in well-ventilated rooms; clean out impurities of air passage by deep breathing, and stay away from obvious cases of sore throats and head colds.

FOODS THAT FIT

Experts declare that food plays a great part in keeping us fit. But they warn, don't expect overnight benefits from diet.

Good nutrition will give you sound teeth, strong bones, sharp eyes, clear skin and a feeling of well-being only after a proper dietary has been followed over a period of time.

Good eating habits cure as well as conserve. It's never too late, says nutritionists to adopt healthful eating habits, but, like all good things, the sooner begun the better.

DEEP BREATHING

To conserve health, indulge in deep breathing exercises several times a day.

That's the advice of Ottawa health experts. They remind Canadians that disease means decay and stagnation, which in turn breeds disease. Deep breathing sweeps out the lungs and fills the air passages with fresh air. Exercise entailed needn't be strenuous, but it will bring that exhilaration which is a sign that it is beneficial.

Different Effects in Use of 2-4-D.

Because the chemical compound 2-4-D kills many weeds, it often boosts the yields of field crops. But when applied in too large amounts it injures grain, sharply reducing the yield.

Describing results of experiments conducted at several points in Canada this year, George Knowles, Field Husbandry Division, Central Experimental Farm, says that while light applications of 2-4-D increase grain yields by eliminating weeds, heavy applications injure the grain and reduce its yield. Some grain crops, such as flax and oats, are more susceptible to 2-4-D injury than are wheat and barley. Some brands of 2-4-D appear to be more harmful than others, he said.

A new method of applying 2-4-D on mustard-infested wheat gave good results when tested at the Central Experimental Farm and at two points in the Prairie Provinces last summer. In some of these tests less than one pint of a certain brand of 30 per cent 2-4-D applied in only four and one-half gallons of water per acre killed practically 100 per cent of the mustard and increased the wheat yield from two to three bushels per acre.

Go through, go through the gates, prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people.—Isaiah 40:3.

The events of the year just passed were not as spectacular as those of 1945, which saw the dramatic ending of World War II, but considered in relation to man's constant search for the way to live together in peace, it has been a year of greatest achievement. All organizations of the United Nations will need active and informed public support in the coming year if they are to fulfil the hope of the world, 1947.

But it is forward that all anxious political observers and hopeful Canadians are looking today; what will 1947 bring to Canada? Perhaps the greatest need is an agreement between the federal government and the provincial governments that will bring Canada's practical administration up to date. The division of responsibilities between two governments that met the needs of 1867 does not meet the needs of modern Canada. It is recognized that wealth and industry largely concentrated because of geographic circumstances in our two central provinces, belong to all Canadians because all Canadians helped to produce it. The benefits and opportunities must be spread to all Canadians equally if Canada is to remain as a national and economic unit. There are many signs that the people of Ontario and Quebec are rapidly moving to support this view as the new year opens. The election result in Richelieu-Vercheres, Quebec, where this was an issue, is considered one of the signs.

Prices and Controls.

Further evidence of the value of Canada's price stabilization policy comes to those who watched prices in the United States after the holidays. Newspaper headlines indicate a break in the price of butter of 10c per lb. and other important changes. Prices for primary products are always the first to break when inflation is permitted and farmers are the first to suffer. This evidence will not be lost on the members of parliament from rural areas when the policies of price control are debated in parliament after it opens on January 30th.

To Boost Farm Production.

One of the important benefits listed in the federal government's offer in the Dominion-Provincial discussions and to be introduced by the Minister of Agriculture this year is the extension of the prairie farm rehabilitation plan to central and Eastern Canada. The new act has large possibilities, particularly for Eastern Ontario and the Maritime Provinces. Agricultural production and consequent prosperity will receive a substantial "boost" from (a) flood control of rivers requiring it; (b) drainage and development of rich lands in Eastern Ontario and the Maritimes; (c) Dyking to reclaim from the Atlantic Ocean much rich land in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia; (d) Clearing and development of some bush lands; (e) Reforestation and other measures to prevent soil erosion.

Canadians.

Included in this list of Canadian citizens will be Mrs. Stanley Mynarski of Winnipeg who recently received the posthumous award of the Victoria Cross won by the bravery of her (and Canada's) son, Pilot Officer Andrew Charles Mynarski. This is only the second Victoria Cross presented to members of the R.C.A.F. Mrs. Mynarski was born in Radonys, Poland, and came to Canada in May, 1911. She resides with her four other children at 772 Atlantic avenue, Winnipeg. Her husband died in 1932. After the oath of allegiance is taken, the certificate of Citizenship will be presented by the Secretary of State, Hon. Colin Gibson, and an address of congratulations will be given by the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King. Civic and provincial citizenship ceremonies all across Canada will closely follow the pattern of the one in the Capital City.

Toward Freer Trading.

One of the most serious handicaps to our trade is the conversion of the currency of Britain and some other countries to Canadian dollars. For this reason the agreement between Canada and Britain has been hailed as another good omen for 1947. Without special agreement, trading in our isolated world has forced most countries to buy in the markets they had sold in. But with the new agreement countries will now be able to sell on the British market and use the proceeds of their sales to buy in Canada. Twenty-two countries will be affected in this way and will become more active markets for the products of Canada's fisheries, farms and factories.

Politics in the Pulpit.

By Lewis Milligan.

The question as to whether preachers should discuss politics in the pulpit was recently put to cross-sections of the Canadian people in a Gallup Poll, and the result was said to be overwhelmingly against pulpit politics. The question was put thus: "Do you think clergymen should or should not discuss politics during the sermon?" The response was as follows. Should not, 75% Should, 15%. Undecided, 10%. It was pointed out that the minority of 15% favored the practice provided the clergy deal with public issues from the "moral standpoint," as related to the broad "problems of the day, rather than vote-catching, or party issues."

Those who were opposed to the idea are said to have reasoned that "the church was not the place for politics," or that it would make the pulpit "an organ of propaganda," or "it breaks morale and the spiritual uplift of the service." Those who favoured it contended that "politics are part of everyday life," that "the clergy can stir up people to take an interest in civic affairs," and that "there should be more Christianity in politics and the clergy should point out the way for us."

Even the 75% would probably agree with this last argument, whether it be applied to politics, business, or domestic life. But politics is such a controversial subject upon which the members of most congregations are sharply divided, and the preachers themselves, being men like the rest of us, are also of diverse opinions. Some of the clergy hold strong personal views on politics, and if every preacher were to use the pulpit as a platform for the promotion of his own political opinions, then the churches would become a political pandemonium. This is not a question of freedom of speech; it is a question as to whether the preachers should enter into a free-for-all fight on party politics, for politics cannot be discussed in these days without reference to political parties or groups. The great majority of the clergy do refrain from discussing politics in their sermons, but this does not and should not prevent them from insisting upon the observance of Christian principles in all the affairs of life. I once heard a preacher say that his job and that of the church was to "make more good men and women." If the churches were to succeed in that, then our politics and our social problems would take care of themselves. Religion after all is a personal matter, and society is no better than individuals of which it is composed. The preacher's and the pastor's mission is primarily to the individual soul. The Christian gospel is not a theory of economics or of government, although it may and does have an indirect influence upon social order. But men must first of all be brought to realize that he is something more than an animal, and that this something cannot be satisfied and rendered happy by economic systems or acts of parliament.

Carlyle put this truth in arresting words when he said, "Man's Unhappiness, as I construe, comes from his Greatness; it is because there is an infinite in him, which with all his cunning he cannot bury under the Finite." And he adds: "Will the whole Finance Ministers and Upholsters and Confectioners of modern Europe undertake in joint-stock company, to make one Shoebuckle HAPPY? They cannot accomplish it above an hour or two; for the Shoebuckle also has a soul quite other than his stomach. . . . Try him with half the Universe, he sets to quarrelling with the proprietor of the other half, and declares himself the most maltreated of men."

If politics could satisfy the spiritual aspirations and solve the social problems of mankind there would be no need for churches. But all history, and recent history in particular, has proved that political theories—and there is a glut of them today—have done more than anything else to create unrest, class hatred, social strife and world wars. It is for the church and the preacher to "show a more excellent way."

Wherever our country calls, friends, sons, and sirens should yield their treasure up, nor own a sense beyond the public safety.—Brooke.

Business Libraries.

Every business place needs a library of serviceable books says the December monthly letter of The Royal Bank of Canada.

The business library is set up with the idea that profit will result, and this may take one or more of several forms. The profit may lie in information given an executive which aids him in making a difficult decision; or a member of the staff may use the library to work out a problem ranging from arithmetic to recommendations of high policy; or the library may be used to win the goodwill of customers; or it may be a blessing to the personnel department by adding another attraction to membership on the staff. The librarian can be of real dollars-and-cents value by anticipating requirements and assembling data as a basis for future growth of the concern.

The article continues in part: "A shelf full of books is always the answer to a business man's problem, but when in the course of human events he meets a $64 question it is a great relief and benefit to have a shelf of books upon which he can call for an answer. The library need not be big in size to demonstrate its worth. A qualified librarian will know the best source for facts to be incorporated in a reference department. In a very short time she will be in a position to answer questions ranging through your own business related business, and any miscellaneous matters you bring up."

"Just as the library does not need to be big in order to be useful, neither need the business be big in order to use a library. In fact, there is hardly a business too small for its executive to require a library of some kind. In small industries it is impracticable to employ statisticians to keep track of current industrial and financial developments, so why not make use of the highly-qualified statisticians made available free or at very small cost through pamphlets and periodicals. If the business man feels that he cannot afford expensive research counsel, he can benefit from a library, because it is rare to come upon a problem which is so new that it has no connection with the past. Your library, containing the records of previous experiments and accomplishments, will enable you to avoid the pitfalls into which others fell, and to take advantage of the successes and methods others have achieved."

"Starting a special library for your business may be easier than you at first think. Look around your offices and see the number of books accumulated by this and that worker. Some are used every day, and should not be disturbed; others are used infrequently by the men who hold them, and should be collected into one place for the use of all."

"Having gathered together all the scattered books, pamphlets and periodicals, you will wish to add essential reference books, surveys, and a few key periodicals covering your special field of activity with up-to-date information. The objective is not to build an elaborate collection of books, but to establish a department to serve all departments with basic and current information quickly. It is wise counsel to start with specific desires, and then seek the books; don't let the supply of books dictate your demand."

After discussing the kind of material most likely to be useful, and where to obtain it, the article continues: "The library needs room to breathe, quarters in which the books may be kept reasonably clean, sufficient shelf space and filing cabinets so that references do not get so crowded that items are hard to find, and adequate staff. It has been found to work well when the library ranks as a department responsible only to a higher official, with the librarian recognized as a department head. In some firms, the library is under executive direction of the general manager of the company secretary, a person who is interested in and appreciates the possibilities of service the library holds. Independence of the library from multiple control makes it possible to centralize all acquisitions of printed matter, and to ensure a more economical supervision of purchases. Business does not demand so much as staff trained to meticulous nicety in library details as one that can sense the imminent demand for certain information and have it ready and accessible. The librarian should be briefed regularly by executives as to approaching interests and she will, of course, keep abreast daily of published opinions and plans."

Indexing for quick service, the usefulness of pamphlets and other details are discussed, after which the article gives attention to particular advantages. "About half the circulation of The Royal Bank Library is in books of fiction. This conveys an important hint in days when employers are seeking means of attracting workers. Firms everywhere encourage sports, theatricals, public speaking classes, clubs, and other recreation. Now here is another service which will be widely taken advantage of. Whether the library is approached by a tired department head seeking a detective story, or an equally tired stenographer looking for a love story, the free loan of a book means one or two evenings of relaxation. It also means enhanced contentment among the working staff, a blessing to personnel managers."

"In more serious vein, a reading course might be made up by the librarian in collaboration with the personnel manager or other executive. This could take the form of a reading course in the business, or in political and economic affairs, or in sociology or philosophy, or any other subject; or several choices of courses might be given. Such a procedure would be equally effective for a home office or for employees in isolated branches."

"One of the saddest fates that can happen a business library is to have it fall into a routine of being merely a library. Unless it is performing a research function, it is not living up to what executives expect of it. It might be worth while to set up a library annex, when the institution is a large one, to read quickly and route to the proper officer all interesting material as it arrives. Those staffing the annex would have before them lists telling the particular interests of all departments, revised and renewed from time to time. Every periodical, pamphlet, and other publication would clear through this annex daily, with a slip attached on which the reader would designate the circulating route and the page on which an item of interest has been found. Under such a system no material would get on to a shelf without being drawn to attention of the executive or department head who might be interested in it; if he could not read it at the moment, his secretary would make a note of its availability and a paragraph digest of its content. After coursing through the

People Are Asking?

Q—I understand some items have been removed from the list of rationed fruits. Will you please tell me what preserves are still rationed?

A—All canned fruit, sweetened and unsweetened have been removed from the list of rationed foods. Jams, jellies, marmalades, honey, syrup as well as pie fillers, fruit fillers, baker's fruit fillers and fountain fruit containing 66 per cent water soluble contents are still rationed.

Q—I am a farmer and want to have a pig slaughtered. Are there any regulations which I must follow?

A—You apply to the nearest office of Wartime Prices and Trade Board for a permit to have the hog slaughtered. You present this authorization to a licensed slaughterer with the pig. If you are not going to use all the meat obtained you may sell not more than half to another farmer, but you must collect the proper number of meat coupons.

Q—Is there a ceiling price on mayonnaise?

A—Yes. If you will send us the name of your grocer, the brand and the size of the container we will quote you the maximum charge permitted.

Q—When I got my washing back from the laundry two shirts were missing. The laundry will give me a refund because they say the shirts are lost. I don't want the money. I want the shirts. How can I get them or similar shirts?

A—Sorry, but this is a matter which does not come within the regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Ration Coupon Due Dates.

Coupons now valid are sugar—serves $26 to $28 butter, 135 to 137, meat M64 to M66. Ration book five may now be destroyed, all coupons in it have been invalidated.

Hands of those interested in specific items, the publication would go into general circulation.

"If the library is everlastingly taking stock of itself, as it should, to ascertain if it is performing its full function it is only good business for the executive to examine whether he is getting greatest possible benefit from the library. He may find that he is concentrating on problems in an effort to pull out of thin air the answers which would be available quickly if he gave his librarian a chance to search. Even if she has not the material on her own shelves, there are nine chances out of ten that she knows where to get it, and the last chance will be eliminated once she starts searching."

In conclusion the article says, "The role to be played by a special business library is limited only by two factors: the ability of the librarian to grasp what the business needs, acquire material with initiative and discretion, carry out her work with energy and enthusiasm, and follow through through heads to completion; and the willingness of the executive and department heads to look upon the library as a living clearing house of information, giving it a chance to demonstrate its ability to help them in their individual and business problems, and support it as they will find it deserves."

GOOD CITIZENSHIP is a lot of little things

COLDS ARE CONTAGIOUS

This is the season for sniffles and sneezes. More time is lost, more general discomfort suffered because of the common cold than any other single factor in modern life. Yet, we can avoid colds by avoiding direct contact with those who have them; we can build up resistance to minimize the effects.

By taking ordinary care, we prevent the spread of infection to others. Surely that's "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

"I will be taking a much less active part in business from now on," he said following his appointment. "I anticipate I will be disposing of some of my business activities."

The new lieutenant-governor said he planned to move from London to Toronto as soon as he found accommodation but that he would keep his town and country homes in London.

He intends to spend part of the winter with his family at another home in Miami, Fla.

Born in London, Ont. Mr. Lawson was born in London, Ont., the son of Frank and Lorena (Hodgins) Lawson. He received his education at London Collegiate Institute. In 1909 he married Helen Newton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Newton, of Sarnia, Ont. They have three sons and two daughters.

He was instrumental in establishing the Lawson Memorial Library at the University of Western Ontario, in memory of his parents. He also initiated the medical students' loan fund. A few years ago he sponsored a special postgraduate course in surgery at Dalhousie University, Halifax.

His recreations include fishing and horseback riding and he devotes much time to his extensive farm outside London.

Great Seal of Province. After the new lieutenant-governor affixed his signature to the oaths of allegiance and office the provincial secretary, Hon. Mr. Michener, presented the Great Seal of the Province to Mr. Lawson, who after examination returned it to the provincial secretary for safekeeping.

After taking the oaths, Mr. Lawson changed seats with Mr. Matthews according to custom and took the place between the chief justice and the retiring lieutenant-governor. Premier Drew stood to the left and his cabinet ministers were seated around the council table.

Premier Drew welcomed Mr. Lawson to his new office and assured him of all possible assistance from the government. He paid tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Matthews and expressed the "deep appreciation" of the government and the people of Ontario for their "unselfish services."

Son One of Aides. Lt.-Col. Baptist Johnston and Lt.-Col. Thomas Lawson, son of the new lieutenant-governor, acted as aide-de-camps to Mr. Lawson. Col. Johnston introduced members of the cabinet to Mr. Lawson at the end of the ceremony. In attendance also was Brig.-Gen. Bruce Matthews, son of the retiring lieutenant-governor.

Mrs. John C. Kennedy and Lt.-Col. Lawson were the only two of Mr. and Mrs. Lawson's five children to attend the swearing-in ceremony. Relatives of Mr. Lawson present were Helen McArthur, Mary McArthur, nieces; Gertrude Hodgins, aunt; and Mrs. Duncan McArthur, sister.

Two Ways to Progress.

By R. J. DEACHMAN

Some people have long memories. I was talking to a chap yesterday who said: "Corporation profits are far too high." What he might have said was: "Some corporation profits are too high." That would have presented an arguable point but my friend ignored the fact that in the United States, the home of big profits, there have been very sharp losses and in some years there were no profits, that is taking industry as a whole.

I mentioned not long ago the case of the Lincoln Electric Company, of Cleveland, Ohio. James F. Lincoln, the head of that company, spoke not long ago in the City of Toronto. He has succeeded in making big profits, reducing the price of the products he sold, paying his men the highest wages of any corporation in the world. So when we make a general and sweeping statement regarding profits we are likely to be wrong, there are many variations in our industrial picture. Sweeping general statements are likely to be wrong.

Then my friend went back further than this and put forward the claim that whatever we have in Canada today is the result of the efforts of the British Empire. He said that at the time of the industrial revolution in England, the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

What he meant to say is that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

Were They Wise?

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world. He said that the British Empire was the greatest in the world.

Humidity at Home.

Controlling indoor atmosphere will help preserve health. The Department of National Health and Welfare suggests a pan of water on the stove or radiator will help when there is no humidifier. Warm, dry air does not give the sense of comfort afforded by cooler, moist air, and is harder on breathing tissues, so, say the public health authorities, a householder will save on fuel as well as medical bills, by improving the humidity at home in winter months.

Painting at its Best.

A good coat of paint properly applied dries to about the thickness of a sheet of newspaper or 1/300th of an inch on the average. That isn't much but it represents the most important 1/300th of an inch of any structure as far as protection and beauty are concerned. The value of paint as a protective coating doesn't increase in relation to the thickness of the coat applied. On the contrary two thin coats are almost invariably better than one thick one because in the former case the paint has a better chance to dry firmly and evenly.

When painting or enamelling over varnished wood, be sure to rub down the entire surface first with steel wool or fine sandpaper. This will take off the gloss of the varnish and give the new coating a better surface to which it can adhere. A high quality ground coat should be applied before finishing with one or two coats of the surface paint or enamel.

When open-grained wood, such as oak or chestnut is involved, it might be necessary to fill the grain with a wood filler preparation between the application of the ground coat and the finishing coats.

No rule holds true for ever. It seems there was a time when paint manufacturers used to say: "Paint richly" — that is, the surface to be painted should always be perfectly dry before the paint went on. That rule still stands in many cases, but there is at least one exception. In the application of oil-based water paints.

In using such paints, the recommendation is that the cement surface first be thoroughly dampened to reduce surface porosity and to provide a porous surface for the paint to adhere to. This is done by spraying the surface with water. Not all cement surfaces are in this "wet-wall" category, however, so care should be taken to follow the manufacturer's directions closely in applying.

In the painting of new lumber, the initial or priming coat is of extreme importance. The old idea that practically any kind of left-over paint will do as a first coat has long been exploded, for it is known now that the priming coat — the coat upon which all future painting depends — is the basis of good painting.

The priming coat should be designed especially to seal the surface of the wood and provide the type of coating to which later applications of paint can adhere with best results. Never waste time and money by using a cheap priming coat or one that is not designed for that purpose.

The winter months provide a good time to repair window screens at leisure in preparation for their use again in the spring.

Each mesh screen should be painted with two coats of paint to ensure full protection of the wire. This is best done by using a small piece of carpet which is soaked with paint and rubbed over the screen. In a point which is needed, it should be rubbed over until it is completely covered. It is not a good idea to use a brush for this purpose.

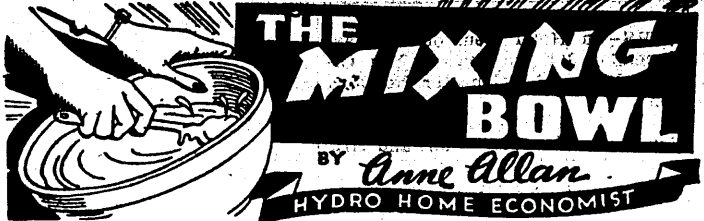

Resumption of Short Courses.

Resumption of short courses in various branches of agriculture at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, is announced by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture and W. R. Keir, acting president of the O. A. C. These short courses could not be held last year on account of the lack of accommodation at the college, but the provision of additional space has made possible their revival this month. The week's courses will be held from December 27th to January 3rd, and already there is a keen interest in registrations for the courses which are to be given.

The courses which are being provided during this period are five in number, and cover livestock, soils and crops, agricultural mechanics, horticulture, and farm business. As well as the regular horticultural short course, the college is offering a special two-day school for commercial florists, to be held on December 30th and 31st. During the courses, the students will be in residence at the college, and a charge of $10 for board and room in the dormitory and dining hall will be made.

There is no registration charge, but a fee of 50 cents will be payable, to cover the cost of evening entertainment and other activities fostered by the students. Inquiries regarding these courses should be made to W. D. Tolson, B.S.A., Department of Public Relations, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

In addition to these courses of a week's duration, two other courses are offered. A course in poultry husbandry will be held from January 2nd to January 31st. Accommodation for practical work in this course is limited, so applications should be made at once to the poultry department at the O. A. C. From January 2nd to March 27th, the Dairy department of the O. A. C. will conduct a three months' short course for those interested in dairy management and the manufacture of dairy products. In addition the college also offers an ice cream course, starting on March 31st and continuing until April 11th, 1947. Applications for these courses should be sent directly to the dairy department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Hello Homemakers! With everyone talking about the shortage of power, we are taking this opportunity to list suggestions which we strongly recommend putting into practice. Because of the inability to proceed with the development of sufficient new power sites during the war to meet the present high demands for Hydro a critical power shortage now exists in Southern Ontario.

There are numerous ways homemakers can save electricity. By employing each and every means of conservation, we shall keep every home appliance and industrial machine in operation.

Home Lighting.

1. Reduce the number of lamps burning in a room which is in use to the minimum necessary for good vision.

2. Do not burn lamps in unused rooms; do not forget to turn out attic, basement, garage lamps and outdoor lighting.

3. Keep lamp shades and fixtures clean; dirty fixtures absorb as much as 1/4 of the light.

Electric Range.

1. Use knobs which fit the electric element so that the entire cooking surface is heated quickly.

2. Cook all vegetables in a small amount of rapidly boiling salted water. When the vegetable is added cover with a tight-fitting lid and turn the element from High to Medium or Low.

3. When you roast meat, plan an oven dinner which can be cooked at the same time.

4. Use your pressure cooker whenever you can.

Refrigerator.

1. Defrost refrigerator regularly every week or 10 days.

2. When storing food, or preparing meals make one "loading" or "unloading" do.

3. Do not use the refrigerator to store foods which should be in the freezer.

For the Days that Follow Christmas.

Christmas is more than just another holiday. The glow of its candles and the warmth of its spirit linger with us for many days. It is the highlight of the year. Its cheer is contagious and may be spread around our homes at this Yuletide season in many different ways and places. It may be found on the mantel in the window, at the door and in the food. The colour combination of red and green creates that festive feeling.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture have a few colourful suggestions for the days that follow Christmas. When planning meals for this period, it is well to keep in mind these helpful pointers.

DINNER MENU FOR "DAY-AFTER"

Tomato Juice Cocktail
Yuletide Tongue in Cranberry Sauce
Scalloped Potatoes, Beans or Peas
Apple and Cabbage Salad
Lemon Snow, Holly Sauce
Cookies
Coffee

About twenty minutes before the potatoes are cooked sprinkle the top with grated cheese. It adds a tangy flavour. To give a holiday flavour and appearance to an every-day dessert a few drops of oil of peppermint may be added to the Lemon Snow which has been tinted a delicate green with food colouring.

In most homes there is usually a second appearance of the turkey as "cold slices." The family will enjoy them much more if served a couple of days after Christmas with a change in the interval. A few individual moulds of cranberry jelly tucked away in the back of the refrigerator, will quickly dress up the left-over turkey. They may also be used with a salad to help carry through the color scheme of red and green.

YULETIDE TONGUE.

1 3/4 lb. beef tongue, fresh or pickled
1 teaspoon pickling spice, tied in cheesecloth bag
1 onion
1 carrot
2 celery stalks
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup molasses
1/2 cup vinegar
1/2 cup water
1/2 teaspoon whole cloves
1/2 inch stick cinnamon
2 cups cranberries

Wash tongue, cover with boiling salted water, if fresh. Add no salt to pickled tongue. Add pickling spice, onion, carrot and celery stalks. Simmer until tender, about 3 to 4 hours. Remove skin while still hot and trim. Combine sugar, molasses, vinegar, water and spices. Bring to boiling point. Pick over and wash cranberries. Add to syrup and cook slowly until tender. Put through sieve. Place tongue in shallow pan, and over it pour the spiced cranberry sauce. Bake in a moderate oven 350° F. for 35 to 40 minutes, basting frequently to form a glaze. Six servings.

Water Heating.

1. Use hot water sparingly when bathing, doing dishes or laundry; do not use running hot water.

2. Do not leave hot water taps dripping; replace worn-out washers.

Washing Machines.
1. Soak soiled clothes in cold water.

2. Fill washing machine with hot water only to the water line.

3. Use warm water for only one rinse; a second and third rinse can be made in cold water.

Other Appliances.
1. Do not leave the radio on when no one is listening.

2. Turn iron off before the ironing is completed; it will retain enough heat to finish several articles.

Pressure Cooker Meat Loaf.
1 1/2 lbs. round steak, 1/2 lb. sausage
2 eggs beaten, 2 tablespoons chili sauce, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 onion, 2 carrots, 1 stalk celery, 1/2 cup bread crumbs, 1 tablespoon fat.

Grind meat twice. Add eggs and chili sauce and salt. Chop onion, carrots and celery and add along with crumbs. Heat fat in cooker and having formed meat into a mound, brown it for 2 minutes. Add 3 tablespoons water. Cook 15 minutes at pressure.

Fish Soufflé: Browned Potatoes, Beans au Gratin and Meringue Cake. Servings for 5. Temperature, 325 degrees. Time, 1 hour, 15 minutes.

Time-Saving Oven Meal.
3 lbs. Roast Beef; Spaghetti with Tomatoes, Baked Potatoes and Coconuts Apple Betty. Servings for 6. Time, 1 hour, 40 minutes. Temperature, 350 degrees.

Tripletsauce Sauté.
Boiled Potatoes, Mashed Turnips and Fruit dumplings with cold meat for entrée.

Balancing a Breeding Ration.

The most exacting demands of poultry in a nutritional way are made by breeding stock. The breeder ration must nourish the reproductive stage of the bird's life and must provide the essential nutrients for the development of the embryo and so some extent for the livability of the chick since its initial nourishment is supplied through the egg says Morris Novikoff, Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. If the hen does not obtain the nutrients at an adequate level she will draw upon her body stores to a degree which can have a disastrous effect on the hen and ultimately on the resulting chick.

The problem reduces itself to the obtaining of foods which are sufficiently high in all the essential nutrients to supply the highest levels for maintenance, production and reproduction.

Foods such as fish meal meat meal, soybean oil meal and dried milk products will supply the proteins; bone meal, limestone, oyster shell, salt, manganese sulphate, the minerals; dehydrated green feeds, yeast, vitamin oils, synthetic vitamins, the vitamins. The bulk of the ration will consist of grains and by-products of grains 70 to 80 per cent. These grains are a source of energy but in addition will provide proteins, minerals and vitamins and must be taken into account when balancing the ration. The protein supplements are then added in sufficient amounts to meet the protein requirements of approximately 15 per cent in an all-mash ration or 18 per cent in the mash if 50:50 mash is used. The next step is to balance the calcium and phosphorus levels using oyster shell, limestone, bone meal, etc. to include such minerals as manganese sulphate and iodized salt to meet other more important mineral requirements such as manganese, sodium, chlorine and iodine. The last step is to determine the various vitamin levels present in the final mixture and if they are too low to correct them by the inclusion of vitamin supplements.

Availability may be the main limiting factor especially during the following year when scarcity might well be at a maximum. Quality, however, should be maintained, the cost, within reasonable limits, being of secondary importance. The old adage, "it pays to buy the best," is particularly appropriate in this instance.

Further information on the subject is given in publication No. 541, "Poultry Feeds and Feeding," which can be obtained by writing the Dominion Department of Agriculture Ottawa.

HOLLY SAUCE.
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon cornstarch pinch of salt
2 egg yolks
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup maraschino cherries coarsely chopped

Mix sugar, cornstarch, salt and milk (1 cup). Heat in double boiler. Beat egg yolks slightly with remaining milk. Add slowly to the hot milk, stirring constantly. Cook until mixture is thick and will coat a spoon (about 10 minutes). Remove from heat, add flavouring and cherries. Six servings.

GUEST STAR

John Sturgess, popular Toronto baritone, appears as guest artist on the Northern Electric Hour on Monday (January 6). He will sing the "Rogue Song" (Stohart) and Cole Porter's immortal "Begin the Beguine". Paul Scherman and his concert orchestra will play selections from "The Firefly" (by Friml), Grainger's "Molly on the Shore" and the "Grand March" from Wagner's "Tannhauser".

Foreign Exchange Control.

In a general statement on the subject of Foreign Exchange Control made December 19th the Hon. Douglas Abbott made known a number of steps which have been taken to meet recent developments. Among the steps that were announced to take effect on January 1st, 1947, were the following:

Conclusion of arrangements under which a broader use of sterling may be made by Canadian exporters and importers.

Revision of regulations to enable certain countries which have received credits from the Canadian Government to use them for private, as well as inter-governmental trade with Canada.

Some increase in the authority of banks to sell U. S. funds for travel purposes, without reference to the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

Simplification of some Foreign Exchange regulations and adaptation of others to the new developments in sterling exchange, in order to maintain control over capital movements.

Mr. Abbott pointed out that the main change in the regulations was that made as the result of an agreement between the Canadian and British financial authorities, under which Canadian traders will be authorized to make exports against payment in sterling to a number of countries from which they had hitherto been required to obtain payment on a U. S. Dollar basis. Payment is, however, not to be restricted to sterling under the new arrangement, being optional for transactions to be completed in U. S. dollars to make payment in sterling to these countries if they find it more convenient than making payment in U. S. dollars.

In addition to all countries within the British Commonwealth, the following come within this new arrangement:

Anglo Egyptian Sudan, Argentina, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Faroe Islands, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Iraq, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Philippine Islands, Salvador, Transjordan, United States and territories, Venezuela.

Other countries will be added to this list as the necessary arrangements are completed with them by the United Kingdom, and covering public notices will be issued by the Foreign Exchange Board from time to time.

The Minister stated that the new arrangements represent an important step towards carrying out the agreement made by the United Kingdom to make sterling earnings of foreign countries convertible by July 15th, 1947. While there would be no immediate improvement in Canada's overall foreign exchange position, Canadian exporters and importers could do business more conveniently. The interchangeability of Canada's sterling receipts for a number of other foreign currencies, including U. S. dollars, would, however, make it necessary for the Foreign Exchange Control Board to exercise a greater degree of control over sterling transactions.

Mr. Abbott also announced that several of the countries which had received export credits from the Canadian Government wish to use these credits to finance private trade with Canada. To meet this desire, the Foreign Exchange Control Regulations provide that exports from Canada to France, Belgium, Holland, Norway and Czechoslovakia may be made for payment in Canadian dollars, as well as for payment in U. S. dollars. Exports to the sterling area may continue to be made for payment in Canadian dollars or sterling, or in local currency which is freely convertible into sterling.

Exports to the United States and the remaining countries not mentioned above will continue to be governed in the same way as under existing regulations, and payment must ordinarily be obtained in U. S. dollars.

As from January 1st next, permits will no longer be required for the purchase of U. S. cash in amounts up to $100, and no form will be required on sales to Canadian banks of U. S. dollars or other foreign exchange up to $1,000 if arising from sources other than exports. The authority of banks to sell U. S. funds for travel, without reference to the Foreign Exchange Control Board will be increased from $250 to $500.

Substance is not Matter.

Today, many of our greatest inventors, physicists and philosophers have become stranded on the shoals of agnosticism through their inability to see the difference between substance and matter. It should be apparent by now that a mere acquaintance with the earth's component elements and the laws that seem to govern them has never of itself brought the human race one step nearer to the understanding of God.

The terrific forces of destruction which is physical warfare have demolished whole cities in a moment of time serve to show the vulnerable nature of all material things. Instead of attributing power to atomic force and fearing its effects, however, we should see that matter is merely a self-destructive counterfeit of true substance. The lesson to be learned is contained in Mary Baker Eddy's inspired words (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures p. 475), "Man is not matter; he is not made up of brain, blood and bones, and other material elements." Thus denying the age-old material concept of man, she goes on to define what man really is. She says, in part, "Man is spiritual and perfect; and because he is spiritual and perfect, he must be so understood in Christian Science." This statement agrees with that of Peter in his second epistle (11 Peter 3:11-13): "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversations and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

The events of current history point indubitably to the great need today for choosing which we shall serve, substance or matter, for these two are opposites. Christ Jesus truly said (Matthew 6:24), "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." — Christian Science Monitor.

There is no mean work, save that which is irreligious work, save that which is morally wrong; in every sphere of life the post of honor is the post of duty.—E. H. Chapin.

Reasons Why More Feed Grains Needed.

Delegates to the Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference held in Ottawa early in December, 1946, were advised by the report on grain, forage crops and feed that the need for cereals in Europe is not as pressing as it was in 1945-46 and the 1947 harvests should bring supplies within a reasonable measure of meeting requirements. The present world price for wheat provides an incentive for all-out production which can soon overtake demand. Replenishment of live stock is a slower process and the deficiencies in animal proteins will continue for some years to come. There is a growing demand for live stock products in the United Kingdom and continental Europe as well as in Canada and Canada's production program should be planned with this longer term point of view in mind.

At present there is not enough feed grain being produced to care for domestic needs and all the live stock products Canada has undertaken to ship to Britain and at the same time to build up necessary reserves. There is only one place in Canada where feed grain can be diverted quickly and that is in the Prairie Provinces on land which might otherwise be sown to wheat.

The Conference agreed that wheat acreage could not be considered alone but rather that total available crop acreage should be so planned as to provide adequate quantities of wheat for export for feed grains needed in the production of meats and dairy products, both for domestic needs and to meet as far as practicable the urgent requirements of Britain and other countries, and for more linseed flax to help meet the present world shortage of oils and fats.

Despite considerable reductions in live-stock numbers, particularly in hog numbers, Canada is finding it difficult to meet her commitments in bacon, cheese, and other live-stock products and this difficulty will continue unless adequate supplies of feed grains can be assured.

To make maximum supplies of wheat available for human consumption, other grains must be produced for feeding to live stock in Canada; otherwise, in course of time, the borrowers became lenders through deposits and certificates and the corporation had to seek outlets for funds further afield including the West.

The two trust companies whose organizations it is planned to merge have had a parallel history. The London & Western is slightly the older but was later in expanding into the national field. Its career has been the career of John S. Moore, now chairman of the board of directors who started as manager when the total staff was under a half dozen persons.

London is fortunate in numbering among its citizens a man of his wisdom and judgment. His long experience in the field in which he commands such respect is one of the assets which will be of great value to the combined organization. Of similar integrity and ability has been the management of the Canada Trust, for many years headed by Morley Aylesworth.

Heavy Duty Oil in Any Type Engine.

When the diesel motor was introduced it was found that ordinary mineral oil carbonized and gummed up pistons and rings. As a result of considerable research in which the Dominion Experimental Station, Swift Current, Sask., has had a part it was found that the addition of a metal soap helped to keep the motor clean. However, this oil could be used only in engines with ball bearings. Research was continued on this type of oil resulting in the recent introduction of heavy duty oils. These oils are now available and can be used in any type of engine and under extreme service conditions. They are being sold for tractors, trucks and automobiles, and are developed for heavy duty operating conditions and the viscosities of S. A. E. ratings are same as ordinary or regular oils as now sold.

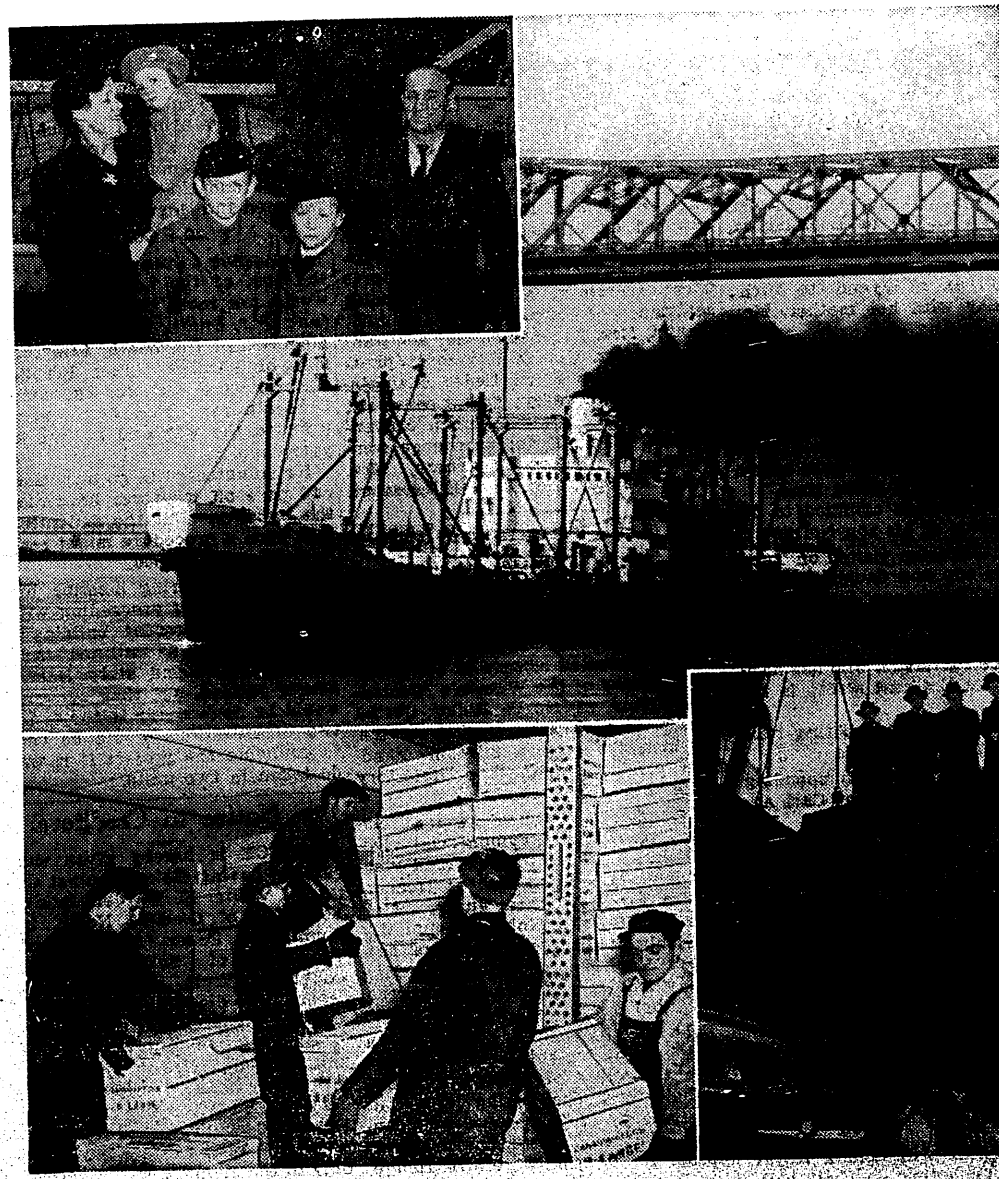

Heavy duty oils are now valuable under heavy load conditions. They keep the motor clean internally and as a general rule keep the engine free from sludge. They are recommended for engines where other oils are not giving satisfactory service.

In changing over to the type of heavy duty oil special precautions should be taken. As there are usually accumulations of sludge, gum and carbon, heavy duty oil will quickly become dark and the carbon becomes suspended in the oil. If the engine is very dirty the oil system may become blocked resulting in a burnt bearing.

The following system of change-over should be followed:

1. Fill with heavy duty oil operate 15 minutes and drain out.
2. Refill, operate "two hours and drain."
3. Refill operate 10 hours and drain.
4. Refill, change filter cartridge, and operate as recommended by instruction book for future oil change.

No other oil should be mixed with heavy duty oil.

Back on the seas again, the growing Canadian Beaver fleet of fast cargo ships carried some 200,000 tons of foodstuffs and other Canadian products to Britain during the Montreal shipping season. Above, the heavy-laden Beaverliner passes under Jacques Cartier Bridge bound for London on one of the 20 C.P.R.C. sailings during the summer. Inset at top shows the family of George Nicholls, formerly of London, England, writing on the Beaverburn to settle in Canada at Niagara Falls. Bottom left shows part of a large shipment of eggs being loaded on the Beaverlake. Picture at bottom right shows some small English cars arriving in Canada on the Beaverlake when she reached Montreal on her maiden trip.

atoes for Feeding of Stock Urged.

Recent demands for dairy, stock products, coupled with the fact that potatoes are a valuable source of food for livestock, have led to a report from the Ontario Department of Agriculture, who follow this feeding for favourable results in dairy cows, says Mr. Goodin, and reports from Denmark, where potatoes are used to great advantage. Reports from other European countries indicate that potatoes contain forty per cent of protein for hogs and in more than forty per cent of protein is annually fed to even in normal times.

Authorities claim that about 100 pounds of potatoes are replaced 100 pounds of grain or more than 3 or 4 pounds of oats are fed with each pound of potatoes will replace 100 pounds of grain. Cooked potatoes are about one-fourth the weight of raw potatoes when fed in the amounts problems of many potatoes might be very materially improved by the use of potatoes. This season as livestock farmers, the general grade of potatoes is poor quality potatoes. The public might be interested to know that the potatoes which would market only the products of their crops, time making use of all as livestock feed. In strict enforcement of marketing regulations in Ontario, the Farm Products Grades Act, the future demands for potatoes do not meet the requirements of Canada No. 1 grade are from the standpoint of nutrition, Mr. Goodin points children in England will soon be watching Canadian films as part of lessons. W. R. Speight, educationalist from Coventry, has been for many months in Ottawa with the National Film Board, adapting films for use in English

A Plea to All.

The bird life, more especially the pheasants and quail in the country, are on the verge of starvation. All are urged to feed our bird life until the ice and snow have melted and the birds can look out for themselves.

Edmondson-McCloskey.

Holy Name Church Essex, was the scene of a very quiet but lovely wedding, on Thursday, December 26th, when Rev. Fr. M. I. O'Neill united in marriage Bernard Edmondson, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Edmondson of Gesto, and Miss Mary Ann McCloskey, daughter of Mrs. Leo McCloskey and the late Mr. McCloskey.

The bride chose for her wedding a light blue suit wore black accessories and carried a small bouquet of red and white roses which after the ceremony
she placed on the altar of the Virgin Mary. Her only attendant was her sister Rita, of Detroit, who wore a beige suit, with black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Terrence Edmondson assisted his brother, while Mrs. B. Edmondson sang high mass at the service.

Following a short honeymoon the young couple will reside in Windsor.

Celebrate Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Webster, well known residents of Gosfield North Township, who live on No. 3 Highway, between North Ridge and Cottam, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Sunday, December 29th, by holding "open house" at their home,
in the afternoon and evening, after having been guests of honour of their family, at a dinner at the Beach Grove
Golf and Country Club, at noon.

They received many telegrams and phone calls, congratulatory messages, flowers and gifts, and in spite of the icy roads had a host of callers, among whom, from a distance, were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Pryce, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith and Perry Rolston, of Thamesville; Mr. and Mrs.
Ernest Webster, Miss Mame Webster,
Mrs. John Harper, and Mac McCutcheon, all of Florence; Mr. and Mrs.
Homer Gage, Mrs. Mary Bauer and Miss Mina Stadden, of Detroit, and Mrs. Keith Barber and Mary, of Georgetown.

Mr. and Mrs. Webster have had five children, Victoria, Bruce and Fred, of Windsor; Jean (Mrs. Keith Barber) of Georgetown; also a daughter Grace
(The late Mrs. Ennis Fox). They have eight grandchildren and one great grandchild. All were present except a grandchild, Miss Phyllis Fox, who is spending the winter in Florida.

Mrs. Webster was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Doyle McKenney, of Florence. Their marriage was celebrated by Rev. J. E. Moore, her cousin, and they were attended by Miss Helen Unsworth, of Florence, and Frank Gosnell, both of whom are still living, but were unable to be present for the occasion.

The Webster's have lived in their present home, which they built, for the past 25 years, and previous to that had lived in Chatham.

Mr. Webster is well known as a sportsman, never missing his annual trip North in the fall and for his love for music, he having had his own orchestra, which played at local dances and entertainments, for many years.
He is a charter member of the Cottam Rotary Club and, along with Mrs. Webster, a member of North Ridge United Church.

Thomas H. McConnell Passes.

Thomas H. McConnell passed away on December 20th, at Petersfield, Man., in his 74th year. Mr. McConnell was born at Omemee, Ontario, and came to Essex County over 50 years ago. He taught at S. S. 6, Maidstone, for a number of years.

In 1897 he was married to Annie Whitemute, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George A. Whitemute, and went to the West, where he spent most of his time in farming. Last year he retired and moved to Petersfield, Man. Just a year ago Mr. and Mrs.
McConnell spent three months visiting relatives and friends in Toronto,
Windsor and vicinity.

He survived by his widow, three sons and five daughters — Whitney, of Petersfield, Man.; Ross, of Win-dors; Lance, of Halifax, N.S.; Mrs.
Bertha Jeffery, of Teulon, Man.; Mrs.
Nellie Bidonsti and Mrs. Lillian Morgan, of Petersfield, Man.; and Miss Edna, of Dauphin, Man.; also a brother Edward, of Toronto, and a sister Mrs. Robert Irvine, of Saskatoon, Sask.

Elihu Wigle Stricken.

Elihu Wigle, aged 76, prominent in business in Windsor for over half a century, and well known throughout the county, died suddenly Friday evening of last week, as he was driving home, along Riverside Drive, in Win-dors, when stricken with a heart attack in front of the Ford powerhouse.
He was able to take his car out of gear and bring it to the curb, but by the time they were able to get him to East Windsor Hospital, a short distance away, he was dead.

Retired 10 years.
Mr. Wigle was driving alone at the time, at about 5 p.m., heading for his home, 1304 Riverside Drive, Riverside.
For nearly 20 years Mr. Wigle operated the Wigle Finance, with offices on Pitt street east, but he had retired ten years ago and after that devoted himself to his own business interests exclusively, with an office on Dufferin street.

Mr. Wigle was born at Leamington, a son of John Wigle. His son John H. Wigle, was mayor of the former city of East Windsor before amalgamation.

As a young man, Mr. Wigle began working with the late Lewis "Uncle Lew" Wigle, in his general store at Leamington. Later he had a farm outside Leamington and then entered business on his own, operating the old Downing House at Leamington.

In 1895 he moved to Windsor and with a brother took over the old International Hotel, on the southwest corner of Ouellette avenue and Sandwich street.

In 1894 he married Alice Burkholder, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs.
Jacob Burkholder, of Leamington.
Surviving besides his widow are his son, John, at the Riverside home;
two grandchildren, John and Mrs.
Ross Mingay; and one sister, Mrs.
Jessie Morse, of Leamington.

Funeral services were held from the Riverside drive home on Monday.

Storm Damage.

The rain and sleet storm of Wednesday and Thursday of last week, was the worst storm in recent history of the county. All four of the local township municipal telephone systems were so badly wrecked that some farmers may not have phone service for weeks. The Gosfield North, Maidstone and Sandwich South and Rochester systems, while badly damaged to the extent of many thousands of dollars, will no doubt be repaired shortly, if no further damage from weather is experienced, however, the Colchester North system is reported beyond repair, and with no surplus to build a new system, if material were available, it looks as though the people of Colchester will be without telephone service for months to come.

bers of the 1946 Council, who were re-elected.

each committee to work on their budget requirement for 1947, Council adjournd, to meet next Monday, January 13th, to go over a budget for 1947.

Legion Officers Installed.

At a special general meeting, called Monday night, the local Legion Branch installed their newly-elected officers for 1947.

The meeting opened with a short pause in remembrance of comrades who paid the supreme sacrifice. After a short business meeting the following officers were installed: President, Stan Plant; 1st vice-president, George McQuarrie; 2nd vice-president, Horace Clements; secretary, R. J. O'Hara; treasurer, A. Shipway; chaplain, Rev.
J. Tully; executive, Wm. Wass; Duncan McPherson, Murray Ross, Earl Pulley-blank, George Myles.

Comrade Dakin, zone commander of Windsor district No. 1A, was the installing officer, and was ably assisted by Louis Laforet, past zone commander of Windsor district.

Following the installation ceremonies, a short entertainment was presented by Norman Dawson, of Leamington, a talented musician and sleight-of-hand artist, who kept his audience mystified with his many sleight-of-hand tricks.

Jim McLeod, of the Service Bureau,
Windsor, gave a few brief remarks, in which he paid high tribute to the local branch for their help in the past year.

Sugar Ration Outlook Good.

Informed sources said Monday the prospects for a higher sugar ration for Canadians in 1947 "looked good" but added that it would depend largely on the progress of crops on international allocation.

They added that if, as reported from Washington recently, the United States got an increase of five pounds per person per year this April it was likely that Canadians would get a similar allotment as Canada, the United States and Britain share equally in the world supply.

The individual allotment in the three countries works out to about 71 pounds a year including sugar for all purposes. Excluding sugar for industrial and similar purposes, the individual ration works out to about 39 pounds. The latter total includes ration coupons for preserves and canning sugar.

These sources said that if the European crop of sugar beets improved this year and progress was made in reallocating Philippine sugar fields devastated by the Japanese it was possible that an increase would be made

Production Requirements for 1947.

Production objectives for the various types of tobacco in 1947 were approved by the recently held Dominion-Provincial Conference on Agriculture. In the establishment of these objectives consideration was given to such factors as the present supply position of old leaf stocks, the current season's production, as well as the anticipated domestic and export demand of leaf during the next year. Inasmuch as some attempt should be made to provide domestic manufacturers with an opportunity to replenish, in part, stocks of leaf which have been seriously depleted during the war years some increase in production for most of the types was recommended for the purpose of meeting the foregoing conditions and, at the same time, providing a quantity to meet the demands for the export market, says Dr. N. A. MacLachlan, Tobacco Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

During the 1946 season approximately 96,000 acres were planted to the cured production in Canada. An increase of 6 per cent in acreage is recommended for 1947. The planted acreage of burley tobacco for the 1946 season was estimated at 11,000. As a result of early floods approximately 4,000 acres were harvested. A 7 per cent increase over the planted burley acreage of 1946 is recommended for 1947. Owing to the fact that dark tobacco is grown under contract arrangement between buyer and grower the Conference did not feel justified in recommending any increase in the production of this type of leaf. With respect to cigar tobacco the supply of old leaf stocks is presently at such a low level that an increase in the planted acreage of 10 per cent for 1947 was advocated.

All the foregoing recommendations were calculated on a projected production, based on average yields, for the purpose of meeting minimum requirements throughout the following year. Growers are, consequently, advised to lose no time in getting essential supplies and materials so that the program as outlined may be carried through.

Transparent Automobile Tops

A Detroit firm is bringing out a full-vision plastic top for convertible cars. The Financial Post reports. The top is formed in one piece of 1/4-inch Plexiglass and can be made clear or in transparent shades of red, blue or green.

Food Combinations.

Pointing out that not even milk is a perfect, self-sufficient food, nutritionists urge inclusion of all the nutritional factors in diet, by combining such edibles as milk, fruit, vegetables, cereals, bread, meat or fish, so that a meal will provide all the essentials to maintenance of health.

Sugar Saving.

It has been a good year in the orchard and garden. Now the ground is snow-covered and the sleeping trees make a lacy pattern against the cold blue sky. There are constant reminders of the warmth and plenty of summer in the cellars and store rooms of the homes across the country.

Store rooms are well filled with canned fruits and vegetables and in the cellar, bins of root vegetables and barrels of apples are ready for winter menus.

For the first time in three years the homemaker need not hesitate in planning desserts for apples can be used in so many ways. There may appear to be a catch in the situation. Apples do require some sugar but the home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture have devised recipes for dishes which taste good and use a minimum amount of sugar. None of the desserts require more than 1/2 cup of sugar for six servings. This includes a number of excellent apple recipes.

The bulletin called "SUGAR SAVING" has been revised and may be obtained free of charge from the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Here are some of the apple desserts.

GINGER APPLE UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE.

3 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup brown sugar
3 apples
1/2 cup shortening
3 tablespoons white sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup molasses
1 cup pastry flour OR
1 cup less 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ginger
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup boiling water
Melt the 3 tablespoons butter in baking dish. Add brown sugar and cook together for 2 or 3 minutes. Pare and core apples. Cut each apple in half to make two thick rings. Arrange rings of apples in butter and sugar mixture. Cream shortening and sugar together. Add well-beaten egg and molasses. Beat thoroughly. Stir dry ingredients and add to mixture. Lastly add boiling water, mixing quickly. Pour over apples in baking dish and bake in a moderately slow oven, 325 F., approximately 40 minutes or until done. Six servings.

BUTTERSCOTCH APPLE PIE.

1/2 cup brown sugar
5 to 8 medium apples
3 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons shortening (half at bottom)
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 deep uncooked 9-inch pie shell
Sprinkle the 1/2 cup brown sugar over the bottom of the uncooked pie shell. Peel apples and slice thinly, fill the pie shell, heaping apples slightly in the centre. Cream the 3 tablespoons brown sugar with the shortening and the flour until well blended. Crumble the mixture over the top of the apples. Pour the milk into the pie and bake in a hot oven, 400 F., until top is brown and apples are tender, about 45 minutes. Cool and serve. Makes 1 deep 9-inch pie.

SPICED FARINA PUDDING.

1/2 cup farina
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 tablespoon corn starch
4 cups milk
1 cup apples, sliced in 1/4-inch pieces
Mix farina, sugar, salt, cinnamon, and cornstarch. Add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens, about 5 minutes. Place over hot water. Beat well with rotary egg beater. Add apple and continue cooking 30 minutes, uncovered, stirring gently 2 or 3 times during cooking. Serve hot or cold with top milk or cream. The pudding is quite firm when cold. Six servings.

Must Have Cheaper Houses.

Today the No. 1 job is to build houses, to put roofs over the heads of veterans and others in desperate need, observes The Financial Post, but soon the big problem will be to sell houses at the price being asked.

"Back in 1938 a reasonable prudent family could on a $3,000-a-year salary could afford to pay around $7,500 for a home." The Post states editorially. "And in 1938 not only could he get a very satisfactory new, six-room home in the average city for this figure, but he could, on an income of $3,000 a year, hope to have all mortgages paid off in about 25 years."

"The kind of comfortable house one could purchase readily for $7,500 in 1938 will cost anywhere from $12,000 up today — if it can be found at all. Moreover, at the same time the income tax, which was hardly a factor to be considered on smaller salaries before the war, now bites a big chunk out of every pay cheque. For a man with two children at current tax rates, the tax takes $280 for his $3,000 salary. This means he can only safely pay as high as $6,800 for his new home now. In short, he faces a double squeeze: he can't afford to pay as much, but he is asked to pay double."

Agriculture a Risky Business.

It is estimated that Canadian farmers lose over $22 million annually from weeds and that the sawfly has cost western farmers around $30 million yearly in wheat losses. In Saskatchewan alone, farmers lose over $2 million a year from hail.

These are some of the reasons why farming is a risky business. No matter what kind of farming you do you face risks of weather, pests and disease in addition to the hazards of fire and fluctuating prices that confront all businesses more or less.

Some of the farmer's risks can be anticipated, and thus beaten in advance — for instance, by the spraying of fruit trees. About 50 per cent of our apples would be wormy if the trees were not sprayed. Special varieties of wheat have been bred and are now used to resist the wheat hazards of frost, rust and wheat stem sawfly.

Contagious diseases of animals are controlled by the Health of Animals Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. In animal disease control Canada leads the world. Because of careful inspection and government regulation foot-and-mouth disease is practically unknown in Canada. Anthrax and glanders are rare. Hog cholera outbreaks occur sometimes but are quickly brought under control. Nearly 3,000 herds are under the supervision of the Health of Animals Division for the control of Bang's Disease. Bovine tuberculosis is well on the way to eradication. Under the three plans of the Health of Animals Division there are 34,836 supervised herds, 8,332 fully accredited herds, and 300 accredited areas in Canada that are free of T. B. cattle.

Crop insurance and hail insurance are badly needed in the prairie provinces where frost, wind, hail and drought are the great enemies of the farmer. Under the Prairie Farm Assistance Act, the Dominion Government sponsors a voluntary co-operative hail insurance plan under the Alberta Hail Insurance Board.

The subject "Agriculture is a Risky Business," will be discussed in National Farm Radio Forum on Monday, January 6th, 1947.

Commodity Agreements and Cartels.

During the war Canadians Farmers got used to the certainty of markets for their products and stabilized prices. This hitherto unfamiliar sense of security was brought about by government food contracts and price control. Now that the war is over, is the sale of farm products to return to the open market and the gamble of fluctuating prices?

The Canadian Federation of Agriculture and many of its member bodies (for example the Wheat Pool) have come out in favour of multilateral commodity agreements as the best guarantee of stabilized markets and prices for the farmer. Multilateral commodity agreements mean agreements between governments of several countries for the sale of farm products. At present an International Wheat Agreement between thirteen countries, including Canada, is being negotiated at Washington. This is the first and only multilateral commodity agreement to be negotiated since the war. Previously there were inter-governmental agreements in wheat, coffee, sugar, tea, and sawn lumber.

Although Canada is not a party to a multilateral agreement, we are a party to several bilateral contracts with Great Britain. We have contracts extending into the future anywhere from one to four years in beef, bacon, eggs, and wheat, to mention a few. The Wheat Agreement signed in 1946 is the largest deal of its kind in history. It is a contract for the sale of 600 million bushels of wheat by Canada to the United Kingdom over a period of four years at a fixed price of $1.55 a bushel the first two years and a minimum price of $1.25 and $1.00 a bushel, respectively, the third and fourth years.

In signing such contracts are governments doing the same thing, in effect, as manufacturers have done for years through combines and cartels? The main difference would seem to be that whereas cartels are drawn up for the benefit of manufacturers alone, commodity agreements should work to the advantage of consumers as well as producers.

The subject of "Commodity Agreements and Cartels" will be threshed out in National Farm Radio Forum on January 20th, 1947.

Milk Sales Drop.

The effect of the removal of the producers' subsidy on milk used for fluid consumption on October 1st, 1946, can now be seen as a result of the published figures of fluid sales in Canada. In September, 1946, sales of fluid milk were 6 per cent higher than in the corresponding month of 1945, while October sales showed a 3 per cent decrease from October, 1945. This decrease in fluid milk sales, says the Current Review of Agricultural Statistics, in Canada, resulted in more milk being available for manufacturing purposes.

Raw Vegetables.

Need for inclusion of vegetables preferably raw in the winter diet, is the subject of comment among Ottawa health authorities. They declare that a side-salad, for instance, is both healthful and palatable, and that vegetables are essential to diet, in the winter as well as at other seasons.

Inquest on a Rat — and the Empire.

By Lewis Milligan.

On Thursday, May 16th, 1946, I sat in the Strangers' Gallery of the British House of Commons and listened to a debate on the death of a rat. No, it was not a bit of burlesque; it was a serious and businesslike discussion arising out of the following question put to the Home Secretary: "Whether, in consideration of the campaign for rat extermination, he (the Home Secretary) will remit the sentence of 14 days hard labour, passed on Christopher Lambrianou, a Cypriot, for killing a rat by pouring boiling water over the cage."

In reply to this question, Home Secretary Ede said: "I understand that this man pleaded guilty to causing unnecessary suffering to the rat. I have made inquiries, but can find no ground for recommending any remission of the sentence which the magistrate thought it right to impose."

Mr. Follick, who put the question, asked the Home Secretary if he was aware that in many parts of the country rats caught in cages were destroyed by pouring boiling water over them, and he added: "As a result of enquiries, I find no humane way of killing rats. As for the statement made by the magistrate that rats should be treated the same as human beings, if that were so, rats would no longer be destroyed."

This rather staid the Home Secretary. He said the question of the destruction of rats did not come under his Department, anyway. He thought, however, that while there may be no humane way of killing rats, some ways were more humane than others, and that "the way used by this person was undoubtedly most inhumane."

To which a medical member (Dr. Morgan) replied, in dignified parliamentary tone: "Having regard to the disease spreading propensities of these destructive rodents, would right hon. Friend not consider that this poor offender, as a Colonial, though that in this country a rat was a rat, and not a biological ancestor of the human species?"

The Home Secretary did not reply, and presumably the "Colonial" spent his 14 days in the "cage" meditating upon the apparent humane feelings of the British Islanders toward rats.

As I sat there in the Strangers' Gallery listening to this almost solemn inquest on the death of a rat by the Mother of Parliaments, in walked Churchill Eden and Winston Churchill and took their seats directly opposite to me. Mr. Eden sat with his arms folded and head thrown back. A handsome English gentleman, I would say that he was not conscious of his good looks and of the presence of strangers in the gallery. Mr. Churchill, on the contrary, sat with his chin on his chest and a meditative frown on his brow, apparently oblivious to his surroundings. He did look up once at the sound of the word "rat," but withdrew at once onto his island of thought, for he was ruminating upon a much larger question.

While a minister of the Labor Government was concerned over the death of a rat, the great wartime Prime Minister was worrying over the possible demise of the British Empire. The rodent question having been disposed of, Mr. Churchill rose to his feet and, addressing the Speaker, said, "May I ask the right hon. Gentleman whether he will arrange for a debate on Egypt in view of what took place last week?"

The right hon. Gentleman was Arthur Greenwood, Leader of the House, and he replied that there was more urgent business on the agenda, and moreover, the Foreign Secretary was away in Paris. Mr. Churchill said he thought the matter of the proposed evacuation of Egypt was urgent business in view of the "serious and dark issues arising out of such a decision."

Mr. Greenwood insisted that the matter could not be discussed in the absence of Mr. Bevin. Mr. Churchill said he was "astounded" at such a statement. "Is not the Foreign Secretary," he said, "very likely coming back tomorrow? Is there not a telephone to Paris — a secret telephone?"

This annoyed Mr. Greenwood, and he accused Mr. Churchill of "abusing the rules of the House." What do you mean? snapped back Churchill, angrily. "In what way did I abuse the rules of the house?"

Meanwhile Prime Minister Atlee had taken his seat, and he later introduced the proposed new Constitution for India, which he read at length. He read it in a matter-of-fact, routine manner, like a lawyer reading a will to the assembled members of a family after a funeral. Beside me in the Gallery were several Indians who listened to the reading with intense interest. Mr. Eden calmly surveyed the lofty roof-trees of the chamber, while Mr. Churchill sat brooding on the import of the document, and probably recalling what he had said during the war, that he had no intention of "prejudging over the liquidation of the Empire."

When to Eat.

Meals at any old hour just won't do, declare health authorities in Ottawa. It's not only what but when you eat that counts. The doctors say that meals should be at convenient and reasonable hours. The digestive tract functions better, like other parts of the body, if placed on a regular schedule.

VICTORY

A PR

FRIDAY, JANUARY 10, 1947.

World Sugar Production Rises This Year.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates world production of beet and cane sugar for season 1946-47 will be 30 million short tons (raw value) or 12 percent more than the 26.7 million in 1945-46. This estimate is 14 per cent less than the pre-war average (1935-9) of 34.7 million tons. Experts point out that even full pre-war production would fall short of world needs because of increased population.

The report credits larger crops in Europe, United States and West Indies for the increase over last year. Production in North and Central America and the West Indies is expected to total 10.8 million tons—1.5 million more than last year and 2.1 million in excess of the 1935-9 average. Output in the United States for both beet and cane sugar is set at 2.2 million tons compared with 1.8 million in 1945-6. The increase this season is all in beet sugar.

South America's production, indicated at 2.8 million tons, is about 1 per cent larger than last year and 16 per cent more than the pre-war average. The report estimates Europe's production as a whole at 7.4 million tons compared with the wartime low of 5.5 million last year and the 1935-9 average of 10.4 million tons. Excepting Spain's small output of cane sugar this is all beet sugar.

African production will be about 1.3 million tons, 12 percent more than last year. In Asia, estimates of 7 million tons in 1946-7 were about equal to last year but 3.8 million below 1935-9.

India and China will produce about the same as pre-war but little recovery is expected in Formosa, Philippines and Java formerly large sugar exporters. These three important areas are not expected to have enough sugar for their own use.

Spare the Snowy Owl.

One of the most beautiful of all Canadian birds is the Snowy Owl, which periodically invades agricultural Canada from its Arctic breeding-grounds.

In summer, these owls subsist largely on Lemmings, small Arctic rodents. The Lemmings fluctuate in numbers from year to year and seem to be cyclic, reaching population "peaks" about every fourth winter.

With the "peaks" of the Lemmings, the Snowy Owls desert their Arctic home and migrate down into southern Canada and the northern United States, spending the winter in the marshes, along the shores, and in the farming country.

During some flights, particularly last winter, large numbers of these big predators spread themselves over the settled lands of Canada and the northern United States. Many were shot by thoughtless persons, forgetting, or not knowing that an examination of their food in southern Ontario, made a Royal Ontario Museum last winter, revealed it to be 98 per cent rats and mice, mostly among the worst enemies with which the farmer has to contend. Although powerful enough to carry off poultry and ducks, the Snowy Owl seldom exhibit the necessary inclination or agility to go after that type of food.

A flight of minor proportions (compared with the heavy influx last year) has again reached southern Canada, and farmers and sportsmen would do themselves a favour by allowing the Snowy Owls to spend the winter with us unmolested, for they constitute one of the best checks we have on the undue increase of the hated "field mouse."

In this world, it is not what we take up, but what we give up, that makes us rich.—H. W. Beecher.

EASTERN RAIL CHIEFS.

Conservative Party Makes Appointment.

Hon. John Bracken, leader of the Progressive-Conservative Party, this week announced the appointment of C. V. Charters, of Brampton, as Director of Public Relations for the Progressive Conservative Party. Mr. Charters will assume his duties at Ottawa at once.

Geoffrey Hewelcke, who has been editor of the party newspaper Public Opinion for the past few months, will be associated with Mr. Charters in public-relation work and will remain as editor of Public Opinion.

Mr. Charters is probably one of the best known newspapermen in Canada. He is certainly known to every weekly newspaper editor in this country because, until September of last year, he was managing director of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association.

He was associated with this organization for over 15 years as a director and for the last 11½ years was managing director.

During this latter period he built up membership from 237 to 611; raised the income of the association from $3,058 to $13,322 annually, and made hundreds of new friends for himself while he raised the prestige of the organization.

Printer and publisher recently stated that the better newspapers and the better printing in Canada's weekly newspapers in the past few years are largely attributed to his ceaseless efforts to help and improve the weekly press of this country.

Mr. Charters was born in Brampton, Ont., in January 1892, the son of the late Sam Charters, publisher of the Brampton Conservator. He was educated in Brampton public and high schools and at the age of 14 went to work as a "printer's devil" in his father's plant. He became secretary and manager of the Charters Publishing Co. Ltd., when it was incorporated in 1919 and president when his father died three years ago. He retired from the C.W.N.A. intending to take a more active part in his own business.

Besides his association with the C.W.N.A. he has been honoured by the Newspaper Association Managers of America whose head he was during the past year.

While Canada was at war, and while his two sons served overseas, he was active not only in community war work, but on the Canadian Publishers' War Finance Committee which had charge of all advertising and publishing for the Victory Loans.

For three years he was executive assistant to the Printing and Publishing Administrator of the W.P.T.B. In 1942 he represented the Canadian Weekly Press in a tour overseas. He is an Anglican; a past president of the Lions' Service Club, a member of the Advertising and Sales Club, Toronto.

In politics Mr. Charters has always been a Conservative, and a supporter of Peel County's two sitting members—Gordon Graydon and Hon. T. L. Kennedy. His father represented Peel in the Ontario Legislature from 1908 to 1913, when he retired. In 1917 he was chosen as Union Government candidate and represented his constituency in the House of Commons from that year until 1935, when he retired. He was Conservative Whip under Hon. Arthur Meighen and later under Hon. R. B. Bennett.

To his new post Mr. Charters will bring not only a great newspaper and organizing background, but a keen interest in and knowledge of politics.

Need More Feed Grains.

At the present time there is not enough feed grain produced in Canada to meet the domestic demands and maintain the production of livestock products in Canada has undertaken to ship to Britain and at the same time build up necessary reserves. The one part of Canada where acreage can be diverted quickly and feed grains produced in quantity is the Prairie Provinces on land which might otherwise be sown to wheat, so the report to the 1946 Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference on grain, forage crops and feed, disclosed.

If any speak ill of thee, fly home to thy own conscience and examine thine heart. If thou art guilty, it is a just correction; if not guilty, it is a fair instruction.—George Herbert.

2-4-D as a Weed Killer on Lawns.

Anyone who has spent tedious hours removing dandelions with a knife from the lawn will doubtless be interested to know that 2-4-D is very effective in controlling broadleaved weeds on established and even newly seeded lawns. Tests carried out at the Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, in 1946, have shown that 2-4-D will not damage the grass and clover seriously provided the following simple instructions are carried out.

2-4-D powder or liquid diluted in water can be applied at the rate recommended by the manufacturer to both established and newly seeded lawns. The solution should be applied either by means of a three gallon pressure sprayer or a common watering can. Both methods are effective, but the watering can is suggested for small lawns as the fine mist of 2-4-D created by the pressure sprayer will damage flowers and shrubs unless applied on a very still day. For best results the application should be made when the temperature is between 60 and 70 degrees F., with prospects of fair weather to follow for at least 48 hours.

In determining the effectiveness of 2-4-D on an established lawn it was found at the Experimental Station at Harrow that one application made during the first week in April when the dandelions were growing rapidly was sufficient to kill all broadleaved weeds including plantain within a period of three weeks. In order to prevent the reseedling of these weeds the lawn should be fertilized annually in very early spring to encourage the growth of grass.

A newly seeded lawn presents a slightly different problem and the use of 2-4-D is not advised until the grass has become firmly established. An application of 2-4-D was made during the last week in May to a lawn seeded in the previous April and a very remarkable control of pigweed and lambs quarters was obtained without causing any noticeable damage to the new grass and clover. Much tiresome weeding was avoided and a fine stand of grass was eventually obtained.

Milk Production Down in 1946

Production of milk in Canada in 1946 decreased about 4 per cent from the peak years of 1943-45 and totalled slightly more than 16,900 million pounds. The decline in production from 1946 was general in all parts of Canada but was most marked in Ontario. The decrease in the overall production of milk together with the diversion of milk to the fluid trade had a serious effect on creamery butter and cheddar cheese production during the year. Dairy butter production and milk consumed on the farm and fed to live stock was slightly higher in 1946 than in 1945. Milk available for concentrating purposes in 1946 was less than the previous year.

During 1946 several changes occurred in government policy which had an effect on the whole dairy industry in Canada. Early in the year the ceiling price on creamery butter was increased by 4 cents a pound and this resulted in some shift from cheese to butter in parts of Canada where combined factories were in operation.

In May, 1946, the Dominion Government announced that the consumer subsidy of 2 cents per quart on fluid milk would be discontinued after May 31st, 1946, and the producer subsidy of 35 or 55 cents per 100 pounds would not be paid after September 30. At the same time it was also announced that the control of retail fluid milk prices was being returned to the Provincial Control Agencies on June 1st. In effect, these changes meant that the consumer price increased 2 cents per quart in June and another 1½ cents in October. Most provincial boards allowed an increase in returns to producers in October over and above the producer subsidy to compensate for increased production costs. While the 2 cents per quart increase in June did not appreciably check the upward trend of sales, the price increase in October did have an effect on the trend of fluid sales.

The producers' subsidy on milk used for concentration purposes was also discontinued at the end of September, 1946, but corresponding increases were allowed in the ceiling prices of the various concentrated milk products.

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

Ten year old David Langlois, crippled since childhood, realized an ambition recently when as a Wolf Cub he "marched" in a Scout parade in his wheelchair. It was the annual parade of the London, Ont. Boy Scouts in which 2,000 participated.

Assist in Clean-up Drive.

Boy Scouts and Girl Guides of Halifax, undertook to assist in the city's annual Spring Clean-Up campaign by undertaking this work for those who because of illness or physical inability could not take care of this work themselves.

"Agency for World Peace."

Fifty Boy Scout Patrol Leaders, representing 14 Saskatchewan Troops at a recent Scout Parliament, unanimously passed a bill calling on the United Nations to "officially proclaim the Boy Scout Movement as an agency for world peace, and to declare that the banishing of the Movement by any nation be considered an unfriendly act."

Scouts Save Montreal Man.

Samuel Petroff, 59 year old Montreal man, owes his life to the action of two Campbellford, Ont. Boy Scouts. Falling into the Trent Canal at Campbellford Petroff got into difficulties. Murray Locke and Bobby Bennett, two local Boy Scouts, piloted a log to the drowning man and brought him safely to shore, where Hydro employees administered artificial respiration before removing the man to the hospital.

In South America.

John A. Stiles, retiring Chief Executive Commissioner of the Boy Scouts' Association is in Bogota, Colombia, in South America attending the Inter-American Scout Conference. Mr. Stiles was recently honoured with the degree, Doctor of Science, by the University of New Brunswick where he was Professor of Civil Engineering and Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science before coming to the Boy Scouts 25 years ago.

International Scouting Increases

Increasing travel facilities between Great Britain and the continent will make it possible for hundreds of Boy Scouts from European countries to camp with British Scouts this summer. North of England Scouts are planning to entertain 120 European Scouts in the Lake District, Scottish Scouts are to play host to a similar number from liberated countries, and 300 British Scouts are to attend an International Camp at Granso, the national Scout camping grounds in Sweden. British Scouts will also attend camps in Norway and Denmark.

Blowing Up the Balloon.

By Lewis Milligan.

The other day I was watching a youngster blowing up a toy balloon. He wanted to see how big he could make it, and at every blow he could hold it at arm's length and admire his accomplishment. The bigger it grew, the more he liked it, and in his delight he called upon his companions to "look." Instantly the balloon disappeared like a soap bubble into thin air, and the expression on the youngster's face can be better imagined than described.

We have been perpetually warned in recent years of the danger of inflation, and it is doubtful if one in twenty persons really understands what inflation means. The youngster did not realize the danger of losing his balloon; he probably thought he could keep on inflating it indefinitely, or that it would come to a point beyond which his blowing power could not expand it, but that it would stay right there and he would still have his big balloon. It would seem that many people are no wiser than the youngster, and that they believe they can keep on inflating the currency balloon by means of higher and higher wages without affecting its purchasing power—much less of risking its complete collapse.

Money, of course, is a sort of elastic commodity; it can be expanded or deflated within reasonable limits without any very serious danger to the economy and the flow of trade. But there is danger in both directions, and more particularly in over-expansion, because in that case the deflation is sudden and complete. Nobody wants that to happen; at least, nobody who wants to preserve a balanced national economy. But there are those in our midst who don't think our national economy or anything else about our democratic system are likely to be established, or any other system, and in order to do this they must first bring about a collapse—they must blow up the balloon until it bursts. They have been blowing up the wage balloon of late and calling upon the workers to admire their achievement.

What is perhaps an extreme example of this distortion of wages is cited by The Pacific Grove (Calif.) Tribune in an editorial entitled "No More Gooses." The Tribune says that if "looks as if someone was trying to sabotage the American Labor Movement." The Typographical Union has recently been affiliated with the C. I. O. "With this new association," says the Tribune, "appeared the same greed for money which on the part of the employers a hundred years ago had originally caused its formation. Printers in Chicago today get about $2 an hour. But printers are in demand now; so the C. I. O. sets a higher price on printers with the following demands: Only 27½ hours a week (5½ hours each day); $3.02 per hour (straight time); $6.01 per hour overtime; $9.06 per hour for each hour of overtime exceeding 10½ hours; $9.06 per hour on holidays; four weeks vacation and two weeks' more sick leave at full wages.

"To the rank and file union printer this looks like a pretty good way to make money, and it looks as if the C. I. O. is bigger and stronger than 99% of the employers; so 'who can stop us?'"

If these figures were not quoted by a reliable newspaper, one would be inclined to doubt their accuracy. The question arises: Who is going to pay?

"My Week."

By R. J. Deachman.

I am little interested in politics, deeply interested in economics. I like to see a case clearly stated. I detest exaggerations, misrepresentations and a lack of clear thinking, which one sometimes finds in publications usually considered rational in the presentation of their point of view.

In the "New Republic" a few years ago I read this item: "One highly concentrated industry, agricultural implements, reduced its payrolls by 84% and its whole prices by 14%."

This was a reference to the year 1929, the peak of the bottom of the depression. Please note that they were discussing payrolls, that is the total amount of salaries and wages paid and not the rate of wages. The "New Republic" is, of course, an American publication and dealing with American figures, but similar conditions existed in Canada. In 1929 total production of agricultural implements in this country amounted to $10,650,000, payrolls were $11,775,000, in 1933 production stood at $5,326,000, payrolls at $3,047,000. Wages and salaries in 1929 represented 57% of the value of the product, in 1933 57%.

Now what is wrong with this story? I think I can put it so clearly that any human being even if he were not fairly familiar with ordinary business would understand it. Suppose a man had a 100-acre tract of wheat and he is going to give the task of combining that wheat to some one else. The price would be fixed at, say, $100 per acre. Now let us suppose that a few heavy duty hail storms has smashed five hundred acres of that crop, the bill for the job will be cut in two, the labor employed on that particular farm on this job will be cut in two. Is the farmer to hand out $50 for 100 acres of wheat?

The same thing happened in agricultural implements. 1929 was a boom year, employment in the production of agricultural implements was high. 1933 was a year of depression, farmers were not buying. The amount of wages paid out in the manufacture of agricultural implements fell with the decline in demand. Production in 1933 was one-eighth of the 1929 level.

We are now past Christmas. I should not be hard on the people who wrote that story, they would not understand. The men who wrote it live in New York. That city knows little of what is happening in Iowa, Nebraska or Western Canada. We ought to forgive them, they know not what they write.

The bloated wage bill? Certainly not the employer. "Since most small employers don't make $120 a week," says the Tribune, "the increase could not possibly come from their pockets, but would obviously have to be paid by the public in the form of higher printing costs." Naturally, the public would have to curtail drastically its use of printing and in many instances might cut it out altogether, and the balloon would burst. Apply the same process of boosted wages to all trades and you have universal inflation—and collapse.

Paul and John had a clear apprehension that, as mortal man achieves no worldly honours except by sacrifice, so he must gain heavenly riches by forsaking all worldliness.—Mary Baker Eddy.

Burley Varieties in Tobacco Production.

The production of burley tobacco essentially rests on the dollar return to the grower and on adaptability of the leaf to meet the manufacturer's requirements, says R. J. Haslam, Dominion Experimental Station, Harrow, Ont. In Southwestern Ontario the production of burley represents a process of evolution in which varieties have played a dominant part with each successive change. New and better varieties have broadened the limits of the use of burley tobacco from a natural declining trade in chewing and plug tobaccos to a steadily increasing volume now going into mild pipe mixtures with cigarettes.

Experimental work in connection with breeding and selection conducted by the Dominion Experimental Farms Service has played a definite part in the development of new and better varieties of burley. At the Experimental Station Harrow, Ontario, a large number of strains and varieties have been compared each year for quality, yield, maturity, disease resistance and adaptability. The varieties available for distribution fall into three classes namely: (1) cigarette; (2) intermediate; (3) wrapper. In the cigarette class are Harrow Velvet, Harrow and Gay's Yellow. To this class also may be added two new strains which appear promising namely the Harmony and a cross between Harmony's Special and Gay's Velvet developed at the Experimental Station Harrow.

Both these strains mature moderately early are resistant to black rot, and are a high percentage of bright leaf, but yield satisfactorily.

The intermediate class includes Harrow Broadleaf, Harrow's Special, Kentucky 16 and two new Kentucky strains, Kentucky 19 and Kentucky 41A. The Kentucky strains are heavy yielding and resistant to black rot, but are definitely inclined to be red in color and coarse in texture. They are also later maturing than the standard varieties in the heavy leaf varieties include Green intermediate class. The wrapper or heavy leaf varieties include Green Briar, Kelley and Station Standup.

As in the case of other highly specialized farm crops, varieties have their special merits. They also demonstrate certain weaknesses. None is perfect. The season, soil fertility, fertilization, crop rotation and cultural practice each has its influence in the results that may be obtained with any variety.

Ventilation.

Suggestion that school children be taught the value of adequate ventilation in the classroom, is put forward by the Department of National Health and Welfare. The department commends those school authorities who train children in reading thermometers and barometers, and in adjusting windows to provide air without draughts. It is suggested that such instruction be continued in the home.

Your Morning Smile.

Policeman—Did you get the number of that car that knocked you down, madam?

Madam—No, but the husky that was driving it wore a three-piece tweed suit lined with red Canton crepe, and she had on a periwinkle hat, trimmed with artificial cherries.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP is a lot of little things

WARNING—ICE UNSAFE

Ice is never safe! You don't have to fall through a frozen pond. You can fall on it. By all means heed the "Danger—Thin Ice" sign on one of Nature's own rinks—but watch your skate on a municipal rink and your step on city streets. Hospital emergency clinics bear witness, in broken bones and bruised bodies to the treachery of ice. "Safety First", besides being a rule of survival, is a demand of "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

"Health Within — Beauty Without" is a good motto. New Year resolutions should include something pertaining to our physical well-being. And that "Something" is food. The protective substances which encourage normal growth and optimum health are found in abundance in Canadian foods.

Science has proved that growth and fitness of the human body depends to a large extent on the food that it consumes. The ability to do good work cheerfully; the pep and energy for all these are dividends which come from a wise choice of foods to make up our three meals a day.

The protective substance in food are the ones which should command the greatest share of attention. They include high quality proteins, minerals and vitamins which contribute to strong bones, straight limbs, firm white teeth, sparkling eyes and smooth complexion. Properly cooked food increases resistance to colds and other ailments by maintaining efficiency and vigour for good work — and, most important, buoyant health.

Enough of the right kind of food is the concern of those responsible for meals. This emphasis on quality has been brought about by a knowledge of nutrition. Five groups of foods have been selected to form a complete daily meal plan. May we review these easy-to-remember daily servings.

1. Serve 1 cup of milk per child and 2 cups per adult, and cheese — to provide protein for body building and repair, calcium for strong bones and teeth, and riboflavin for growth and vitality.

2. Use sour milk in cooking.

3. Serve one citrus fruit or tomato, and one other fruit — to provide Vitamin C, other vitamins and minerals.

Note: Keep citrus fruits cold. Use uncooked frequently and fresh when possible.

4. Serve a whole grain cereal product and about four slices of enriched flour bread to prevent energy and extra B vitamins and minerals.

Note: When using wheat germ with cooked cereal, add it just before completion of cooking rather than at the start.

5. Serve meat once a day along with 3 or 4 eggs weekly. Include liver, heart or kidney once a week. These foods are needed to supply protein for body building and repair.

Note: Cook meats at moderate temperature to retain flavour and food value.

TAKE A TIP.

1. Health-wise shoppers buy for food value.

2. Save food values and you save food.

3. The amounts of food needed vary with age, occupation and sex.

BUDGET RECORD.

Living within your income. Living according to your actual means is one of the purposes of a budget. A budget should also make for the creation of a "family fund," an understood standard of living and a definite plan for the future. It should promote better understanding and cooperation between husband and wife, and it should help the children to understand that it isn't parental cruelty but the limitations of the family purse which prevents the fulfilment of their every desire.

People Are Asking?

Q. I bought a 16 ounce jar of peanut butter and paid 38 cents for it. It seems to me that this is a high price. Is there more than I ever paid for peanut butter? Has an increase been permitted?

A. Yes. It was allowed because the Commodity Prices and Stabilization Corporation stopped bulk purchasing of peanuts. Manufacturers are now largely dependent on the United States market for their supplies at much higher prices than those at which the nuts were being supplied to the trade by the C.I.S.C.

Q. Would you please tell me how many butter coupons become valid on January 1?

A. Butter coupons became valid on January 1st, 1947.

Q. Can a rooming house and boarding house charge tenants different rates for the same class of rooms on the same floor?

A. The maximum rates charged for such accommodation are fixed at the rates charged during the basic period, July 1st, 1943. If the rates varied on this date they may legally vary at the present time.

Q. My daughters are boarding in the city where they attend school. What are the regulations governing their rations in private boarding houses and in residences. What should be done when they are on holidays at home?

A. The landladies of boarding houses are entitled to the use of your daughters' ration books. Those who stay in boarding schools for 14 consecutive days must surrender their ration books to the owner or proprietor. The owner forwards coupons detached from these books with his monthly reports. If they come home for weekends they should come to some agreement with their landladies regarding the division of their ration allowances. During long holiday periods you would be entitled to reuse their books if your daughters are eating their meals at your home.

Ration Coupon Due Dates.

Coupons now valid are sugar-preserves $26 to $38, butter B35 to B37, meat M64 to M67.

On January 15th, the following coupons will be good — sugar-preserves $39, $40, B38 and M68.

Borrow More to Buy Farms.

Since the Canadian Farm Loan Board began operations in Saskatchewan in 1935, a total of 4,115 loans amounting to $5,753,000 have been made to farmers and $6,073,000 have been repaid, according to The Financial Post.

Out of every 100 borrowers in the province, 93 had no first mortgage interest arrears at March 31st, 1946. In the last fiscal year, borrowers paid $675,000 on account of principal.

The new year finds the politically interested in Canada's Capital, both the detached observers and the active participants, studying the standing and the possibilities of Canada's political parties. While provincial and federal politics are not officially bound together it is recognized that a party's provincial status is an important factor in its federal influence and position. Our four main parties, Liberal, Progressive Conservative, C.C.F. and Social Credit all have provincial interests and these are carefully weighed in considering each party's prospects.

Provincial Politics.

In British Columbia the Liberals, P.C.'s and C.C.F. parties divide public support almost equally, the two former combining to control provincial affairs with the C.C.F. as official opposition and no Social Credit strength at all. In Alberta the Social Credit dominate in provincial affairs even more than in federal with all other parties in trouble. So low are the fortunes of the Conservatives that their executive Council has recommended that the party cease to participate in provincial politics. Reports are that this recommendation has a good chance of passing the provincial convention of the party. The Liberal party whose affairs had also reached a low level, has shown some progress on the way back in 1946 and is looking for a new leader. The C.C.F. seems to have lost ground running fourth in the last federal election and losing, closely, in fact, outside the prairie provinces, the C.C.F. has given up top place to the Liberals with the Liberals challenging very strongly. P.C.'s and Social Credit still maintain their organizations with little hope of making even a fair showing. In Manitoba Liberal strength predominates with Conservatives second and sharing in the provincial government. However, in federal affairs the C.C.F. came second with a heavy vote in Winnipeg constituencies. So TWO—The Cracker Barrel Social Credit has made no progress.

Central Canada.

The Progressive Conservative party dominates the field in provincial matters in Ontario with the Liberals a quite distant second and C.C.F. third. In federal affairs the positions are maintained but with the Liberals challenging, closely, in fact, outside the Toronto area Liberals have the high vote. The C.C.F. are active in labour circles, but still run a bad third and the Communists carry on their usual type of campaign. Quebec gives only one of the National parties substantial support in either provincial or federal affairs. Provincial affairs are controlled by the provincial party, the Union Nationale, and federal opposition to the Liberals comes from a number of provincial movements. The Social Credit party is not considered a serious force in spite of its one by-election win.

The Eastern Provinces.

The three Maritime Provinces, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, strongly favour the Liberal party with the Conservatives not a very close second. The C. C. F. run a bad third in the Maritime provinces as official opposition, with two members as sole opponents of Angus MacDonald's Liberal government. Again the Social Crediters are not a factor.

National Affairs.

The outstanding factor in this survey is that only the Liberal party can still make claim to be a "National" party and this, with one weak spot (Alberta). "Will 1947 bring us a greater sense of "National interests" is the question in the minds of observers here and most of them are optimistic. External pressures on Canada in matters of trade and industry, closely related question of National Security are great now and every one expects that they will become greater. History shows that Canadians in all parts of Canada, have always risen to any challenge to their "National" well being and there is a strong feeling, and some evidence, that they are doing it again.</

Fruit Men Plan Struggle.

To Restore Leno Covers on Peaches.

Essex County fruit growers will carry their fight for Leno covered peach baskets to the back concessions, the councils of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association and to the department of agriculture's inspection branch at Ottawa.

Members' Decision.

That is what members of the Essex County Fruit Growers' Association decided at a meeting in the I. O. O. F. hall Ruthven, Friday afternoon.

Ever since the day when a West Coast member of Parliament got up in the House of Commons and declared against the Tarleton or Leno covered peach basket, the Essex County peach growers have been having basket trouble.

Actually, the growers aren't wedded to Leno baskets and they would gleefully accept any other kind of container which will sell peaches equally well. The trouble is that such a container has not yet been placed on the market.

Circular Letters.

Most of the Essex fruit growers have experimented with all types of containers. They tried cellophane covered baskets with no luck. Cellophane, phloim do not provide enough ventilation in the peach basket. Circular letters sent by the association to leading wholesalers in Canada were read at the meeting. To a man, the wholesale fruit men pronounced themselves in favor of the Leno covered baskets.

At a meeting held in Chatham, on Thursday of last week, district burley tobacco growers were asked to increase their acreage seven per cent over the 1946 crop.

This recommendation was included in a series of objectives approved by the Dominion-Provincial conference on agriculture. In deciding on the increase consideration was given to such factors as old leaf stocks, current season's production as well as anticipated domestic and export demand of leaf during the next year.

Because stocks of leaf have been seriously depleted from the war years some increase in production is necessary, local officials say in order to bolster domestic reserves, and at the same time provide a quantity to meet demands of the export market.

Planted burley acreage in Kent, Essex and the surrounding district in 1946 was estimated at 14,000. As a result of early floods approximately 4,000 acres were destroyed and only slightly in excess of 10,000 acres were harvested.

Because dark tobacco is grown under contract, arrangement between buyer and grower the conference did not feel justified in recommending any increase in production of this type of leaf. In the case of cigar tobacco the supply of old leaf stocks is now at such a low level that an increase of 19 per cent for 1947 has been advocated.

All recommendations have been calculated on a projected production, based on average yields, for the purpose of meeting minimum requirements throughout the following year.

Burley tobacco is one of the most important varieties grown and in Ontario 11,200,000 pounds were produced in 1946.

$40,000 Bull Dies at Farm.

Glenafon Killarney, three times all-Canadian champion bull and worth $40,000, died Tuesday at John McCague's Glenafon Farm Aillston.

In May the animal was to have been delivered to the Waterloo Holstein Breeders' Association, which bought it last fall and which had a long list of applications from Canadian and American breeders for artificial breeding.

McCague now sustains the financial loss.

Glenafon Killarney's two nearest dams were world champion milk producers and the sire had highest possible rating in selective registry. One dam, Montvic Colleen Abberkerk, has a R.O.P. of 22,182 pounds of milk in 365 days and 1,059 pounds of butter.

In testing 4.77 percent fat. Directors of the association said today an early attempt would be made to replace the animal.

The artificial breeding program had already attracted wide interest throughout Canada and the United States. McCague had guaranteed the bull for a year.

Leading Canadian and American breeders were scheduling trips to the county for next summer to inspect the animal.

To Question Herdsmen.

On Desirability of Insemination Station.

The whole of Essex County will be canvassed to ascertain how many owners of dairy herds wish to avail themselves of the services of an artificial insemination station which may be organized at Essex within the next few months, it was decided at a meeting in the Essex town hall, Tuesday afternoon.

Despite the icy condition of township and county roads, more than 200 of Essex county's milk producers attended to hear W. P. Watson, associate livestock director for the Ontario Department of Agriculture outline the operations and organization of artificial insemination stations in Ontario.

Much of the discussion from the floor which followed Mr. Watson's talk indicated that dairymen in Essex county and Kent county are interested in the plan because it provides an avenue for reducing costs.

Herdsmen with registered livestock are finding that they have to compete with buyers of dairy cattle from the U. S. for proven sires which have increased in price sharply over the last two or three years.

Organization of the station would solve their problems of getting suitable bulls for their herds at a time when the price of good animals is rather steep.

As soon as the canvass indicated that a minimum of 2000 cows are available for the scheme, its organization will proceed.

Representatives from all areas of the county have been named to a provisional committee which will conduct the canvass and carry on the work of organization from now on. Might Serve Essex Town.

(Windsor Daily Star)
Albert J. Brian, newly-elected chairman of the Windsor Utilities Commission, on Monday night placed his support behind "the complete rehabilitation" of the waterworks system on a five-year plan, he estimated would cost "at least" $1,500,000.
Speaking at his inauguration, the veteran commissioner briefly outlined a program calling for a complete overhauling of the waterworks system which would include construction of a high lift pumping station and miles of water mains.

Mr. Brian said at the completion of the plan, the system might be capable of providing water for the Town of Essex which, at the moment, has not a central water supply.

A start has been made in centralization "by the erection of a new waterworks service building (Howard avenue and Tecumseh road) which will meet the needs of the water division for some years in the future,"
Mr. Brian said.

"The time has now arrived when we must definitely make plans for the complete rehabilitation of our waterworks systems which must be completed by 1952," he continued.

"This date may seem somewhat remote but it will probably require more than a year to have the plans prepared and two years or more to construct the necessary works which involve a complete high lift pumping station and miles of large distribution mains.

"While I am unable to give you any figure as to the cost of this work, I believe that it will involve an expenditure of at least $1,500,000.

Mr. Brian said the commission is
"and will be the only source of water supply for Windsor and almost the entire surrounding area.

"I believe it will ultimately be to the advantage of the Town of Tecumseh to consider the advisability of securing its water supply from this city."

Metropolitan District.
Mr. Brian said the possible inclusion of Tecumseh and other communities into the proposed expanded system "would involve the creation of a metropolitan water district under legislative authority — and all the municipalities concerned would participate.

"This would be done either as joint owners on some mutually satisfactory basis to be determined when the new plant is being constructed or as an alternative they would be required to pay for the complete cost of the plant in their water rates," Mr. Brian added.

He said it would be "rather unfair" to Windsor to incur large capital expenditures, the cost of which will be met from year to year in water rates from our own citizens, and at a later date to have other areas come in and benefit by participation in the rates which should reduce as the debt is retired.

"This water area might extend into the county as far as the Town of Essex as there does not appear to be any available source of water supply at that point and that community cannot finance any project to bring water from either Lake Erie or Lake St. Clair."

Hydro Ration Decision Near.

A definite decision on Hydro rationing for the southern end of the province is looked for within the next few days. Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, who has been away for the past few weeks, was back at his office Wednesday, and with his return it is expected that the rationing situation will come to a head.

Premier Drew's office has announceed that the Ontario cabinet would discuss the situation with the commission today (Thursday).

Mrs. William Hayes Passes.

Mrs. Clara Hayes, aged 82, of the 9th Concession, Sandwich South, wi-

Essex Town Council.

Monday, January 13th.
Council met as per adjournment, with Mayor Linton, Reeve Gavin and Councillors Chase, Lee, Shaw, Francotte, Maedel and Pulleyblank present.

David Wright addressed Council, requesting permission to install a gasoline pump and necessary tank, on his property on Gordon avenue.—Request granted on motion of Messrs.
Pulleyblank and Francotte.

A tentative budget for 1947 was struck, and it was thought that the mill rate of 1946, viz. 43 mills, could be retained in spite of an increase of slightly over $4,000 over the 1946 budget.

The Clerk reported Mrs. A. Shipway for the Canadian Institute for the Blind, had requested that Council grant permission for annual Tag Day for Saturday, May 3rd.—Granted.
A discussion followed on the installation of a stop light at the Imperial Bank corner, but no action was taken.

Council adjourned, to meet Monday,
January 27th.

W. M. S. and W. A. Hold Joint Meeting.

The W. M. S. and W. A. of Essex United Church, held a joint meeting at the home of Mrs. J. W. Brien, on Tuesday of this week. The newly-elected president of the W. M. S., Mrs.
S. Hill, was in charge of the first part of the meeting. Reports from all departments of the work were given for the year 1946. Mrs. Doyle gave an interesting review of a chapter of the study book, "The Threshold of Faith." Miss E. Johnston, recording secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting, also a list of the new officers and committees and homes for meetings during the new year.

The second part of the meeting was in charge of the W. A. president, Mrs.
Shipway, who called on Mrs. Morris-son to conduct the devotional period.
During the business part of the meeting reports of 1946 were given, which included the amounts given by each of the four groups. The ladies were asked to assist the men in the caretaking of the church during the few weeks Mr. Dawson will be confined to his home, due to injuries received from a fall.

Members of the W. A. are asked to serve lunch to the choir at a social hour which is to be held after practice on Friday night.

The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. R. Linton. The financial secretary, Mrs. McPherson, collected fees for the coming year.
The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and prayer by Mrs. Parr.

Mrs. S. Lounsbrough Dies.

Mrs. Sarah Lounsbrough, aged 84, of 688 California avenue, Windsor, widow of William Thomas Lounsbrough, died Sunday in Grace Hospital, Windsor. She was born in Roslin, Ontario, but had lived in Windsor for 35 years, moving there from Sandwich South. Mrs. Lounsbrough was a member of All Saints Church, Windsor.

Percy, all of Sandwich South; nine grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren; also a brother, Jack Johnson, of Roslin; and three sisters, Mrs.
Ella McGuire, of Denver, Colo.; Mrs.
Abbey Love, of Manitoba, and Mrs.
Annie Hillman, of Windsor.

Services were held Wednesday afternoon from All Saints Church, in charge of Rev. Charles Brown, assisted by Rev. Joseph Tully. Burial was in Greenlawn Memorial Park.

William Wolfe Passes.

William Wolfe, aged 60 years, of 371 Aylmer avenue, Windsor, passed away in Hotel Dieu on Monday, following a short illness.

Deceased was born in Maldstone Township, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wolfe, and after spending the younger part of his life in town, moved to Windsor where he had worked for the Ford Motor Co., the past twenty-five years.

He was a member of Windsor Central United Church; of Capt. Brien Branch of the Canadian Legion, No.
201, Essex, and of Central Lodge, A.
F. & A. M., No. 402, Essex.

Surviving are his widow, Margaret;
two brothers, Albert, of Winnipeg,
and Leonard, of Chicago, and a sister, Mrs. John Slater, of Park Bank,
Sask.

Services are to be held today (Thursday) from the Morris Funeral Home, Windsor, with Rev. H. Mick officiating. A special graveside service will be in charge of the officers of Central Lodge, A. F. & A. M., No. 402, Essex. Burial is to be in Acacia Plot, in Victoria Memorial Park.

Seek County Magistrate.

—At a meeting of the Leamington Town Council, on Monday evening, it was agreed to ask the Commissioner of Ontario Provincial Police, for information regarding the policing of Leamington by the Ontario Provincial Police. Another item brought up and which should interest the councils of every town in the county, was a renewal of a request for a resident magistrate. Leamington police, as is the case in Essex and all other towns in the county, have to appear before a magistrate in Windsor, even in matters of minor infractions, and lots of times waste a good share of a day, sometimes having to go back two or three times before the cases are disposed of. In the case of Essex Chief Norm Hogarth, who is on duty all night, had to go into court first thing in the morning, spend the day in the city and go back on duty that night, with no rest. We had a magistrate for years and years, why can't we have one now.

Install Officers.

Following a banquet in the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening of last week, the officers of Central Lodge,
No. 402, A. F. & A. M., were installed in the lodge rooms, with H. R. Johnston, installing officer, assisted by G.
C. Johnston, D.D.G.M., and Messrs.
Alex Richardson, Ed. Howe, Duncan
Patterson, Ed. Morton and Horace Edgar, all of Windsor. The lodge officers are: W.M. S. L. Kennedy, I.P.M.; R. C. Brushett; S.W., Ed. Purvis;
J.W., H. D. Felstead; S. D. Ralph Tot-ten; J.D., Ed Croft; I.G., Elgin Middleton; S.S., John Hunter; J.S., Don Wilson; secretary, Ed. Hines; treasurer,
J. Roy Johnston; chaplain, Rev. J. H.
Whelan; D. of C., John Shaw.

High School Notes.

Boys' Sports.

On January 10th the basketball games began and Essex greeted Kingsville by defeating them in both games.
The Kingsville Juniors met Essex and were defeated by a score of 56 to 5.
Loebach was the star for Essex, with 22 points, Cade next with 16, and then Davison 6, Carl Johnston 6 and Tom Johnston 2.

After this game was finished the seniors met on the floor and battled it out, with Essex finally winning by a score of 40 to 27. Ross was the star of this game, with 12 points, Roath 8, and Leboeuf and Allison each 6.

On Friday, January 17th, Essex will journey to Leamington to meet them in a second county league game.

Girls' Sports.

During the fall term the Essex teams have played Windsor teams and, as a school yell says, "just for practice."
Now the basketball season has really begun, the first game having been played on Friday night, January 10th, at Kingsville. Other games to be played are: January 17th, Leamington at Essex; January 24th, Kingsville at Leamington; January 31st, Kingsville at Essex; February 7th, Essex at Leamington; February 14th, Leamington at Kingsville.

Those are future games but, to get back to the present, last Friday night
Essex packed up and moved in on Kingsville. The Juniors began the evening well, with the score at half time Essex 34, Kingsville 1. But Kingsville came back determined to have something and collected 4 points in the last half. The final score was Essex 54, Kingsville 5. Melba Billing made 6 points, M. McDermott 24, R.
Harrison 22 and Pat Goldie 2.

The seniors could not let the juniors walk off with all the honours.
At half time the score was Kingsville 22 and Essex 10. But Essex came back fighting and finished with the score reading Essex 24, Kingsville 22.
Pat McCreery made 12 points, Cora Morris 12, Barb Rumsdell, for Kingsville, made 16 points.

But this is just the beginning. Next week Leamington is coming to Essex.
How about coming to cheer our girls on?

What men want is not talent, it is purpose; not the power to achieve, but the will to labor.—Lytton.

The Public and Traffic Safety.

"If there was ever a need for unselfish devotion to a single cause it exists today in our quest for highway safety," says the report of President Truman's Highway Safety Conference.

Pointing out that around 38,000 people are being killed annually and some 1,300,000 injured in motor vehicle accidents in the States—a total comparable to the entire population of one of our major cities," the report stresses that traffic safety is everybody's business, whether or not he owns or drives a motor vehicle; traffic safety is, in its essence, a local problem—a problem for each village, town and city.

Ontario's Traffic Safety Problem. Ontario, with Canada's largest highway system and traffic, has not, comparatively speaking, Canada's worst traffic accident record. Nevertheless, the deaths, injuries and economic losses in Ontario from such accidents make staggering totals.

An entire population approximately the size of Orillia or Barrie, has been blotted out and a population the size of Hamilton has been injured since September of 1930, when compilation of comprehensive statistics was begun by the Ontario Department of Highways. In this 16-year period up to September 1946, 9,550 people had been killed and 165,155 injured.

Nor is that the whole story. The Economist, a financial journal published in Ontario since 1897, says in its December issue that the only casualty claims incurred in Ontario Motor Vehicle accidents in the last 15-year total nearly 75,000,000. Insurance experts believe that less than half of Ontario's motor vehicles are insured, consequently the real total of the financial losses is according to the Economist, close to $150,000,000 in the 15-year period. That is approximately equal to the total revenue of the Ontario government for one year.

Worse still, traffic accidents are climbing rapidly. In the first 9 months of 1946 traffic accidents increased 36 per cent over the same period of 1945, totalling 11,866 with 453 deaths and 8,707 people injured.

Bees Do Much More Than Produce Honey.

Bees are kept principally for the production of honey and wax but these two products do not represent the true value of the bee in the economy of the country, says C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The raw material from which honey and wax are made is nectar secreted by flowers of all kinds and taken from them by bees. Flowers are part of the reproductive system of plants, enclosing the stamens or the pistil which are the male and female organs respectively. In many varieties of plants the stamens and pistils are borne in separate flowers or even on separate plants. In others the two are enclosed in single flower. So as to bear fruit, seed or vegetable, pollen must be transferred from stamens to the pistil. This may be done in several ways but the chief agents in performing this service are insects. Of the insect agents the honey bee is the most important because she is the only one of them whose numbers can be controlled and who can be transported to any place where her services are required.

The transfer of pollen from stamens

Sulfa Drugs for Foulbrood.

Every beekeeper in Canada fears that some time his colonies may contract the disease known as American Foulbrood. This fear is based on the fact that American Foulbrood is so difficult to control that legislation requires the destruction of the colony and the burning of the exposed equipment wherever the disease is found, says W. A. Stephen, Bee Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

While American Foulbrood has caused the loss of many colonies and much equipment, it has also made good beekeepers, because it has caused them to be alert to what is going on in the hive.

Frequently a treatment for American Foulbrood has been proposed by scientific workers who have proved it effective. Unfortunately, when the recommended treatment has been applied by the beekeeper something has gone wrong and the disease went uncontrolled. Consequently scientists have to be very careful in recommending any particular treatment for bee diseases. Now, when it appears that an easy method of treatment is at hand, they are waiting to see the results of practical applications of a drug for the control of American Foulbrood.

Every beekeeper is aware of the heralded success of controlling American Foulbrood simply by feeding the diseased colony sulfathiazole dissolved in sugar syrup at the rate of one-half gram tablet to one gallon of syrup. Experiments carried out at the Bee Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, substantiate the claims made. Colonies polluted with disease were able to raise healthy brood in combs which previously contained many diseased cells. Other colonies treated soon after infection were able to clean up all signs of the disease. The amount of medicated syrup need per colony varied with the degree of the infection.

The results obtained in treating these colonies would seem to justify recommendation of the treating of American Foulbrood colonies with sulfathiazole. Time will tell whether it is over cautious to add a word of warning. It appears that strong colonies containing just a few cells of American Foulbrood can be treated successfully by feeding one tablet (one-half gram) of sulfathiazole in each gallon of sugar syrup but for weak colonies infected with the disease the safest treatment is to burn them.

to pistil is termed pollination which in itself is not sufficient, fertilization must follow. In many cases, especially in fruit-bearing plants, the flowers of one plant cannot be fertilized by pollen of the same plant—self pollination—consequently, pollen must be brought to it from some other plant of the same species, cross pollination, before fruit or seed can be formed. Cross pollination is considered to increase production even though the flower is capable of self pollination.

The honey bee, spending most of her active life among the flowers and gathering precisely all of her supplies from them is the most active and efficient agent in transferring pollen from one flower to another. Because of this fact many fruits and seed growers either rent bees or become beekeepers themselves solely for the increase of crop that can be secured from the service rendered by the bees to the flowers alone. It has been estimated that honey bees are of far greater value to the producers of fruit, seed and vegetables than to the beekeeper himself.

New Vice-President For National System

MAYNARD A. Metcalf, C.B.E., executive assistant to the president, Canadian National Railways, has been appointed vice-president and executive assistant.

Beginning as a junior clerk at Toronto when he was in his 15th year, the new vice-president has served the National System for nearly 37 years and in his long career has become one of the most popular of Canadian transportation men, known throughout the business community not only of Canada but of the United States and Great Britain. For his part in the large-scale contribution made by the C.N.R. to the Allied cause during the war, he was honoured by His Majesty the King last June when he was created a Commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Mr. Metcalf was born at Toronto Junction, Ont., in 1895 and began railroading as a junior clerk in the accounting department of the Canadian Northern in February, 1910. His work, a keen interest in railway affairs and an attractive personality, qualities which stood him in good stead throughout the years, brought him early recognition and advancement. He was Mayor of the Town of Mount Royal, a residential suburb of Montreal, for four years, following four years as alderman.

Stuffed Onions.

By Betty Barclay.

Mother earth has borne a beautiful supply of onions this past season and millions of kitchens for months to come will greet home-coming Dads and children with tantalizing odors that whet their appetite.

Laugh at the humble onion if you wish, but don't overlook the fact that it's a food for epicures. Boistered with healthful carbohydrates and proteins as it is in the following recipe, it's bound to be a popular side-dish at any table.

Stuffed Onions.

6 large onions
½ cup (¼ pound) sausage meat
½ cup Grape-Nuts
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon melted fat
1 tablespoon ketchup

Peel onions; cook 15 minutes in large amount of boiling salted water. Drain, cool, and remove centers from stem end, making little cups. Chop centers and combine with sausage, Grape-Nuts, salt, pepper, fat, and ketchup. Fill onions with mixture and place in greased baking dish. Bake in moderate oven (375°F) 45 minutes, or until onions are tender. Makes 6 servings.

Note: If desired, place ½ slice of bacon on top of each onion before baking.

Canada a Manufacturing Nation.

Canada long regarded as a "raw-material" nation has served notice on the world that she is something of a manufacturing nation as well. The amazing output of Canadian industry during the year of war showed clearly how far we have progressed in the last quarter century. This progress, however gratifying, brings with it new problems.

The committee on tariffs, at Ottawa must materially revamp our obsolete system of tariffs to meet today's needs. Their task is not an easy one, and the task of Canada's negotiators at the coming international trade conferences will be even harder.

To do away with tariffs would be to do away with much of Canadian industry. To erect high protective barriers would be unfair to the Canadian consumer and jeopardize our exports such as wheat and bacon. The solution would seem to lie in the middle course—a tariff devised to afford the manufacturer some measure of protection, yet not so much as to eliminate competition of imports. Only in this way does it appear that Canadians can maintain anything like the high level of employment that is now being enjoyed.

1946 Industrial Accident Figures.

During the past year industrial accidents in Ontario increased more than 20,000 over the 1945 figures, reports the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations from Workmen's Compensation Board records. Part of the increase is credited to the extended coverage made by the Board in 1946. For that reason it is not possible to make a strict comparison between that and other years. However, the figures are given as follows: During 1946 there were 138,570 accidents, including 435 fatal cases. In 1945 the figures were 118,220 and 467, respectively. The 1946 awards for compensation and medical aid were $16,502,623.89. In 1945 they were $13,135,938.33.

Commenting on the 1946 awards, the general manager of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, said, "When Compensation awards average well over a million dollars a month, it is evident that Workmen's Compensation costs have become an important item in our industrial economy."

Butter Supply Short — Imports Possible.

The Rt. Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, stated on January 2nd, that as of December 1st, 1946, stocks of creamery butter in storage and transit were 56.4 million pounds, and of cheese 26 million pounds. The quantity of these products in storage will continue to decrease from month to month, reaching a minimum at the end of April. Production of butter, cheese and concentrated milks is now very limited, and while any price increases would benefit producers in proportion to the limited quantities now being produced, advances in price would result in increased cost to consumers not only with respect to current production but also with respect to the considerable quantities already in storage, and without any benefit to the producers as far as the latter are concerned. For these reasons there will be no increase in legal maximum prices at the present time.

Subsidies on account of the production of fat used in the manufacture of creamery butter and of milk used in the manufacture of cheese are provided to the 30th of April, 1947, and before that date it will be necessary to review the question of ceiling prices in relation to subsidies.

The Minister further stated that while the ration of butter had been maintained at six ounces per person per week, butter is in short supply, and that unless adequate supplies are available, it will be necessary for the Government to consider arrangements for the importation of a quantity of butter to maintain the six ounces per week ration.

Oven Fresh Rolls for Any Meal.

There is something about hot fresh rolls that gives a special touch to any meal.

When every homemaker baked her own bread, baking day was marked by that pan of hot rolls that disappeared so quickly.

Dough for rolls may be made ahead of time and chilled or frozen until being baked. This is a good way to have fresh rolls without going to the trouble of mixing dough each time fresh rolls are required. For good results it is very important that the mixture be kept in a cold place, covered, to prevent the yeast from working.

Some like soft rolls, others prefer them crusty. Some occasions demand dainty crescents or finger rolls while for the substantial meal nothing equals parker house or plain crusty rolls of generous size.

The home economist of the Consumer section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture have an excellent recipe for rolls with suggestions for using the dough in various ways.

Soft or Crusty Rolls—Cut off small uniform pieces, fold sides under until top is smooth and dough is round. For high, soft rolls, place close together on baking sheet; for crusty place an inch apart; for very crusty rolls place in greased muffin tin.

Cloverleaf Rolls—Shape very small pieces of dough into balls, brush with melted fat and place 3 balls in each muffin tin.

Finger Rolls—Shape very small pieces of dough into balls, brush with melted fat and place 3 balls in each muffin tin.

Finger Rolls—Cut dough into uni-

NEW COMFORTS FOR RAILWAY TRAVELLERS

When the first of fourteen new parlor cars went into service on the Canadian National Railways recently, it marked the first car of this type built in Canada to have a private room. Including many other innovations for Canadian railway travellers' comfort and convenience, the car was designed by C.N.R. engineers and architects.

The private rooms are equipped with comfortable sofas and chairs for daytime rest. They have their own little private washroom annexes and are equipped with the new "zone control" heating and air conditioning system, permitting their occupants to set the temperature in the rooms to suit their own comfort.

The main section, shown in the top photograph, has 26 rotating and reclining chairs of a new more comfortable design. Incandescent lights, placed over each seat, are installed in such a way that no matter in which position the chair is turned or adjusted it provides direct overhead lighting. "Cycle modulation" automatic heating and air conditioning control, developed during the war, maintains the inside of the car to within one degree of a set comfortable temperature even though the weather may vary 50 degrees within a few hours. The gadget which performs this magic is shown in the lower photograph.

Urge Big Oil Seed Crop.

In Canada, the post-war industrial activity is creating a strong demand for both edible and industrial oils which is being only partially met. For the agricultural program of 1947 in Canada the Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference, therefore, recommends that every possible effort be made to increase or maintain the production in Canada of flaxseed, soybeans, rape seed and sunflower seed.

The total quantity of fats and oils available for international trade in 1947 is estimated at about 50 per cent of requirements. Production of every group of fats and oils is below pre-war level. The greatest reduction in output will be in palm oils (coconut palm oil and palm kernel) due to reduced production in the Netherlands East Indies and the Philippines. Marine oils also are substantially below pre-war production.

Production of edible oilseeds, while only 10 per cent below pre-war output, nevertheless will represent no more than 50 per cent of needs by reason of the increased world requirements of edible fats. The expectation is that 1947 will again be a year of some considerable scarcity in regard to fats and oils and oil-bearing material, and that from a long-range point of view, three years or more may be required from world production to reach the 1935-39 level.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP is a lot of little thingsKEEP ICICLES OFF YOUR EAVES

Beware the "January Thaw"—warm days and cold nights make perfect weather for icicles. The weight of such icicles is not only a strain on your eavestroughs, but a menace to passers-by. Get a long pole after those aerial icebergs and bring them down before they do harm! It may seem a small thing—but remember, any contribution to the public good, is a contribution to "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a husband and father, Rudolph A. Brush, who passed away January 17th, 1945.

Somewhere back of the sunsets,
Where loveliness never dies,
He lies in a land of glory,
Amid the blue and gold of the skies.
And we who loved him so dearly,
Whose passing has brought many tears,
Will cherish his memory always
To brighten the passing years.

—Sadly missed by wife and family.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving memory of a husband and father, Lindsay Farough, who passed away suddenly, January 15th, 1946.

It is loneliness at home without you,
Father, dear,
And sad the weary way,
For life is not the same to us
Since you went away.
The blow was hard,
The shock severe,
Little we thought your time was near,
You went as you had wished,
Your work it was well done,
For all of us you did your best,
And grant God give you perfect rest.

—Sadly missed by his wife Mabel, and daughters Mary and Cecile, and grandchildren.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Susan C. Bailey, who passed away seven years ago, January 16th, 1940.

Somewhere back of the sunsets,
Where loveliness never dies,
She lies in a land of glory,
Amid the blue and gold of the skies.
And we, who loved her so dearly,
Whose passing has brought many tears,
Will cherish her memory always
To brighten the passing years.

—Ever remembered by her husband Joseph, and family.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Pte. William Pritchard, 607 Para Infantry, 32nd Airborne Division, U. S. Army, killed in action, in Belgium, on January 19th, 1945.

Surrounded by friends, I am lonesome,
In the midst of my joys I am blue,
With a smile on my face I've a heart-ache,
Longing, dear Bill, for you.

—Sadly missed by mom and dad, brothes Ed, Bob, John, Dick. C3-11

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of William Farough, who passed away three years ago, January 19th, 1944.

I watched him suffer day by day,
It caused me bitter grief,
To see him slowly pine away,
And could not give relief.
His weary hours and days of pain
His troubled nights are past,
And in my aching heart I know
He has found sweet rest at last.

Sadly missed by his wife Margaret.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of R. A. Brush, who passed away two years ago, January 17th, 1945.

In the city of Life,
On a hill far away,
Where the sun never sets
Nor the flowers decay,
He is with the Redeemer,
Free from trouble and pain,
Where, in God's own good time,
We shall all meet again.
Then, let those who dearly loved him
Ever watch and always pray,
That they will be prepared to meet him
On the Resurrection Day.

Lovingly remembered by his wife and family.

A Farewell to Dr. J. D. MacDonald.

St. Paul's Parish Hall, on Thursday evening of last week, was the scene of one of the most successful farewell parties ever tendered an honoured guest in the history of Essex, when at least 200 men, from all walks of life, from Essex, Windsor, and the surrounding district, gathered to bid farewell to Dr. James D. MacDonald, on his departure from Essex to Windsor, where he has opened an office in his new home on the corner of Victoria and Shepherd street.

The doctor recently sold his house and practice to Dr. D. W. Clare, after residing in town since December 1919, when he took over Dr. W. C. Doyle's practice.

As a remembrance of the occasion, his friends presented him with a fine gold wrist watch and a leather office chair. Forbes B. Geddes making the presentations. A beautiful bouquet of red roses was sent Mrs. MacDonald.

George R. Weller made a very able and witty chairman, and short talks were heard from Drs. S. F. Milne, L. G. McCabe, George W. Rogers, R. J. Coyle, J. Frank Adams, D. W. Clare, D. G. McMullen and Dr. McTague, as well as Cecil Simpson, W. J. Blankstein and Mayor J. C. Linton.

Dr. Milne, in introducing his remarks, stated that Jim was born in Teeswater, Ont., attended the University of Toronto from 1913 to 1918, went overseas in September of 1918 and arriving home started out in his profession in July 1919, in Parry Sound, then settled in Essex in December 1919. He compared the doctor to ivory soap, not in that it "floats," but as to it being 99 and 99/100% pure.

On Tuesday afternoon of this week a reception was held in honour of Mrs. MacDonald, at Sewell's, when over 100 of her friends met to bid her good-bye. During the afternoon, Mrs. Forbes B. Geddes presented Mrs. MacDonald with a cocktail table, on behalf of her Essex and vicinity friends.

Mrs. Geo. R. Weller, Mrs. J. A. Nightingale and Mrs. H. R. Johnston received with Mrs. MacDonald.

When eulogizing the honoured guest the speaker spoke highly of Mrs. MacDonald, stating she was everything the wife of a country doctor should be. She kept his books, answered the telephone 24 hours a day, looked after patients who were waiting for him and sometimes chased him over half the county when he was urgently needed.

In closing he looked over at Dr. Clare and advised him that, although he had big feet and broad shoulders, he would need them to fill the shoes and carry the load left by the honoured guest.

J. C. Linton brought greetings from the people of the town.

The above picture reproduced by courtesy of the Windsor Daily Star, of Doctor Jim, shows a Highland lassie (Mrs. Arthur Miller) serving him with a dish of Haggis, while Jock Copeland, of Windsor, played his bag pipes. George MacDonald, of Windsor, treated his audience to several Scotch songs and led in several sing-songs.

The evening was arranged by a committee composed of members of the local Rotary and Kinsmen clubs and the Essex Chamber of Commerce.

Change in Price Controls.

All fresh fruits and vegetables, except apples, are now free of price controls, but farm machinery, freight and storage rates are included in the list of goods remaining under ceiling regulations in the latest "further step in the orderly removal of emergency controls" announced by the Hon. Douglas Abbott, Minister of Finance.

Improvement in supplies, administrative problems and "the risk that colling prices might come to be regarded as minimum prices" are among the major factors given by Mr. Abbott for the selection of items released from price controls.

In a prepared statement issued at Ottawa, the minister of finance said: "Among the goods which are being released from price control are the majority of items which may be described as household equipment, and supplies, including furniture, small appliances, kitchen and cooking utensils, tableware and cutlery, brooms and brushes, pails, radios, pianos and clocks. Tools and garden equipment, home building supplies such as clay products, cement, stone and sheet metal products, land lace and leather, fabrics, paints and varnishes are also decontrolled. In the sphere of food, the important differences are most kinds of fish, sea and fresh fruit and vegetables except for apples. Certain important foods, such as potatoes, fruit, pulses and peanuts are also decontrolled as well as canned fruits and vegetables. Other than the large staple items, carpets and linoleum are the main items in the sphere of textiles. Only a few articles containing cotton are decontrolled because of the continuing shortages and the large subsidies which are still being paid on the primary materials. Among the services, hairdressing and beauty parlour prices and moving picture admission are no longer subject to price control."

Remaining under control are "most of the basic foods, practically all articles of clothing, boots and shoes, most textile home furnishings, coal and wood fuels, the major household appliances and heating and plumbing equipment, automobiles, tires and gasoline, rentals, household laundry services, restaurant prices, freight rates, storage rates, a variety of basic materials such as steel, copper, rubber, lumber and pulp, and certain other goods which are important in production costs such as farm machinery."

The list of items remaining under control, Mr. Abbott said, "affords continued protection to the consumer in the places where the risk and effect of rising prices are greatest."

Britain's Aluminum Houses.

Housing experts of 29 countries have made enquiries about aluminum prefabricated houses. Britain's first answer to the housing shortage problem. Now being made at five wartime factories at the rate of two hourly by February they will be coming on the lines at the rate of one every 2 1/2 minutes. They are quickly erected too. In Bristol the second factory will be erecting a complete house and connecting all services in 3 1/2 minutes. These houses are as durable as brick and have passed all weather tests including being frozen, heated, steam pumped into them and being exposed to an 80 miles an hour gale produced by beamlighter exhaust.

Several Thousand Men Still Needed in Woods.

Several thousands of men are still needed for work in the woods in Eastern Canada and in the Prairie Provinces, Arthur MacNamara, Dominion Deputy Minister of Labour stated this week.

The situation in British Columbia is so far as woods labour is concerned, is pretty well in hand," Mr. MacNamara said. "Our reports show that while skilled workers are still required in that province, orders for unskilled woods labour have been almost completely filled."

The Labour Deputy said that about 10,000 men are needed in the Province of Quebec, and that while orders in Northwestern Ontario have fallen off, most operators in that Province still have vacancies listed with the National Employment Service. "But in all provinces," Mr. MacNamara added, "there are orders for replacements, and as log hauling on the Prairies and in the East gets into full swing very soon, numbers of additional men will be needed."

Mr. MacNamara pointed out that while there are still unfilled vacancies for woods workers, the number of men working in Canada's forest industries at the present time is 15 per cent greater than a year ago, and constitutes an all-time high for woods employment. He paid tribute to the assistance given the National Employment Service and the Department of Labour by officers of the Provincial Governments, who co-operated in recruiting woods labour.

The Deputy Minister pointed out the lumber and pulpwood industries themselves had done excellent work in locating men for jobs in the woods. "High employment is bound to continue in the woods industry," Mr. MacNamara said, "because of the heavy demands for lumber to meet building programs and export requirements, and also to meet the heavy demands for pulpwood products both at home and abroad."

Fish Liver Oil.

Pointing out that fish liver oils are rich in vitamin D, essential for maintaining strong bones and healthy teeth, nutrition authorities suggest to Canadian parents that these oils make most suitable substitutes for lack of sunlight, and should be included in winter diets.

Shocking — But True.

The public was recently shocked at the news of 122 people killed in a hotel fire in Georgia, but 553 people were killed in Ontario traffic accidents in the first nine months of 1946.

Toural Representatives are continuing their efforts in order to meet completely the requirements of woods operators. Mr. MacNamara explained. These efforts will continue for some weeks yet, so that any men wanting work in the logging or pulpwood cutting industries can still be taken care of.

The Creeping Killer.

One of the great hazards of carbon monoxide is that it gives no warning of its existence," states a pamphlet headed "Carbon Monoxide the Creeping Killer," issued this month by the Industrial Prevention Association. Warning that carbon monoxide does not come only from the exhausts of motors, but exists, in some degree, in all industries and every home, the pamphlet says, "It is vital to remember that continuous exposure to a very low concentration of carbon monoxide, over a sufficient length of time, can produce the same toxic effect as short exposure to a higher concentration."

As the most common form of carbon monoxide exists in garages and in the use of automobiles, the pamphlet lists preventative measures for this hazard as follows:

1. See that there is reasonable ventilation in the garage.
2. Do not run the engine in a closed garage.
3. See that the carburetor and motor are in proper condition, so that there will be a fairly complete combustion of fuel.

4. All cars should be inspected regularly for leaky exhaust connections, loose and broken floor boards, exhaust pipes and mufflers.
5. See that the exhaust pipe extends beyond the rear end of the body of the car.
6. See that there is reasonable ventilation in your own car, and avoid sealing the car by closing all windows and vents.
7. Get out your car and into the fresh air at the first sign of headache, smarting eyes, dizziness, sickness or drowsiness.

On Your Toes.

Ill-fitting and unsuitable footwear can cause a multitude of health troubles. National Health authorities state, "Your standing in the community may be influenced by the boots you wear. Don't be a heel — get up on your toes, and adopt sensible, healthful footwear."

Care of Vacuum Cleaner.

1. Never pick up tacks, pins or other hard or sharp objects with your cleaner.
2. Empty the bag frequently — a clean dust container gives better suction; therefore better cleaning.
3. Keep brushes free from hair and threads.
4. If your cleaner is a brush type machine, adjust brushes to correct position.
5. If brush still does not work, check the belt. If too loose, replace with a new one.
6. Lighten your housework by using the attachments.

IMPORTANT GOVERNMENT NOTICE
Respecting Price Control

The Wartime Prices and Trade Regulations (Order in Council P.C. 8528 of November 1, 1941) established basic period maximum prices for goods and designated services. These regulations were passed under the authority of the War Measures Act and continued in force under the National Emergency Transitional Powers Act, 1945.

From time to time these basic maximum prices have been varied or the fixed maximum has been suspended in the case of particular goods and services by Orders issued by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board under the authority of the above Regulations. A few days ago a substantial number of suspensions from price control was announced.

I believe it is desirable therefore that a summary should now be published of those goods and services on which a legal maximum price remains in force under the provisions of the Wartime Prices and Trade Regulations so that all citizens may be given an opportunity to inform themselves of the law.

The complete price control regulations are contained in Wartime Prices and Trade Board Order No. 684 which is available to the public at any office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, and to which reference should be made for exact details.

Douglas Abbott
Minister of Finance.

British People and Socialism.

By Lewis Milligan.

"CBC News Roundup" is a sort of Postlude to the late evening news broadcast, and it consists chiefly of comments on outstanding events and questions of the day by CBC special representatives at distant points. Matthew Halton is the CBC's representative in London, and his job is to interpret British news for Canadian listeners. That is not what you might call an arduous task, from a newspaperman's point of view, for it would not entail more than half a column of writing to fill in the brief time allotted. But it is a difficult matter to be absolutely unbiased in interpreting political news, and Mr. Halton doubtless tries his best to be fair to the points of view of all parties.

Mr. Halton, however, appears to have definite personal leanings toward the left wing of the Labour movement. He is for ever reminding his listeners that Britain is undergoing a "socialist revolution," and he gives the impression that the people have resigned themselves to an eventual Socialistic state. In discussing the bill to nationalize British transport, Mr. Halton described it "a long step along the road of the socialist revolution."

Referring to previous bills for the nationalization of mines and the Bank of England, he pointed out that although the Tories and Liberals were against these measures, it was to be noted that this had been done "without the Government losing a single bye-election." He further stated that the Conservatives would attempt to delay the nationalization of the steel industry and of the land until the exhaustion of the American and Canadian loans might bring about a reaction against Labour. To which he added: "Whether this is clear thinking or not doesn't matter" — as if to imply that in his opinion it wasn't clear thinking.

Mr. Halton is quite correct in stating that the Labour Government is bent on bringing about a "socialist revolution" in Britain, but it is wrong to give the impression that the people — even a majority of them — are happy about it. It is true that union workers have been taught by their leaders to believe that capitalism was the cause of all their troubles, and that socialism would bring prosperity and abundance for all, with a maximum of toil and no worry about the future. But in spite of what Mr. Halton says about the bye-elections, there is a definite swing away from the belief in a purely socialist solution of Britain's postwar problems.

I felt this during my visit to Britain last summer, and it is confirmed by private letters received over the Christmas holidays. One housewife in London writes, "But in spite of all, Mr. Halton says about the bye-elections, there is a definite swing away from the belief in a purely socialist solution of Britain's postwar problems."

A family man in Liverpool, who voted for the Labour Government, writes as follows: "Rationing is likely to last some time yet, as they are printing ration books for 1948. This seems rather farcical, as Mr. Sartorius, the Food Minister, has announced that he is allowing gift parcels of rationed foods to be sent to friends abroad. I don't know whether to blame the Government or not, although I personally am rather fed up with them. Exports appear to be an obsession with them. Supplies for the home market are not getting any better in the way of clothing, household linen, shoes, etc. In fact, there are still very few things that can be bought without coupon points or priority vouchers. The trade unions are carrying things a bit too far, and workers are striking on the least pretext, both officially and unofficially. Last week in Manchester the transport workers struck, unofficially, for four days, because a bus driver had been suspended from driving after being reported for dangerous driving, and over a million citizens were unable to travel in public conveyances. This is what the unions call freedom. It will get to the stage shortly when a man must not be sacked, or otherwise there will be a strike.

Unofficial strikes are becoming common in England, and they are apparently winked at by union officials. The London Daily Mirror, a strong supporter of the Labour Government, said in a recent editorial: "Everybody knows that there is an unofficial 'go-slow' strike at Paddington Station. Yet nobody knows what this strike is about. It is even possible that many of the strikers don't know all the facts. When asked to explain it, the National Union of Railwaymen have nothing to say. The facts about the causes of the dispute are their private property — so private that they must be hidden from the public, whose interests are most gravely injured by the dispute."

Mankind will be God-governed in proportion as God's government becomes apparent. The Golden Rule utilized, and the rights of man and the liberty of conscience held sacred. — Mary Baker Eddy.

Labour in 1947.

Two addresses were delivered in Ottawa last week on "Labour in 1947" which political and economic observers are studying with interest, looking for the key to Canadian prosperity in this new year. There were significant differences in the approach to the problem by the two speakers, Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Canada's Minister of Labour, and Patrick Conroy, secretary of the Canadian Congress of Labour, the second largest of Canada's labour unions, although both are men who started at the bottom rung of the labour world and reached the top by virtue of their personal qualities.

Mr. Mitchell's program for labour was a policy of production at costs which would permit mass consumption — so that the benefits of modern production would reach the largest possible number of people. Mr. Mitchell stressed that to maintain the all-time high record of employment which we now have Canada must develop her external trade. These he said, were the twin essentials of a Canadian economy. Failure to produce at costs per unit, when such a change occurs, the balance may swing back to give the newer land the wider opportunity. To achieve this, they see a Canada developing the creative potential that has demonstrated under the compelling impulse of war — a new economy in which this country is a producer of finished products rather than a supplier of raw materials.

In a very able brief presented to the Ontario Royal Commission on Forestry, W. S. Gibson set his finger on one of the potent factors that has induced the southward migration of Canadians. Said Mr. Gibson: "If you will compare the class of exports going from Canada to the United States with the class of imports that came from the United States into Canada, you will find that in almost every case our exports to the United States consists of items that sell for a few cents per pound (pulpwood half a cent per pound; wheat, three cents per pound), whereas our imports from the United States cover items which almost without exception sell at a much higher price per pound."

Here Mr. Gibson is on constructive and unassailable ground. In the year 1943, the last year for which accurate comparisons can be made, exports and imports with the United States and Canada closely approached a balance. But a rough estimate shows that 60 per cent of the exports were of basic commodities — pulpwood, grains, minerals and wool — on which only a fraction of the potential labour content had been used. From the United States 85 per cent of our imports were of finished and manufactured goods ready to be distributed to the consumer.

Now, while Mr. Gibson dealt only with Ontario and primarily with pulpwood, his argument can be applied to all of Canada and her complete re-evaluation of raw materials. Pulpwood as pulpwood is worth half a cent a pound. As newsprint, eight times that figure; in more highly developed papers, forty to fifty times as much.

This increased value is the work content of the basic commodity that we are recklessly giving away. It is the content that provides the opportunities and the careers our young people are seeking. How long will it be before we realize that they might as well find them at home? — Liberty Magazine.

People Are Asking?

Q.—I understand the price of tea and coffee has been raised. Can you tell me the amount of the increase per pound?

A.—At the beginning of the year maximum prices of tea and coffee were restored to the same general level as that prevailing in the fall of 1942 when prices were reduced by a subsidy below the prevailing levels. The increase is four cents a pound in the maximum price of coffee, eight cents a pound increase in the price of all tea sold in bulk or packages, in quantities of less than half a pound and an increase in maximum price of 10 cents a pound on all tea sold in quantities of one half pound or more.

Q.—I came from the West recently where I could obtain supplies of evaporated milk without any coupons. Now I find that evaporated milk cannot be purchased here unless I have coupons. Why is it that this milk is rationed in one part of the country and not in others?

A.—Evaporated milk is only rationed in areas where fluid milk is plentiful and where supplies must be reserved for persons requiring it in their diet. Such "areas" where this product is rationed are termed "restricted" and there are restricted areas in every province in Canada.

Q.—Recently I had a tooth filled and was charged $4. I used to pay $3. Isn't there a ceiling price on dental work?

A.—No. There are no regulations governing professional services. All that is best in the civilization of today, is the fruit of Christ's appearance among men. — Daniel Webster.

They Seek What We Throw Away.

By Joseph Lister Rutledge.

One of the anomalies of economic life is that the opportunities youth is so eagerly seeking we are thoughtlessly or recklessly throwing away.

Years ago we accepted as inevitable the fact that the golden promise of the United States should drain off the youthful and most aggressive of our population. We don't accept it today, and yet the drain still continues. We lose one of our own for every new citizen who comes from abroad. Present-day irritations have stimulated the southward trend, and heavy taxation has induced impatient youth to look elsewhere for success.

It is an understandable attitude. The opportunities offered by mass populations must always be more apparent than those in the smaller field, even when these opportunities are more apparent than real. This is the sort of argument that appeals to youth.

It can be argued of course and with equal force that there are even more able and ambitious young men who have been content to remain in Canada. They have stayed perhaps because they have recognized other values besides economic advantage. They have stayed also no doubt because they have seen that Canada must come to an adjustment of her economic thinking, and when such a change occurs, the balance may swing back to give the newer land the wider opportunity.

To achieve this, they see a Canada developing the creative potential that has demonstrated under the compelling impulse of war — a new economy in which this country is a producer of finished products rather than a supplier of raw materials.

In a very able brief presented to the Ontario Royal Commission on Forestry, W. S. Gibson set his finger on one of the potent factors that has induced the southward migration of Canadians. Said Mr. Gibson: "If you will compare the class of exports going from Canada to the United States with the class of imports that came from the United States into Canada, you will find that in almost every case our exports to the United States consists of items that sell for a few cents per pound (pulpwood half a cent per pound; wheat, three cents per pound), whereas our imports from the United States cover items which almost without exception sell at a much higher price per pound."

Here Mr. Gibson is on constructive and unassailable ground. In the year 1943, the last year for which accurate comparisons can be made, exports and imports with the United States and Canada closely approached a balance. But a rough estimate shows that 60 per cent of the exports were of basic commodities — pulpwood, grains, minerals and wool — on which only a fraction of the potential labour content had been used. From the United States 85 per cent of our imports were of finished and manufactured goods ready to be distributed to the consumer.

Now, while Mr. Gibson dealt only with Ontario and primarily with pulpwood, his argument can be applied to all of Canada and her complete re-evaluation of raw materials. Pulpwood as pulpwood is worth half a cent a pound. As newsprint, eight times that figure; in more highly developed papers, forty to fifty times as much.

This increased value is the work content of the basic commodity that we are recklessly giving away. It is the content that provides the opportunities and the careers our young people are seeking. How long will it be before we realize that they might as well find them at home? — Liberty Magazine.

The Sheltering Wing.

A clutch of chicks, escaping from chinks in the coop, scattered over the yard. They strayed happily enough until the dark shadow of a hawk appeared and a cockerel's warning cry sounded. "This sent them running for cover beneath the wings of the mother hen."

To the observer, this small incident aptly served to illustrate mortal experience. Entering a material world mortals soon reach out beyond familiar bounds in search of knowledge, happiness, success. They entertain a false sense of security in matter, and perhaps all seems well until fear, unhappiness, or disease comes to cast a shadow over their lives. Then how quickly they abandon their unguarded freedom and seek shelter, help, and healing. Where shall they find them?

The true understanding of divine Love is requisite to meet the human need. This all-encompassing idea of God's omnipotence is the healing Christ, to which Jesus referred when he said (Matthew 23:37), "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not."

Christian Science reveals the Christ which Jesus taught and demonstrated. Mary Baker Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" (p. 55): "Truth's immortal idea is sweeping down the centuries, gathering beneath its wings the sick and sinning. My weary hope tries to realize that happy day, when man shall recognize the Science of Christ and love his neighbour as himself — when he shall realize God's omnipotence and the healing power of the divine Love in what it has done and is doing for mankind."

Those who discern the great truth that God is infinite Spirit and man His wholly spiritual reflection, know that evil can have no reality, disease no power, and death no sting. When God is seen as the only might and Mind, then we may rest assured that "Truth's immortal idea" is gathering us beneath its wings. Then spiritual understanding casts our fear, and healing displaces disease. — Christian Science Monitor.

Variety at Table.

As a change from other cuts of meat, which may be more difficult to obtain and more expensive, health authorities suggest such items as liver, kidney, heart, tongue and sweetbreads to add taste and variety to meals. They are all rich in essential vitamins A and iron and help to ensure healthy eyes and rich blood.

The true test of civilization is, not the census, nor the size of cities, nor the crops, but the kind of man that the country turns out. — Emerson.

An Appeal for Greater Highway Safety.

Making an urgent appeal to Ontario motorists and pedestrians for greater highway safety, the Hon. George H. Donnelly, Minister of Highways, said this week, "For every 13 hours that passed in 1946, one Ontario citizen was killed in a motor car accident."

A preliminary compilation of last year's accident statistics by the Ontario Highway Department discloses a total of 670 known deaths, more than in any year since the record high of 1941, when 804 people lost their lives.

"The tragic toll in 1946 was taken despite the fact that unexpectedly few new cars come on the market to swell the traffic," the Minister stated, "but have with an end to production limitations in sight, the provincial traffic outlook for 1947 calls for a maximum of safety-consciousness on the part of Ontario drivers and pedestrians if the accident rate is to be kept down."

Expressing his appreciation of the efforts made by the Provinces' schools, press, radio and community organizations to make the public more safety-minded, Mr. Donnelly reminded that, despite such co-operation, a decrease in the traffic accident rate rested with the drivers and pedestrians themselves.

"All the improvements made in provincial highways, stricter law-enforcement and newer cars on the road will not keep down traffic deaths and injuries unless motorists and pedestrians alike use more care, common sense and courtesy in their driving and walking," the Minister said. "Drivers must realize that driving is a privilege which can be forfeited for improper use. The average car weighs about 13 times as much as the average person, and with the added power of modern engines it can do tremendous damage before the driver can prevent it. For this reason, pedestrians must avoid acting in ways which motorists cannot anticipate."

He who shall introduce into public affairs the principles of primitive Christianity will change the face of the world. — Benjamin Franklin.

Irish Linen Handkerchiefs.

The mid-winter fashion picture is painted in a rainbow of colors — torador reds, emerald greens, many-hued plaids. Even inky black dresses sparkle with jewels and sequins.

In this present of color, the new Irish linen handkerchiefs, now displayed in stores are star performers. First, because of their vibrant colors and striking designs. Second, because at last they're actually pure linen — and that is headline news.

As you approach today's handkerchief departments, you are impressed with the drama of the designs — flowers are as "big as life" and twice as natural. Tulips, poppies, fall-blown roses, and mums — spill across squares of white or colored linen. Colors are clear, bold, emphatic — grand with style.

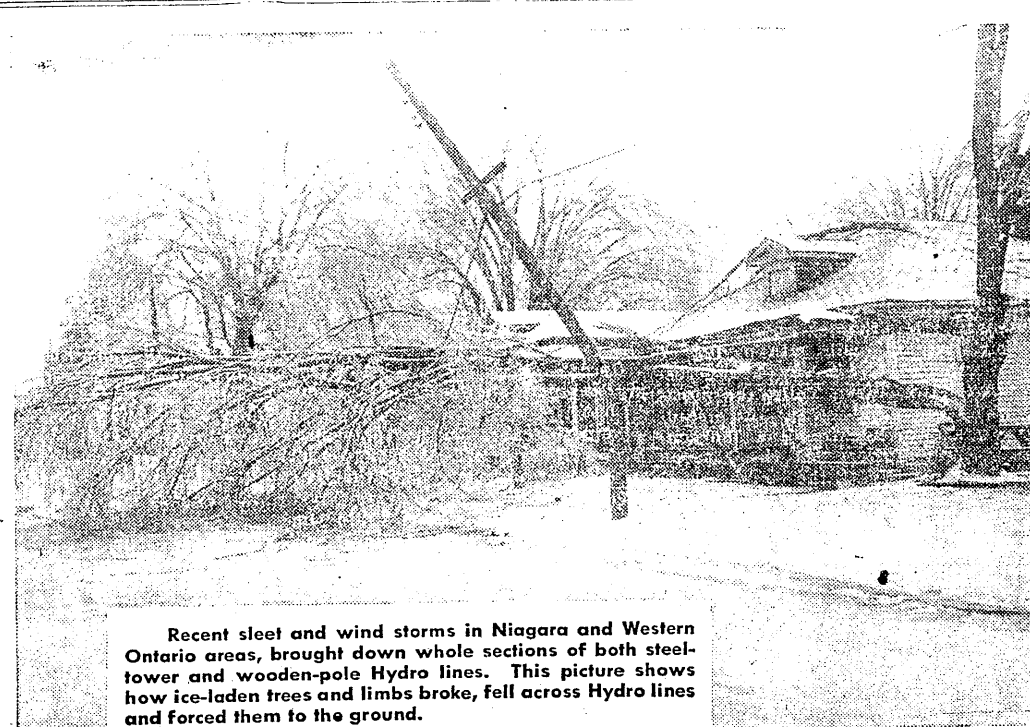

All-over patterns, screen printed in softer blendings of subtle off-shades, make exciting use of feathery plumage motifs. Or the design may be composed of interlocking ribbons or of ribbon, tied in bows and rosettes. Persian prints are also among these favourite for complementing the romantic trend of rusty dresses with rustic bangles.

Even the haberdashery type of handkerchief — the stripes and polka-dots and blocky plaids — look very "new season" by virtue of their color combinations. And they are just what a solid color flannel suit or wool jersey shirtwaist dress needs to flash from its pocket.

Red Clover Seed.

World supply of Red Clover seed in 1946 is only sufficient to meet 60 per cent of world requirements. Canadian grown red clover seed, because of its notably high quality, is preferred by several countries. More than 3 million pounds of the seed produced in Canada in 1946 will be exported.

I believe from my heart that the cause which binds together my peoples and our gallant and faithful allies is the cause of Christian civilization. — King George VI, of England.

Recent sleet and wind storms in Niagara and Western Ontario areas, brought down whole sections of both steel towers and wooden-pole Hydro lines. This picture shows how ice-laden trees and limbs broke, fell across Hydro lines and forced them to the ground.

WINTER RAMPAGE!

When King Winter makes an all-out attack, man can do little but repair the damage as fast as possible. Recent power breaks in Niagara and Western Ontario areas were the direct result of unusual and severe storm conditions.

Because of the flexibility provided by its unified, province-wide organization, Hydro was able to rush emergency repair crews from other parts of Ontario to restore power. Every effort was directed to this end.

To all consumers who suffered in these storm areas, Hydro expresses its thanks and appreciation for their patience and understanding in a difficult and trying situation.

At all times Hydro safeguards service by endeavouring to locate lines free from trees and by tree trimming. Present storm damages illustrate the advisability of these methods.

During this winter period, storms and power shortage present great operating problems for Hydro. Your co-operation in the conserving of power will be of material assistance and much appreciated.

Burial was in Cottam cemetery, the pallbearers being Kenneth Bedell, Raymond Wilton, Earl Alexander, Don Kay, Lewis Brooker and Stanley Noble.

Deceased, a daughter of the late Peter Bedell and Ellen McCarthy, was born in the Township of Gosfield North, on April 13th, 1885, and had lived in the township all her life. She passed away in Grace Hospital, Windsor, on Thursday of last week, to where she had been removed about ten days previous following being seized with a stroke of paralysis.

A brother, Ernest, of Detroit, is the only survivor. A sister, Mrs. Fred Her, and two brothers, George and Henry, all of Gosfield North, predeceased her.

To Rebuild Colchester North Municipal Tel. System.

At a very enthusiastic gathering of over 100 subscribers of the Colchester North Municipal Telephone System, held in the Township Hall, on Thursday afternoon of last week, it was unanimously decided to ask the Township Council to advance the System finances with which to build the telephone system, completely wrecked by the ice and sleet storm of last week.

C. A. Keeley was secretary of the meeting and H. C. Neice, chairman. Ernest Baldwin and Herb Holden were elected commissioners for 1947, and V. W. Jones, auditor, replacing Wm. Andrew, resigned.

While it was thought that it would be impossible to get the required amount of new poles, wires, etc., to rebuild the system properly, it was decided to ask Council to advance funds to stabilize the system until such time as new material is available, and then issue debentures of the township to finally rehabilitate the whole system. It was estimated that it would cost about $3,000 to bring the system in working order.

Cottam Rotary Club Dinner.

Lieut. Richard Bowe, introduced by his father, Hugh Bowe, was the guest speaker at the weekly dinner of the Cottam Rotary Club, on Friday night. He spoke on "Submarine Warfare."

Lieut. Bowe stated he began his naval career at United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., and had served three years on the submarine "U. S. Grevalle" during World War II, mostly in the Pacific area.

Lieut. Bowe said "The submarine was first used in the Civil War, and while it was a very crude apparatus at that time, it was responsible for the sinking of many ships. Today submarines are air-conditioned, 300 feet long, carry a crew of 100 men, with upwards of 24 torpedoes, and have many complicated and very scientific gadgets. They are of steel construction throughout, and will hold up at a depth of 900 ft., but operate best at a depth of 400 feet. The original investment in a submarine is $10,000,000. They carry a torpedo 21 feet long, weighing 2 tons, the cost of which ranges from $15,000 to $20,000 each. The main work of the submarine is to locate the enemy base, and its only protection is to submerge. Its great danger is the depth charges which the enemy drops. The Germans during the war lost over 900 submarines. The Japanese, however, were very slow in their anti-submarine warfare.

One of the great tasks of the submarine during the war was to pick up Air Force men who through combat had to bail out, and in this way over one thousand aviators were saved. Another use was carrying of vital equipment. The submarine is the weapon of the future navy and every air force is planning to use guided bombs which, in probably thirty or forty years, will replace airplanes. The submarine is an insurance for peace," he concluded.

President Hugh K. Ferguson presided, and congratulations of the club were extended to Rotarian Harry W. Baker, who recently celebrated his 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. Webster spoke briefly, contrasting conditions then and now.

Doctor Stephen F. Millen extended the thanks of the club to Lieut. R. Bowe.

John O. Cahill, 1947 County Warden.

John O. Cahill, Reeve of Sandwich
West Township for the past fifteen years, was elected Warden of the County at its inaugural meeting, on

CLEAN HANDS.

Pointing to the care with which a emphasize the need of cleanliness in food handling. Cats' paws are comparable to human hands, they say, and hand cleanliness is a health "must."

Growers and Cannery Must Work Together.

Growers and cannery must work together in a harmonious team to produce the high quality canned fruits and vegetables which the Canadian housewife expects today. A. E. Mudra, of the American Can Company, told the joint convention of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Marketing Board and the Canned Foods Association of Ontario in the Vocational School auditorium, in Chatham.

In a talk on "Quality Evaluation of Raw Products for Canning," Mr. Mudra, a member of Canco's research organization in Maywood, Ill., described the development of tests for accurately determining the moment at which fruits and vegetables should be harvested to insure quality for the consumer.

Other speakers urged the Canadian farmer to stress quality rather than quantity in their products during the coming years if they are to maintain the favourable economic position enjoyed for the past six years. The gathering numbered several hundred from all parts of the Province, was told that over-production in the United States of some lines of vegetables, plus an increasing consumer resistance there, had stepped up consumption in foreign and even domestic markets.

Pointing out that the quality of the raw product determines the maximum quality of the canned food, Mr. Mudra called on growers to continue to produce a raw product of "highest possible initial quality" and on the cannery to "use every available means to prepare and can that product so as to retain its original desirable properties."

Harvesting canning crops at proper maturity has been one of the most important problems facing the grower. Mr. Mudra said, with peas and corn receiving the most attention because of the short time at which they remain at optimum maturity. He described the development of various tests to determine proper harvesting times, ranging from a "thumb-nail" test and a schedule based on the number of days after pea vines bloom, to a "tenderometer," a machine developed by Canco scientists which automatically tests the tenderness of raw peas.

The tenderometer, patents on which have been turned over to the canning industry by the can-making firm on a royalty-free basis, cuts through a batch of test peas with knife-blades and at the same time automatically registers the amount of force required to shear through them, he explained.

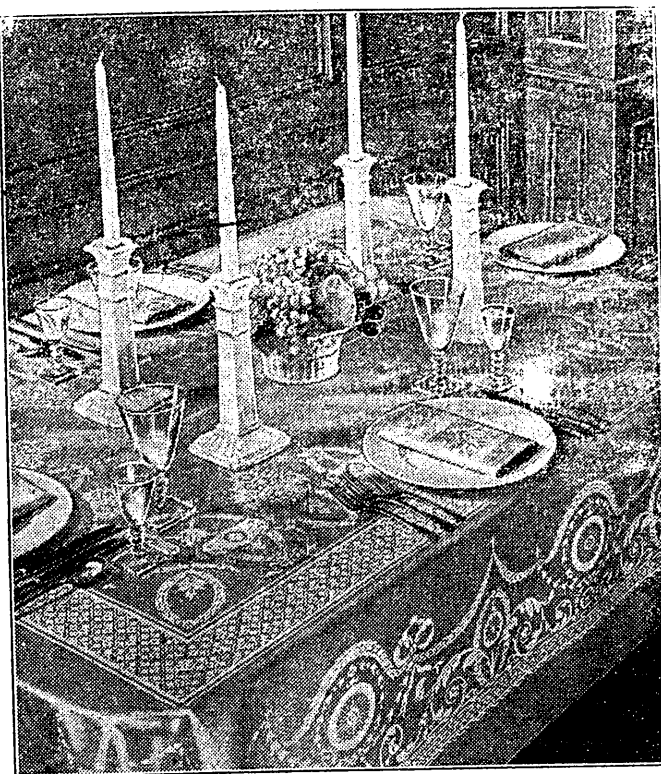

"Extensive tests during the development work," he added, "indicated that the tenderometer provides an accurate and reliable method of evaluating the quality of raw peas, a conclusion since borne out by studies of a number of commercial and governmental laboratories. It has also been used with some success with lima beans and asparagus."

Mr. Mudra also discussed various maturity tests for corn and described studies made by Canco research men to determine the most accurate and practical method for use in modern high-speed canneries.

"Through continued research, further improvements in methods for evaluating the quality of raw products may be expected," he said. "Such research is of vital interest to growers and cannery alike, since both will benefit through improved markets for their products."

Sealed Windows.

Tendency of some people to close windows lightly against the winter elements is frowned upon at Ottawa Health authorities there point out that one can save fuel at the expense of health. Frequent airing of rooms, and adequate ventilation, is advised.

Irish Linen Tablecloths Are Back!

RICHLY patterned, gleaming white Irish linen tablecloths with matching napkins are the first essential of a well planned table linen wardrobe. Like a good basic dress, Irish linen damask takes on a formal look or a casual air depending on the formality or simplicity of the table appointments and decorations. And, because of its unequalled durability, pure Irish linen, now available in stores, is the most economical table linen the homemaker can buy.

Report Progress on New Poultry Breeds.

Further progress is reported on the work of the Poultry Division, Experimental Farms Service, in the creation of new breeds of poultry to meet specific economic requirements. Chief of the breeds in the process of being evolved is what has been called the Large White, a breed possessing: (a) white feathers for ease in breeding to a uniform standard feather colour requirement under commercial conditions; (b) white flesh so that the birds may attain "Milk-fed" grading in so far as skin colour is concerned; (c) fast feathering for ease in plucking and to speed up the moult; (d) white eggs for uniformity in marketing.

With regard to the attainment of this desirable breed the latest annual report of the Dominion Minister of Agriculture states that the Large White, which has been in the process of synthesis for the past eight years, now has reached the stage in its development at which more attention can be given to the body type and shell colour. So far as the work has been mainly limited to the task of establishing purity for skin and feather colour.

The other two breeds of chickens now being developed at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, the Broad-breasted White and the Small White, have progressed still further toward the ideal envisaged for them. The Broad-breasted White is to develop largely into a meat type bird, possessing, however, good egg laying characteristics. The Small White will combine high egg production, standard egg size, and good body type, about a pound less in weight than that of the Leghorn breed.

The shortest way to do many things is to do only one thing at a time—Cecil.

Province-Wide Survey of Accident Reports.

Only nine deaths from traffic accidents have occurred in Ontario during the first half of January this year, according to a province-wide survey of accident reports in the daily press, but other types of traffic accidents continue to mount.

Queried about this toll, a Highway Department spokesman said that January and February are usually the low months of the year for fatal accidents and personal injuries, although the amount of property damage stays high.

"Last January," he said, "42 people were killed compared with 95 last October. While nine deaths so far this year may seem low, more traffic is returning to the roads now that they are clear of snow, and a sudden freeze-up will greatly increase the hazards to drivers and pedestrians."

Chief Constable's Advice.

Ottawa's veteran chief constable, J. P. Downey, recommends these safety resolutions for drivers in 1947: More cautious driving, obeying all traffic laws, signalling intentions to turn left or right, no drinking and driving, right of way for pedestrians even when they are wrong, never driving at a greater speed than conditions of the road and traffic justify, being particularly careful when passing schools and playgrounds.

For pedestrians the Chief urges obeying all traffic lights not walking into traffic from behind parked cars, remembering the motorists' right to use the road, looking both ways before crossing a street, and if you must have a drink, having it only at home and staying there.

$291.45 Every Hour.

Every hour of last January, Ontario citizens lost $291.45 because of traffic accidents, not counting the cost of 733 injuries or the consequences of 42 deaths, according to official police reports kept on file at the Department of Highways.

The total of $216,342 property damage alone was 72% higher than it was in January 1946. A similar increase this year would put Ontario's damage bill for traffic accidents at over $500 per hour.

Motorists renewing their car insurance policies at this time of year will realize how much the accident toll is increasing when they pay this year's higher premiums.

Export Bacon Price Advanced Two Dollars.

The Meat Board announced on January 10th that the price for export bacon will be increased by $2 per 100 pounds of Grade A One Sizeable Wiltshire sides and similar increases for other export bacon produced from hogs slaughtered in inspected packing plants on and after Monday, January 13th. This increase will be in effect until September 1, when an additional increase of $2 will be made and continued through 1948.

This announcement implements the statement made by the Rt. Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, on January 2nd, that part of the increased price which the United Kingdom Ministry of Food will pay for Canadian bacon would "go into effect in the near future."

At that time, Mr. Gardiner said that the U. K. Ministry of Food had agreed to advance its bacon contract price from $25 to $29 per hundred pounds as an incentive to increase Canadian bacon production. The full benefit of this $4 increase becomes effective on September 1st, 1947, he said, when it will represent an increase of about $5 per hog over four prices based on the present agreement.

Saving the Unions.

By R. J. Deschamps

I did not write this story. It came to me from a Western farmer, one I have known for years. He is right. No one group can be entrusted with special privileges, if this be done the members of the group will soon become their privilege as rights. The next step will be to interfere with the rights of others. R. J. Deschamps

"There is no doubt about it. The lawlessness of the unions and their irresponsible today, is due to the labor legislation of the last decade.

"Only four years ago the unionists in this country were afraid to ask for a closed shop because they thought that no government would tolerate such a thing. Today they are openly demanding a closed shop and the check-off. They have grown bold because they have learned that governments are afraid to refuse their demands.

"Every unjust concession they obtain increases their contempt for the government that grants it. I am not blaming governments for this. Public opinion supported the unions in all clearly defined, pickets should be licensed and only enough licensed to do the lawful work of picketing. It is an old saying that, 'the people lose' should be an offence to join a picket line."

Foreign Trade.

All who recognize the place which external trade holds in our Canadian economy and way of life are happy about the new publication issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce under the title "Foreign Trade." The new publication will take the place of the "Commercial Intelligence Journal" which has been highly rated as a source of trade information. The first issue dated January 4th, carried a message from Canada's trade commissioner in every important trading country in the world with an interesting picture of the trading possibilities and practices.

The second issue lists 170 products which were imported for token imports into the United Kingdom in 1946 and which are eligible for 20% quotas in 1947. The list includes canned pork and beans, rolled or flaked peas, pickles, wallpaper, Bristol board and many other items of interest to Canada's farmers, fishermen, lumbermen and other workers.

Definite Upward Trend.

"Foreign Trade" shows that Canada has achieved a definite upward trend in her exports in recent months and the further possibilities give promise of continued prosperity for Canadians. For instance in the five months from July to November, the monthly average increase over the previous five month period is 30 million dollars. For the first eleven months of last year the value of our exports was well over two billion dollars, of which 65% was to the United Kingdom and the United States.

Our Fishing Industry.

The full record of Canada's fishermen during wartime is now in view and their record of service in feeding a hungry and troubled world is a proud one. Over 4 billion pounds of fish caught and marketed during the war of which over 2% billion lbs. were exported. In addition to this huge quantities of valuable and necessary non-food fish products such as meal and oil were provided. The perils were great but to their high credit, it could not deter fishermen from going regularly about their part in the national war effort.

Wet Surface Paint.

That the surface to be painted should always be dry when applying fresh coats of paint to the built buildings is a golden rule of farmers. There is, however, one exception. When cement water paints are to be used, the cement surface should first be thoroughly dampened to reduce surface suction and to harden the paint. Every cement water paint is not in that category, so that care should be taken to follow the manufacturer's directions closely before applying the paint.

that the shock to the root system is reduced to that of heavy pruning and by the end of the first growing season the leaf area is very close to normal or the age of the tree.

On the other hand the well-established methods of top-working (top grafting) call for the cutting away of most of the tree top and it is usually at least six years before this top can be regrown to its original size. Further a serious shock to the tree root system often results and top-worked trees do bear fruit, the apples of the first two or three crops are oversized and "punky," typical of fruit grown on rapidly growing juvenile wood. Full information on top-working is given in the bulletin, "Frameworking Fruit Trees," by R. J. Filmon, Dominion Experimental Station, Kentville, N.S. A copy of the bulletin may be obtained by writing to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Girls' Sports.
On Friday, January 17th, a full house witnessed a very exciting game of basketball, when Leamington came to Essex. Leamington has always been a big obstacle in the path of the locals, but the Juniors went out fighting. The teams were both quick-moving, so the score stayed close. At half time the score was 14 to 10 in favour of Leamington. During the last period Essex kept right after the visitors and at the finish were tied 22 all. This game is the answer to so many rough and squeaky voices.

Mary Lou McDermott scored 10 points, Maiba Billing and Ruth Harrison 6 points each.

It has been mentioned that Leamington is a big obstacle. Well, you do have to admit they are tall. So the senior found, when the Leamington girls made about 53 points. All the shots were taken close to the basket, out of reach of the shorter Essex girls.

Pat McCreery made 4 points and Cora Morris 2. The final score was Leamington 53, Essex 6.

But cheer up everybody, and on to the next game — Kingsville at Essex, January 31st.

Boys' Sports.
On Friday, January 17th, Essex met Leamington in a second set of games, to determine winners. Although Essex won from Kingsville last week, they were defeated by Leamington, the juniors 19 to 12 and the seniors 57 to 20.

The juniors battled hard all through their game but were on the short end of a 19-12 score at the finish. Loebach scored 4 points, Cade 4 and Johnston 4.

The seniors started out in great form, but Leamington came from behind and snowed them under by a score of 57 to 20.

An exhibition game will be played with Leamington on January 24th.

Come out and root for your home team.

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Pte. Hubert Boultinghouse, of the Essex Scottish Regiment, who was reported to have died in prison camp Stalag 344, Germany, on January 24th, 1944.

As we look upon your picture, Sweet memories we recall. Of a face so full of sunshine, A smile for one and all.

Though your smile has gone forever, And your memory you are dear, Loved, remembered, longed for always, Bringing many a silent tear.

—Sadly missed by sisters Edna and Helen, and brother-in-law, Fred.

In proud and cherished remembrance of our dear son, Pte. J. Hubert Boultinghouse, of Essex Scottish Regiment, who was last seen at Stalag 344, Germany, January 24th, 1944.

We miss you Bert, we've always missed you, since you've been away. And all those thoughtful ways of yours, we think of, every day.

You were smiling bravely when you left, to go across the sea. Where men were giving up their lives, You told us in your letters dear, that you were weary.

Yet not too tired to think of us, in war torn lands so dreary. It's just three years ago today, God took you by the hand, And you held God's, as both of you walked to the better land.

We do not know how, when or why you died, But someday we'll understand.

Never to be forgotten, and forever held closely within our thoughts.—Mother and Dad.

U. S. May Take Ration Off Sugar.

A report from Washington states that the nation's housewives may be able to tear up their sugar ration coupons before Easter according to W. J. Wall Street Journal.

"There's a strong possibility," continues the article, "that the new Congress will free housewives from sugar rationing after April 1st."

But industrial users of sugar — bakeries, candy, ice cream and soft drink makers, the food and drug trade — don't expect full decontrol before the end of 1947.

Nursing as a Profession.

Owing to the urgent need for nurses in our hospitals, homes, health centres, and in industry, the Dominion Department of Labour is directing a "National" appeal to Canadian women to consider "nursing as a profession."

For Excellence, the Viscountess Alexander, is assisting the Department in this respect, and will speak to the women of Canada over a network of Canadian stations on the subject indicated above. The address will be featured on the Dominion Labour Department radio programme "The People Ask" beginning January 19th and will be heard across Canada during that week.

In commenting on the acute shortage of nurses, during the same programme, Arthur McNamara, Dominion Deputy Minister of Labour stated in part:

"This appeal is a 'National' appeal, and every local office of the National Employment Service throughout the Dominion will support the campaign."
